CHINESE PREMIER OTHERS WOUNDED BY AN ASSASSIN

Wang Ching-Wei And Associate Regarded as Pro-Japanese

SERIOUSLY HURT

Assailant Believed to be Reporter From News Agency

Nanking, China, Nov. 1.—An assassin's bullet today wounded Premier Wang Ching-Wei, generally regarded as a pro-Japanese, and three other officials of the Chinese Nationalist Government, gathered considering Japan's advance in North China.

The assassin, believed by authorities to be a Chinese identified with the Caloonee faction critical of the Premier, who has been shot by a bullet from a pistol held by Wang Ching-Wei, 50, was struck by at least three bullets and was removed to the central hospital in a critical condition.

His principal aide, Tseng Chun-Min, Vice-Minister of Interior also was near death.Ang Chi, former President of the Republic and Kam Wai-Ching, chief of the Political Bureau of General Headquarters of Kai-Shek's headquarters, also were wounded.

The Premier's assailant was identified, authority announced, as Sun Mingh-Sun; reporter for a Chinese news agency. The officials alleged Sun used a camera as a shield for his pistol in the attack.

Crowds Armed Them

The capital took on the aspect of an armed camp. Streets were filled with policemen carrying rifles.

Speculation was rife to the effect the shooting might be the first blow by proponents of resistance to Japan who had become increasingly in evidence recently after opposition of new Japanese pressure on north China.

The meeting of th econ'ral executive committee which will fill Dr. Hell, is expected to deal with the question of whether to oppose or to acquiesce to Japan's demands in north China.

Photographs were about to be taken, when a Chinese standing with a group of spectators, shouted in fluent Chinese. Wang Ching-Wei opened fire on the Premier.

The correspondent witnessed the attempted assassination— a scene of wildest confusion followed by the sharp rattle of the pistol fire. The crowds began to return the fire.

While the wounded were carried to the hospital, a body, believed to be that of the assassin, was found sprawled nearby.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was endangered by the bullets as was President Lin Sen, Marshal Yen Hsi-Shan and Shanghai and other most officials of the Nationalist government.

The Premier's condition is satisfactory, but he has been seriously grazed but a third is still embedded in the back.

Many Hunters Out for The Pheasant Shoot

St. Catharines, Ont., Nov. 1.—(CP)—About 1,000 hunters invaded farms and bushlands of Niagara district today for the opening of a two-day pheasant season. Birds were reported scarce in the northern part of Lincoln but they were more plentiful in the Vineland-Jordan area.

Sound of Earthquake Like Huge Conflagration Startles Rural Folk

Whole Country Awakened From Sleep as Beds Swayed and Swayed

HILLS BEAR BRUNT

Numerous Stories Gathered of Experiences in This District

Belleville and district's most severe earthquake roused sleeping citizens shortly after one o'clock this morning.

The sudden and unexpected tremor which lasted approximately one half minute shook homes and buildings, toppled bricks from their moorings in one chimney on a home on Bleecker avenue, rattled dishes in pantries and cupboards and shook beds with sleeping occupants in bedrooms.

Fortunately business blocks and the taller buildings in the downtown section of the city were undamaged. Not even a crack had developed in the fine city hall here building, the tall examination by officials disclosed this morning.

Hills Feel Shock

The disturbance which rumbled across Canada from the head of Lake Superior to the Bay of Fundy was felt nearly on both the east and west hills in the city. While scores of persons of homes in the lower section of Belleville between the two hills declared themselves almost intelligently by Alex Ingoldsby, editor of the Intelligencer, several street Photographers reported the shocks severe enough to have taken a shaky hand to keep. Bleecker avenue residents in the vicinity of the attached by the heavy earth shocks.

To the northernmost limits of Hastings county the disturbance extended, arousing residents of the back country with its intensity. Reports from the north indicated that the shake was accompanied by a dull rumbling sound, clearly audible. In a statement to The Ontario Intelligencer this county the disturbance as Reeve of Elzevir, declared that many residents were awakened by the early shocks and then by the phenomenal and curious noise which led many to believe that their barns had caught afire. Several were so impressed that personal inspection of outbuildings were made.

Most Severe Shock.

The earthquake shaded into its significance the slight tremblors felt in the district a week or two ago when the force of the quake was merely enough to rattle a few dishes. It was the first actual earth shake in this section since the one of April 4, 1902 which is recorded in Canadian history as being the time when "the trees were drunk and danced", according to the Red Indians of that period. The shock extended through the St. Lawrence Valley as far as Lake Ontario.

Water, gas and sewer mains underground in the city also escaped damage, although inspection of opened joints and cracks were being made by officials of the local Public Utilities Commission this morning.

The large stand pipe of the local waterworks department emerged unscathed from the shake. Even the taller chimneys on local manufacturing concerns emerged without cracks or openings in the brickwork.

Monuments Undamaged

Grave stones in the cemeteries were believed to have been left undisturbed following brief inspection by superintendents of the cemeteries made this morning.

Some of the quake is believed to have originated far underground from the opening which is given to silly settling. It is known that a great fissure fell in the Hastings district of Ontario, but more particularly in the St. Lawrence Valley where the disturbance was felt most from time to time.

Shortly after the first earth tremors had passed over the local police station was besieged with calls from anxious citizens aroused from their slumbers and curious over the phenomenon.

"We fell it here, too, but we don't know much more about it than you do and we know is that there has been an earthquake, a slight one," operators replied to the numerous calls.

"Central" Deluged.

Central switchboard of the local exchange was deluged with calls from citizens who were awakened by the shocks and many of them were curious to know what had happened. Many were frightened by the earthquake but fortunately the chicken thieves must have observed Mr. Coon upon his awakening or perhaps were frightened off by the earthquake itself. At any rate the coop door was open and the chickens that were not stolen had taken to flight and were climbing at large around the barnyard, causing a disturbance. When Mr. Coon arrived on the scene No clues were left by the robbers.

Mr. Crake, now a visitor to the city was employed at the time of the earthquake concern, with his office situated in one of the upper stories of a tall building.

"First there was a distinct rumble as of thunder. Then came the first intimation of any quake. Then the chairs started to vibrate. The small shock, pictures danced on the wall and even my desk started hopping and then, suddenly, I was thought of all of us was to get out in the open. Then, as the earthquake began to be worse off in the open, hemmed in by the tall buildings which would be inside our own place. Big cracks developed in the walls. The vibrations were continued. Then plaster started to fall. Some of the walls and ceilings also screamed and the men, even, looked pretty blue. Then it was all over—finished.

Second Quake Starts

"Then, tremblers came after a little while and we got a breathing spell. Now was our chance to get outside but we took it too late. We had left the building the earth started rocking again. It felt as if the whole bottom of the universe were dropping out. No one can describe that utter terror people feel—the absolute helplessness—when the earth itself decides to go on a rampage. You think to yourself 'what can we do?' Then you think, 'maybe this is the end!' Will the whole bottom of the earth drop from under and send us a mile or so down some dark pit?"

Many Fires Start

Scores of fires had started in various parts of the city and fire brigades answered calls from all trucks. Panic gripped the people in many sections and many outside They had no fixed idea of where they were going, but something like the big fire at Trenton when the refugees took to the roads and kept going.

"And once you have been through an earthquake there is always the feeling of insecurity; that dread that it may be followed by another. The solid ground is not safe. Even the sky seems to be nothing. Roofs and trees seem to

REV. B. F. BYERS PASSES AT AGE 63 OF BRIEF ILLNESS

Rector of Stirling And Frankford Parish For 23 Years

The announcement of the death of the Rev. Benjamin Francis Byers, M.A., which occurred at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, in this city shortly after ten o'clock this Friday morning will fall like a shock. It will be received with deep feelings of regret by the clergy of the Church of England in the Diocese of Ontario and by the members of the many parishes in the County of Hastings County, particularly in Stirling and Frankford, where for nearly twenty-eight years he served as rector of the two parishes. In his parishes Mr. Byers had lost an earnest and devout member of her ministry. He will be sincerely missed by all in deep sympathy and human understanding, who spent his life in the service of his fellowmen. His personal ancestry was large in this district and to many persons he was a true friend.

About three years ago Mr. Byers resigned his charge of the parishes of Stirling and Frankford owing to ill health and since that time he and Mrs. Byers have resided with the latter's brother, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne at St. Thomas' Church Rectory in this city. When health permitted he assisted the rector of St. Thomas' Church at the services from Pentecost and also in the conducting of the weekly service at St. Paul's church, which is a part of St. Thomas' parish. The Rev. Mr. Byers's assistance in this way was much appreciated by the Rev. Mr. Payne and the parishioners.

The late Rev. Benjamin Francis Byers, M.A., was in his 63rd year and was born at Maitland, Ont., his parents being the late Rev. John and Charles Patterson Byers. He was educated at the schools in Maitland and Brockville and at Trinity College, Toronto, from which college he later received his B.A. and M.A. In the year 1898 he was made a Deacon by His Grace the late Archbishop Lewis of Diocese of Ontario. In the following year he was ordained to the priesthood by the same Archbishop. For a few years he was rector of the parish of Consecon, Prince Edward County, later being appointed rector of St. Paul's Church, Stirling, and Trinity Church, Frankford. In these two parishes he served for over twenty-eight years and up until the time of his resignation about three years ago. Fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order, the I.O.O.F. and the Orange Order.

Surviving him are his widow, and her one sister, Mrs. Beauchamp Payne, Belleville, Mrs. Dorothy Brough, Brockville, and one brother, Mr. Jos. Patterson Byers, Maitland, Brockville. Funeral arrangements are announced elsewhere in this paper, will take place at St. Thomas' Church on Monday afternoon next. Interment will be made at Maitland, Ont. The sympathy of many friends of the family are kindly asked to omit flowers.

FARMER HURT IN BANKING CAR

Port Hope, Nov. 1.—Engaged in cranking a car, R. J. Ashton, Hope township, well digger, sustained a fracture of both legs and five broken ribs when the engine backfired, throwing him into the uprooted car into a plowed field. At Port Hope Hospital his condition is regarded as serious.

Half Cat, Half Rabbit Eats Lettuce, Hamburg

Stubby, half cat and half rabbit, a pet who shares as much partiality to a meal of lettuce leaf as she does a meal of fish, cream, liver or minced steak, and as curious in appearance as an Alice in Wonderland creature or strange creatures, now owned by Mrs. J. G. Lamarche, of Kendrick-Thompson Avenue, Ottawa, is the result of a cross between a cat and a rabbit, according to its peculiar rabbit-like habits intermixed with a generous sprinkling of genuine feline characteristics. In the daytime the bunny-cat is fond of rambling through the nearby woods. At night it takes on the singular appearance of a mouse catcher on prowl.

The fore quarters of the animal are those of a cat, but its hind quarters are rabbit, including a cotton tail. It is noted for its peculiar leaping action of the rabbit on its hind legs and crouches typical of a rabbit. Its fore feet, or ears are cat ears and its fur is half cat, half rabbit, of soft brownish texture.

Although fond of fresh lettuce which it nibbles daintily, Stubby will on occasion show a decided liking for a saucer of fresh milk which it will lap in dainty manner when in its mistress calls.

"No, it couldn't part with Stubby," declared Mrs. Lamarche, when questioned.

Buildings Sway, Chimneys Weave Residents Run from Houses in Alarm Heaviest Quake in History Recorded

As Earth Tremor Hits Province

(By the Canadian Press)

Reaching as far eastward as Canada's earthquake were various, but newspapermen were agreed that the palm for originality went to the woman who, shortly before dawn, telephoned a morning paper office.

"I'm a Conservative," she said. "And I think it must have been the change of government, that caused this thing."

A somewhat flustered man telephoned the police department a few moments after the tremors shook Ottawa.

"Was that an earth tumor I just felt?" he demanded.

Reports showed the shock was felt in communities from the head of the Great Lakes to the Bay of Fundy.

At Sudbury, in addition to the other excitement, prisoners became hysterical in their cells and for a while police had their hands full.

In Brampton, walls of the Brampton Woollen Mills were cracked by the tremors. Citizens said the quake lasted about 10 seconds.

Employees in Windsor's $1,000,000 Federal building were routed from bed by the immense sigucture swaying.

Dance Interrupted

Eight couples at the Polo Hotel in Sudbury, Ont., was disrupted, the Hallowe'en revelers rushing into the streets when the building began to shake. Mining officials made a quick check, but found no shock had rent fois underground and that workings and mines knew nothing of the quake.

Damage was limited everywhere to cracked ceilings, broken dishes and, in Toronto at least, broken water mains. Numerous brick chimneys were toppled. It was believed the damage would have been considerably greater had the shocks lasted many more seconds.

Residents in the western Canada experienced a disturbance to be compared with that of the Hastings quake, that caused widespread panic. Thousands of telephone calls poured into newspaper offices from citizens, who thought their fears were confirmed by the first full reverberations of an explosion.

Ring Lost Seven Years Ago Found on Root

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 1.—(CP)—Seven years ago Mrs. Felix Rodberg of Northbrook, about 40 miles north of here, lost her wedding ring.

Mrs. Rodberg's children brought home from school a pair of the horse radish they had pulled up in the yard near the house. The roots were clean through Mrs. Rodberg's wedding ring.

Quints Sleep Soundly Through Earth Tremor

Callander, Ont., Nov. 1.—(CP)—It takes more than an earthquake to waken the Dionne quintuplets.

While the tremor was felt throughout the eastern part of the continent about the hospital home where the quints babies sufficient to frighten the nurses as to the safety of their charges, the children slept soundly. Wakened by the first shock of the quake the nurses ran to the cots of the quints and remained there until all was quiet near the northland outpost.

"Severe Earthquake is a Terrifying Experience" Says California Visitor

Mr. W. T. Craike Tells of Impressions of Quake on Coast

MANY LIVES LOST

Panic Grips The People Who Rush Around Aimlessly And in Confusion

"The utter, awful helplessness of anyone who is in the midst of a real earthquake can not be appreciated unless it has been experienced personally," declared Mr. W. T. Craike now visiting this city, relative to the recent earthquakes which rocked California and destroyed life and property in that district on Tuesday.

When buildings rocked and shook, first there was a distant rumble, then and falling timbers and stone work and chimneys and the pandemonium set and thundered to earth in California, killing and maiming scores,

"First there was a distinct rumble as of thunder. Then came the first intimation of any quake. Then the chairs started to vibrate. The small shock, pictures danced on the wall and even my desk started hopping and then, suddenly, I was thought of all of us was to get out in the open. ## Quake Saves Some Chicks But Thieves Get 90 Birds

"Its an ill wind that blows nobody good. Even the old saw and proverb came into effect quite prominently early this morning, when the earthquake struck Ottawa. It was this coop the robbers were operating in when Mr. Coon was awakened by the tremor of his home during last night's earthquake. Unfortunately the chicken thieves must have observed Mr. Coon upon his awakening or perhaps were frightened off by the earthquake itself. At any rate the coop door was open and the chickens that were not stolen had taken to flight and were climbing at large around the barnyard, causing a disturbance. When Mr. Coon arrived on the scene No clues were left by the robbers.

Mr. Coon's loss, however, was not as great as it might have been, for the robbers had disappeared under the cover of darkness long before the arrival of the police. Mr. Coon has two large chicken coops on his farm, one of which houses 90 birds and it was this coop the robbers were operating in when Mr. Coon was awakened by the tremor of his home during last night's earthquake. Unfortunately the chicken thieves must have observed Mr. Coon upon his awakening or perhaps were frightened off by the earthquake itself. At any rate the coop door was open and the chickens that were not stolen had taken to flight and were climbing at large around the barnyard, causing a disturbance. When Mr. Coon arrived on the scene No clues were left by the robbers.

Impressions of Quake On Cities in Ontario

Galt—This district experienced its first earth shock in about ten years when the most severe tremor since can be recalled. Many, however, were unaware of the shock.

In the Valley where buildings are set on solid limestone, even pottery on shelves failed to indicate the shock. However, on the hills it was quite noticeable, rocking beds, furniture, pictures and rattling windows.

Every patient but one in the hospital was awakened by the shocks. There were two distinct shocks, one following the second the most severe.

There were no reports of damage.

North Bay—Severe earth tremors shook North Bay about one o'clock and while damage was in the main confined to a few bricks knocked off chimneys, many North Bay residents spent a sleepless night, their nerves upset.

Swastika, Ont. — Terrific earth tremors at 1.15 o'clock this morning accompanied by a rushing of wind awakened the residents of this district. It was one of the most severe earthshocks ever experienced in the north. Pictures were shaken from walls and alarmed citizens rushed from their homes in various stages of night attire.

Kirkland Lake—The earthquake lasted about a minute here, houses being shaken. No damage was done to mine workings.

Timmins — A severe earthquake was felt here and lasted five minutes. No damage was reported.

Iroquois Falls—Local residents were awakened early today by the quake. Dishes and pictures rattled and floors creaked in real spooky Hallowe'en style.

Listowel—Listowel was shaken by the earthquake but no damage was done. Furniture and dishes were rattled.

Kingston—Breaking of dishes falling off shelves was reported today after the small tremor at 1.15 a.m. A house on the city outskirts attributed to the earthquake. The chimney fell with a small noise and came down and fire started with the resultant damage.

St. Thomas—Police officers last night did not know there had been earth tremors until Chief Kitchen called on the phone to enquire "Who's rocking the town?" Nervous citizens kept police answering calls for the next two hours. At the Elgin House of Industry, Old Folks' Home and Memorial Hospital the tremors caused alarm. Police Sergt. McCulley reports his neighbour, Jos. Smith and his son, were thrown to the floors armed with guns when here began to cackle. A guest at a hotel fell out of bed.

Sault Ste. Marie—The quake was felt here by a large number of people. China rattled on shelves and pictures were shaken on the walls but no damage was reported.

Welland—The earthquake that included the Niagara District in its itinerary early today was felt here about two minutes after the reception of smashed windows, crockery and furniture resulted. Great damage was caused. Houses and buildings shook for at least a minute. The force of the disturbance was placed at 1.02 a.m. Citizens asleep were in a terrified condition when their beds slid about the room.

Stratford—Windows rattled, pictures on walls swayed, dishes clattered and furniture moved out of place about 1.15 o'clock this morning following a rushing of wind.

Present Autumn Poor For Mushroom Hunters

The present fall season may be a delightful one for residents of the city as a whole, but to the perennial mushroom hunters, who usually haunt the city's parks and bushvarts in the early hours of the morning, when conditions are favorable, the past month or so, generally the best of the season, proves the delicacies has been a complete loss. Mushrooms are more scarcer than hen's teeth, it was reported.

According to one well known naturalist, mushrooms, like fruit trees, have a periodical crop. Every two or three consecutive years there may be an abundance, then a complete lack for a period of perhaps the next year or so the crop will be sparse. This year, he says, is the off year in the least years when the crop is small.

Add this to the fact, that the fall season has been an abnormally dry one and a condition has developed which has been the despair of many mushroom hunters who annually add considerably to their often meagre income, by the sale or donation of the mushrooms and their sale to local restaurants and hotels.

Belief that the fire was of incendiary origin owing to the fact the the outbreak of the fire was declared to be simultaneous at different locations in the building was voiced by Chief Lynch.

POLICE COURT

A lengthy police court docket, consisting of many minor cases, confronted Magistrate E. J. Butler in local police court hall at the Court House today. Some local men and one female pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication, while the minimum fines being imposed in each case.

Delbert Crawford, local youth, pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking, entering and theft. His case was enlarged for one week. Crawford, along with two other local youths, was arrested by police, clothes Officer Fred Izard yesterday charged with stealing quantities of goods from a Hillside Street residence. The case will be thoroughly aired next week.

The three lads, all youths, were found guilty of indecency. They were arrested at a dance in Shannonville early this morning by Traffic Officer Sam Bryans and Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien. They were lodged in the police cells all night. One of the accused pleaded not guilty, however, and stood trial. The magistrate committed satisfied the Magistrate of his guilt. Following the submission of the accused man's testimony Crown Attorney Gerow cross-examined. "Now had better sit down before you fall down, young man." Prior to finding the youth guilty His Worship cautioned his ever on the accused and remarked— "are you sure you're guilty? The conventional drunk fine" was imposed in all three cases - and costs levied.

Charged with assaulting his wife and causing her actual bodily harm, Clarence Denville, Deseronto, pleaded guilty and was given six months in the Ontario Reformatory. "You have been warned about the striking of your wife and did not heed that warning. Guilty as charged," was His Worship's reply.

Two charges under the Highway Traffic Act and a case in the U.P.A. court terminated the proceedings at the noon hour.

TEST VALIDITY OF LEGISLATION

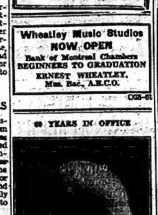
Opinion of Supreme Court Asked on Measures Passed

OTTAWA, Nov. 1 (CP)—Justice Department officials were preparing today a reference for immediate submission to the Supreme Court of Canada on the constitutionality of major legislation enacted at the last session of Parliament, the Administration were judgments of the court would be rendered before the Dominion-Provincial Conference convenes here the latter part of this month.

Seven measures will be the subject of the reference and the court will be asked to give its opinion on certain questions which have been raised regarding the validity.



In an announcement Minister of Justice Lapointe last night said the Acts which would be the question of reference were: The Unemployment and Social Insurance Act; The Dominion Trade and Industry Act; The Natural Products Marketing Act (1934) and Amendments; an Act to amend the Criminal Code to supplement the intentions of the Trade and Industry Act providing penalties for price-cutting in contravention of the Act; the Minimum Wage Act; the limitation of hours of labor Act, and the weekly day of rest in Industrial Undertakings' Act.

Another announcement much earlier yesterday was the appointment of Hon. Vincent Massey as Canadian High Commissioner in London to succeed Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, whose resignation has been accepted. Because of the design of the Canadian Government that a number of important matters be disposed of without delay with the British administration, Mr. Massey has consented to leave for London at the end of next week, probably Friday.

FROLICKERS DO LITTLE DAMAGE ON HALLOWE'EN

Windows, Lights, Stop Signs Escape Usual Depredations

HALLS CROWDED

Three damaged stop street signs as contrasted with sixty odd broken and bent last year.

Only four police calls as against dozens received from all parts of the city on the same evening last year.

Damage practically nil as reported by local police and heads of the various municipal departments. Only in the case of a few street lights did revellers distinguish the evening by property damage.

Reports indicate the smoke of last evening's Hallowe'en frolic in this city conducted without the usual scars of broken windows, damages to homes and residences and public buildings. Instead hundreds of gaily dressed paraders thronged the streets from dusk until midnight mainly throughout the downtown section, police, aided by special deputies, did little more than ride on street corners and look on. Their services were not needed.

In fact, according to Chief of Police Kidd, the evening was entered in his official records as the most orderly in local history.

One tomb stone, a small one, was tipped over in the yard of the Moore Marble shop on the corner of Pinnacle and Bridge Streets.

Gaiety Reigns.

Boys dressed in all kinds and girls dressed as boys. Older folk imitated younger ones, and youths suddenly took on the walk and appearance of grandmothers and grandfathers. Not in years have public dance halls and gatherings been as crowded with the masquerader as on last evening. Dance parties also contributed largely to keeping roaming spirits within doors, safe from danger. In the Y. M. C. A., Johnstone's ballroom, the Moose Auditorium and elsewhere wedged masses of humanity entered into the spirit of the evening. Colorful were the costumes displayed and many were the prizes given out for the best costumed dancers.

Even on traffic crowded Front street even the usual accidents were noted for their absence, which contributed in no small measure to the unqualified success of the evening.

Sidelights on The Quake

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Moving the police headquarters because of earthquakes has become a simple matter.

After being forced to abandon two buildings, Chief of Police Roger Smith ordered his offices into a large passenger bus and parked it on a vacant lot.

NEW YORK.—How fast does an earthquake travel?

Buffalo, where the University of Canisius apparently had the Seismo, graph nearest the epicentre, reported the first shock at 2:06.45 a.m., E.S.T. It reached Ann Arbor, Mich., at 1:06.15 and St. John, N.B. at 1:10, New York City felt it at 1:06.30.

PITTSBURGH.—The big safe at Dumont Hospital is anchored in bed rock. The earthquake shook it, opened its inner doors but left the outer door undisturbed.

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Long Island residents demanded police action because the hens cackled, the owners telephoned police, thieves were in the chicken coops. Patrol cars raced about in vain.

NEW YORK.—The quake was nautical.

Lebert Steinkirk, commerce department official in Washington, D.C., shook my house from stem to stern."

A Plainfield, N.J., resident: "I felt a gentle upsurging of my house, like the lifting of a ship on a swelling sea."

Ruth Hastings, Telegraph Company employee in Washington: "Everything seemed to move in eyes".

Scores of persons in many States: "Oooh, I'm seasick."

New York, E. S. Graham was not fooled when his bed "swayed from north to south'. He cannot

BUILDINGS SWAY

No One Injured

Several hours after the quake, not a single building had been reported either in Canada or the United States. Miss Ida Toffmeyer was thrown down a flight of stairs in the Herald building in Hamilton, Ont., but was unhurt.

Frank O'Donnell of the Dominion Meteorological Bureau, Toronto, said the tremors were the sharpest ever felt in the city.

"It must have been a very severe earthquake," he said, "because, although quakes are recorded on our seismograph every day, Toronto is out of the earthquake belt and it is rare indeed, that we feel tremors here.

"North of the St. Lawrence River there is a fault in the structure of the earth, and that seems to be the most likely place for it to be centred."

Mr. O'Donnell said it seemed to him that the quake lasted for about 15 seconds. The last severe tremors felt here were about eight or nine years ago, but they were not as severe as the early tooks.

Ceiling Collapses

Toronto, Nov. 1.—(CP)—Chimneys toppled over, ceilings fell, gas mains burst and windows were broken in the brief but severe earthquake here early today. No one was injured, so far as could be learned, in the worst shock in the city's history.

A kitchen ceiling in the Elizmont apartments, Roncesvalles Avenue, collapsed but the room was not occupied. Ceilings and walls in other buildings were cracked. A chimney tumbled from the roof of Conway's private hospital on Brunswick Avenue. Another chimney crashed on Dundas street and narrowly missed two pedestrians.

At Long Branch, in suburban Toronto, it was reported a gas main had burst under pressure of the

$500 Cash and Many Other Prizes to be Given Away Free

Biggest Campaign of Its Kind Ever Attempted Here

Forty-nine local merchants have joined together to put over a Community Boosting Campaign that promises to be one of the biggest things of its kind ever attempted in Belleville. $500.00 will be given the winner of the campaign. The total value of the prizes amounts to over $1300.00.

The campaign will open on Saturday morning, November 2 and continue for five weeks, closing on Saturday, December 7th, at 9 p.m.

The list of major prizes, rules of contest and sponsoring merchants are all shown on the double page advertisement in this paper.

For every cent spent at the various business places taking part in the campaign, whether in payment of goods purchased or the payment of old accounts, one or more votes will be given. The number of votes depends on certain circumstances, which the purchaser may have credited to themselves or give them to their favorite contestant. There are also many interesting ways in which the contestants can acquire votes for themselves.

Every Wednesday will be free vote day. Contestants will then be able to receive at all stores, large blocks of votes from their supporter by merely registering at these places. The standing of the contestants will be posted each day in all the forty-nine stores.

The campaign headquarters are at 208 Front street, where the various prizes will be displayed to the public. Come to headquarters to-day so that you can get a full explanation as to how to become a contestant. Every contestant will have an equal chance to win the $500.00. Get started as the campaign lasts only 31 days.—Adv.

York Township's water-tank were jolted off the structure. Three nearby sand they saw the tank's shadow moving on the ground as it shook.

Telephone lines were swamped with calls from all over the province. No great damage was reported.

By RONALD DIXON

(Copyright 1935, By The Associated Press)

New York, Nov. 1.—The East's most serious earthquake in decades rolled across 17 States and three Canadian provinces early today but the damage was trifling.

Thousands of persons fled from their beaming homes, many of them in night clothes, as they feared a temblor such as wrought havoc at Helena, Mont.

The quake apparently centred in Canada, a short distance north of Lake Ontario. It caused the most damage in Western Ontario. United States cities from Albany to Buffalo sturdy buildings were swayed.

Swinging mirrors and clattering dishes were reported from the Bay of Quinte to Lake Michigan, from Canada's capital to the district of Columbia.

As far south as Washington, Lafrabee Sinclair, transportation assistant to the secretary of Commerce Roper, was thrown from his bed.

The tremblors—there were two major shocks about minutes apart—completed a triangle of earthquakes on the east coast.

Two Killed In Helena

Two men were killed in Helena yesterday by shocks which rocked a 500-mile area in Montana, Alberta, Saskatchewan Canada, Far south in Honduras, quakes added to the horror of the Republic's strongest since the belief the widespread disturbances were merely coincidental.

The greatest interest from his home in Hyde Park, N.Y.—in the area affected—centred on the Red Cross, the Army and the PERA to speed relief to families bereaved in the disaster in Helena.

Dr. L. O. Cosant, director of the Seismological Station, said the first shock reached Ithaca, N.Y., at 1.06 a.m. E.S.T. and the main shock hit at 1.06, lasting for 30 seconds.

"It was the worst earthquake we have ever had here," he said. "It was much worse than the one in 1929."

Operator Jostled

A telephone operator at Escanaba, Mich. was jolted from her chair.

In Brooklyn, N.Y., police hastened to check up on four houses reported ready to collapse. Subway trackwalkers double-quicked along their section and tunnel officials hurried underneath the rivers, then reported all was well.

Dr. Gerhard and Mr. Reg. Joseph J. Lynch, head of the Physicians' Department at New York's Fordham University, agreed with Frank O'Donnell of Toronto, Dominion Meteorological Bureau that the St. Lawrence River fault was a likely offender. Mr. O'Donnell said the thrust spot for the quake centre was north of the St. Lawrence where there was a known fault in the earth.

Triangulation of distance readings from seismographs in Buffalo, N.Y., Weston, Mass., and New York City placed the centre less than 100 km. from the source of the St. Lawrence River.

Canada Affected

The States which reported feeling the temblors were: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Virginia, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

The provinces of Columbia and the provinces of New Brunswick, Ontario and Quebec also were affected.

But Easterners have never become accustomed to these earthquakes, and nerves suffered more than inanimate objects.

A man in Plainfield, N.J., said he felt a "gentle upsurging" of his house several times, "like the lifting of a ship on a swelling sea."

To northern New Jersyites the movement was instantly associated with arsenals and explosives factories in the area.

"Where's the explosion?" was the question asked by hundreds.

New Yorkers, too, thought it was an explosion. Police combed the countryside for information of a blast before learning what really had happened.

Buffalo reported the disturbance lasted about four minutes there. Many citizens feared a bomb into their homes. Railroads ordered a prompt check against rockslides.

Householders in Portland, Me., said buildings swayed so strongly they were alarmed. The temblor was accompanied by a rumbling, they said.

AS EARTH TREMOR HITS PROVINCE

In terrified chorus, it was reported from many quarters, they dashed in fright up and down the thoroughfares.

For once, reporters didn't have to go after the news. Frightened householders taxed telephone lines to the limit to tell editorial staffs all about it.

The tremors were strong enough in virtually every part of Ontario and Quebec to awaken the slumbering. In some residential sections of Toronto, half-dressed men and women stood in groups on the street, discussing how the windows rattled, how furniture move and pictures swung on the walls.

The tremors awoke Campbellford residents at 1.0o. Dishes rattled, doors swung open, and buildings quivered during the brief shock. One women rushed into the street in her night clothes frightened by the tremors.

Hundreds of residents in Barrie were wakened by the rattling of dishes, trembling of walls and other unusual phenomena shortly after one a.m. today.

Operators in the Bell Telephone building felt the walls shake.

People were wakened from their sleep, windows rattled and pictures swung from their hangings in North Bay.

CITY GOVERNMENT

City councils will probably agree with much that Dr. Horace L. Brittain said on Tuesday night at Woodstock in an address: "I am confident my grandchildren will see the time the city councils will be monarch of all they survey". For municipal government is the most intimate government that we know of.

Dr. Brittain said he has never been able to understand the necessity of library boards and parks boards. He believes that the time will come when municipal councils will be required to select assessors, treasurers, clerks and auditors from official lists established by a provincial civil service commission having jurisdiction not only in provincial affairs but in municipal affairs, for as he gives the reason, "It is just as essential that these officials should have the highest professional qualifications as that the medical officer of health or city solicitor should have such qualifications."

He advocates a two or three-year term for aldermen, staggered terms of council, abolition of wards, removal of present budget with standard analysis for each department, a long term capital budget, centralization of accounting and purchasing, an outside audit, and centralization of service departments as distinct from overhead departments under a single executive officer.

Municipal government has changed from a simple to a highly complex one of great complexity. While a man may feel that the municipal service which he enjoys every minute of the day is free it costs him from $200 to $300 a year. The municipal corporation has changed, so the qualifications required for management have changed with the result that the modern municipal employee needs not only to be intelligent and of good moral character, but also in many cases he needs high technical training and experience and in many cases he needs an executive type of temperament.

Dr. Brittain says of the qualifications of aldermen, they demand not technical training but a degree of common sense which is exceedingly uncommon, and which should be based upon character and intelligence.

"One of the qualities which elected bodies all over the world have failed to develop to a sufficient degree is ability to make use of technically trained employees. There still exists as a hangover from the more simple times of the past a feeling that one man is as good as another and that anyone who can get elected is endowed with all the intelligence and ability necessary to perform any function required by the corporation. My experience is that the only experts elected to office are the experts at getting elected. Such experts should confine themselves to their own field and should be willing and anxious to avail themselves of the expert advice of the corporations' employees.

"Even more important than the qualifications of the council are the qualifications of the electors, because the quality of the electorate determines in the last analysis the quality of the council and the quality of the permanent staff."

Dr. Brittain says of the non-voter, "non-voting is a terrible responsibility. Even if when the voter goes to the polls he finds no one on the paper for whom he can conscientiously vote, he is not therefore discharged from responsibility. It is up to him to see that there will be some one on the ballot for whom he can vote with knowledge and pleasure. Voting is only half of the franchise, the other half is the securing of acceptable candidates".

Dr. Brittain believes that the franchise cannot in the long run be limited to those with a direct financial stake in the community. "If a man with a stake in the community goes into council and does what is right he is very apt to be defeated." He stresses this that the persons who do not directly pay taxes have a real stake in the community. He praises the city with a large amount of home ownership as likely to be better administered than another. He condemns the policy of making the next generation pay, and advocates the pay-as-you-go policy.

Dr. Brittain has been much before the public of late as Director and Secretary of the Citizens' Research Institute. Municipal Government in the past few years has been coming into recognition. Many citizens still think a municipality just runs naturally but that very implied indifference may explain why some municipalities do not get one hundred per cent efficiency for their expenditures.

Some may fear that centralization of authority in one instead of in so many boards, commissions and so on will tend to bureaucratic government but few can gainsay the statement of Dr. Brittain that there are too many governing bodies. This condition is not limited to municipalities, it is the fault of government generally, and the same tendency is seen in churches and societies.

What he says of the duty of the electorate cannot be too much impressed. That is the backbone of city government.

SAN FRANCISCO'S BARBARY COAST MAY HAVE BEEN MORE WICKED and Port Said and other hot spots east of Suez may have flourished in sin and iniquity because "there ain't no ten commandments there," but no lane frequented by people in any number has a more romantic or colorful past than the Bowery of Little Old New York, where desperate poverty and great wealth rub shoulders at all hours of the day or night.

The Bowery's latest bid for fame consisted of the opening of the Paramount Diamond Centre, on the Bowery, a new clearing house for fine jewels.

The event was celebrated by a free feed at which all the down-and -outs of the Bowery, good men and bad men, were invited and served a grand meal. The guests numbered 300 and the publicity was considered worth it—not only good eats were served but good liquor also, and was everybody happy?

After the indigent guests were aped on their way rejoicing a grand display of diamonds took place in which it is said about one million dollars in sparklers lighted up the immediate surroundings.

It is said that the sale of diamonds in this gem centre on the Bowery has reached the amazing total of $50,000,000 a year. The gambler, the racketeer, proprietors and managers of pleasure palaces, and inmates like to own and wear real diamonds and, living a precarious existence as they do, just what better way can they invest their cash in diamonds which are easily and quickly turned into money when the occasion arises.

The Bowery used to be bad, very bad, but of late years it has improved greatly in morals and manners and is on a fair way to becoming respectable.

The Bowery is part of Third Avenue, the lower part, below Fourteenth Street considerably, and empties into Chatham Square and Park Row. Wall Street and all the wealth it represents is below the Bowery, and while the Bowery and adjacent streets is the habitat of many men and women who as the saying is "live by their wits" they do not mix with the financial wizards close by for the police have long maintained a "dead line" below which no person with a police record dare go without being arrested on sight.

So the little old isle of Manhattan has some strange and interesting quirks about it which do not appear always on the surface.

PUPILS IN NEW YORK CITY SCHOOLS NUMBER 1,900,000. Just imagine that number of potential job seekers in any one community. They are being given a course of learning in the hope that they may become useful citizens by relieving their elders who have borne the burden and heat of the day while waiting for the juniors to be prepared to take their places. What a beautiful theory. New York City spends $105.11 annually on elementary pupils and $161.95 on high school scholars. The difference is free to two-thirds of the pupils. An army of 36,000 teachers are paid salaries aggregating $150,000,000 annually. The range of studies is remarkable, mostly practical.

HEARD THIS ONE?

A gentleman from the United States had been the guest of an Irish gentleman for two weeks. His host took him for a drive every day to show him the beauty of the "Green Isle".

One day the visitor said, when they were driving:

"I have always heard that the Irish are a very witty people. Now I've been here for two weeks, and the Irish don't seem to be any wittier than the people at home."

"Oh," replied his host, "you've not tried them. I'll wager a guinea that the first man you meet will be too many for you."

The bet was made, and the first Irishman they saw was a poor old beggar man sitting by the side of the road. The stranger thought he would easily win his guinea. He walked over to the old man and said:

"Good morning, Pat! I want to ask you a question."

"All right," said the Irishman, "I'm always glad to help ignorant furriners."

Nettled a little by the reply, the stranger said:

"I want to ask you, Pat, if the devil came right now to take either you or me, which would he take?"

"He would take me", replied Pat.

"Why would he take you?" said the visitor.

"Because he's sure enough of you any time," replied the smiling Irishman.

"O'Shaughnessy's Boy"

Wallace Berry and Jackie Cooper Score in a Clever Picture That is All Circus

Wallace Berry and Jackie Cooper are united once more in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "O'Shaughnessy's Boy", coming to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday) for three days, matinee daily. Their new picture is described as a dramatic, human interest story of father love told against a background of universal appeal....the circus with all its pathos, humor and spectacle, abundantly garnished with sure-fire animal thrills.

A Complete Circus

The picture was directed by Richard Boleslawski, whose star is the fastest rising in Hollywood, with such recent hits to his credit as "Les Miserables" and "Clive of India."

Here is the picture Berry-Cooper fans have been yearning for ever since "The Champ" one of the most successful pictures of all times. It is their picture from the opening shot until the final fade-out.

Again the spirit and essence of "The Champ" have been captured from a different, novel angle, with an appealing heart-throbbing twist..... a father's regeneration through the love of his son. The son realizing the sacrifices of his father, in turn sacrificing himself, as the picture reaches a triumphant smashing climax.

From the standpoint of circus spectacle, "O'Shaughnessy's Boy" has never been equalled on the screen. A complete circus was set on the M.G.M. lot...menagerie tent with elephants, tigers, lions, monkeys, camels water Buffalo, llamas and many other animals; Big Top and Side Show.

There is a circus parade and intimate shots of the circus on the road, the "privilege car" and the thrills of circus life.

The tiger-elephant act, around which the action revolves, was said to be an impossibility by many expert circus men, but it will be seen for the first time on the screen when Wallace Beery puts a tiger on an elephant's back and puts the jungle beast through a ring of fire! The act required ten weeks of patient training on the part of Louis Roth, famous animal trainer.

Featured Players

Wallace Beery has one of his finest roles as "Windy", the confident, easy-going, swaggering lion tamer. Jackie Cooper plays his son, and Spanky McFarland plays Jackie as a child. Leone Maricle, Broadway stage actress, makes her motion picture debut in the role of Dorothy, "Windy's neurotic wife; Sarah Haden is seen as Martha, her spiteful sister; Henry Stephenson appears in the role of Valkenberg; Granville Bates is the doctor; Willard Robertson plays a circus boss; Clarence Muse has a sympathetic part as Jeff, colored attendant, and Ben Hendricks plays Frank, ringmaster.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are appearing on the same program in their latest comedy hit "Thicker than Water", the Belle Latest News of the World, and at Saturday matinee "The New Adventure of Tarzan".

Two Features Tonight

Two excellent features will be exhibited at the Belle tonight for the last times in "Dr. Socrates" co-starring Paul Muni and Ann Dvorak, and "I Live for Love" featuring Dolores Del Rio, Edward Marshall, Guy Kibbee and Allen Jenkins. The last complete show commences at 8.35 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Four Hours to Kill"

Richard Barthelmess Portrays New Role in Striking Contrast to Usual Performances

Something in the nature of a revelation awaits you this week end at the Capitol Theatre where Richard Barthelmess is seen in "Four Hours to Kill."

Cast as Tony Mako, the hard cruel and ruthless desperado who steals time away from the noose to get the man who speaded on him. Barthelmess renders a screen portrait that is a heart-throbbing contrast to his usual suave and amiable performances. This is the most powerful and emotionally dramatic role the screen has ever granted him and Barthelmess plays it with such insight that you wonder why the screen was so long in giving him his chance.

Adapted from the play, "Small Miracle," from the pen of Kenyon Nicholson, it is a fascinating cross-section of the melodramatic underworld in a New York Theatre, where criminal lurks hiding for his victim. Against the best interest of the criminal's story, other minor dramas are played—Mako falls for a rich woman who plans to elope with her sweetheart; another is that of a check room boy who has stolen and faces jail. And, for comedy relief, we have the excitable father, also instrumental in bringing the story to its climax.

The drama of all life stories is focussed on that of Barthelmess when aiding Mako to escape the police to shoot down the man he hates most in the world.

The supporting cast is headed by Joe Morrison, Helen Mack, Gertrude Michael, Sam Hardy and Ray Milland.

"Four Hours To Kill" will play both Friday and Saturday. For added enjoyment, especially for the younger theatre fans, the management will present a fast-throbbing Western called "Texas Buckler" in which the popular Bob Steele is starred. A suitable program of short attractions will be sent in conjunction with these two sterling feature pictures.

Hallowe'en passed off very quietly in the city. No damage was done to property and no arrests were made. The fifteen special policemen in addition to the regular force did duty until midnight when the streets were deserted. During the earlier part of the evening a large number of the younger element dressed in varied costumes paraded the streets to the amusement of the onlookers. The "ghosts" on Bridge St. were the cutest things out. There were many ghosts and white sheets and they were accompanied by a witch "a little wizened up" critter that was the limit.

One of the fifteen special policemen engaged for duty Hallowe'en evidently anticipated trouble in the district to which he was assigned. When he appeared at the police station at 6 o'clock to be sworn in he had with him a revolver with every chamber loaded, a pair of old fashioned handcuffs, a cane resembling a miniature cordwood stick and a whistle which he said was to call for help if needed. The revolver was taken from him until he was relieved from duty.

Stirling and District

Stirling.—The regular meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Society was held in the church parlour on on Monday evening with a large number of members in attendance. The meeting was in the form of a Hallowe'en entertainment with many of those present appearing in various types of costumes in keeping with the spirit of the occasion. A large and hideous skeleton greeting the visitors in the vestibule put them into the spirit of this unique social function. The program was under the direction of the Citizenship division of the organization and was opened with the usual devotional period conducted by Rev. E. W. Rowland.

The program for the remaining part of the evening was presented by Miss Dorothy Eggleston leader of Citizenship Department.

Miss Fenwick of the Public School teaching staff dealt very capably with a very educational topic "Problems of the National". Starting very closely before her listeners the need for the individual to see and accept his or her responsibility in the quest for a higher standard of World Citizenship.

Community singing which included many of the old favourite songs was heartily enjoyed by all, with Mrs. E. W. Rowland presiding at the piano. A contest of a very original type entitled a "Mixed Romance" under the direction of Miss Marjorie Clements proved very interesting and entertaining as the final number on this fine program. The Silence for Mrs. place being equally divided by those of the Red and Khaki divisions and the literary group running a close second. The attendance records of the various groups showed a total attendance of 65 members present. This meeting of unusual interest was brought to a close with the repeating of the Mizpah Benediction.

Farmers Addressed on the Subject of Poultry

A great deal of interest on the part of the farmers of the Stirling district was shown in the lecture on the "Care and Feeding of Poultry", delivered to a group of those interested in this branch of farm work in the agricultural hall on Tuesday evening. The meeting was made possible through the Ontario Department of Agriculture under the direction of Mr. Ross Wilson, local representative of that department, who presided over the meeting. Many of the common problems faced by the poultrymen of today were discussed by a specialist sent out from the O.A.C. at Guelph for that purpose. The most interesting address this fine speaker dealt at length on the matters of culling, feeding and disease. Describing in a vivid fashion the extensive experimental project going on at the Guelph College for the benefit of all in the poultry industry. On the matter of adequate housing for the birds, the speaker with a modern model described the latest and most practical methods of ventilation which while effecting the necessary change of air within the building also protected the body heat of the birds which in most cases, is the only source of heat in the cold weather.

Following the address a discussion took place therein the speaker dealt with the individual problems faced by the farmers in this district which many highly profitable were set forth as a result of this very fine questionnaire. Though the weather was very unfitting a good number of poultrymen were greatly benefitted from this fine meeting.

Popular Radio Speaker Addresses Large Sitting Audience

Over five hundred people were in attendance at the chicken dinner served by the ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Wednesday evening which was the interesting feature of the Celebration of the 79th Anniversary of the Church. Number in attendance this year far exceeded that of the past few years. Those in charge of the organizing of it, deserve a great deal of credit for the efficient manner in which it was carried through. The first group of guests entered the dining hall at exactly 5.30, and the without any great delay other guests were invited to fill the places of those who had partaken of one of the greatest dinners ever served in the village. So well did those in charge have everything arranged that the program which was scheduled to get underway at 8 p.m. was only a few minutes late in getting started after the entire gathering had been thoroughly taken care of. There were over five hundred dinner guests and the crowd that remained for the program which included a splendid illustrated lecture given by Rev. Wm. Patterson, well known personality on the Canadian airways, through his broadcasts of the morning devotion periods of C.F.R.B. in Toronto, more than filled the auditorium which every seat filled, chairs were placed in the aisles and along the walls of the church and many remained standing. The lecture for which Mr. Allan is gaining great renown in all parts of the province is one of unusual merit entitled "A Pilgrimage Through Scotland". Mr. Allan visited Scotland recently and while on that trip made a collection of some of the most interesting and unique slides and on his return arranged them into a fine group for this lecture. Scenes of unsurpassed beauty, old landmarks and ancient Castles all have their place in the collection. Several scenes of the Old Stirling Castle and the Stirling Bridge, and also the famous Stirling Road in the land of the heather, were particularly interesting to the audience of Stirling, Ontario. Added to this the unusual humour and wit, for which this gifted son of Scotland, is well known, and you have, as a result, one of the finest evening's entertainments ever given.

During the rest hour of the program musical numbers were given by Mr. Ferris and Mr. Wardell, well known cornet players of Belleville, who displayed great talent in their rendition of several duets, and solo contributions. Mrs. Green presided at the piano. Another special feature of the evening was the return visit of Mr. Chas. E. Allen for this special occasion. Mr. Allen, who was musical director of St. Andrew's choir for several years, recently accepted a position in the same capacity at St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford, and his return for this occasion was hailed by those of to by his many friends of Stirling. Mr. Allen offered several fine numbers on piano and also some organ solos.

Rev. J. A. Kotfend acted as master of ceremonies in his usual pleasing manner and called upon Rev. W. Rowland of St. Paul's United Church, who brought cordial greetings from the clergy of the sister churches within the village to the minister and congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on the occasion of their 79th Anniversary.

Greetings from the Kingston Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada were expressed in a very splendid manner by the Moderator of that body, Rev. Mr. Hill of Roslin. These addresses and musical numbers with the interesting travelogue by Rev. Allan Patterson which he asked the entire gathering to join in singing of several familiar Scottish airs made up a program that will long be remembered by the people of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. N. Duncan, of Toronto are spending a few days this week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pahs also the former's brother, Mr. Arthur Duncan.

THE MODERN CAR

THE NEW FORD V·8 FOR 1936

Distinguished new beauty of line has been combined with the outstanding comfort, safety and performance that have put the Ford V-8 in a class by itself. The car that led all others in 1935 has been made still better for the new year. It has been proved by the past and improved for the future. The New Ford provides every modern feature, with the assurance of satisfactory service. There are no experiments in it—nothing that has not been tried and tested. This means a great deal to motorists—especially in mechanical construction and in safety. . . . The Ford gives you distinctly better performance because of its V-8 engine—it stands out also because it is such a safe car to drive. The Steel Body, Safety Glass all around and Super-Safety Brakes provide exceptional security. . . . The Ford V-8 for 1936 is the finest, safest, most reliable Ford ever built.

New Modern Lines—New longer hood extends gracefully over the distinctive new radiator grille, encasing the length of the engine. New longer fenders, with a wide flare, contribute to the imposing front-end appearance. Horns are concealed behind circular grilles beneath the headlamps. New hood louvres. Steel wheels of entirely new design.

New Easier Steering—Steering gear ratio increased. Steering gear sector shaft mounted on roller bearings.

New Gear Shifting—Easier, quicker and smoother is the New Ford V-8 for 1936. Shorter distance for the gear shift lever to travel. Quiet shifting. Quiet running in all speeds because of silent helical gears.

Super-Safety Brakes—Safest, most reliable type of brakes under all driving conditions. Mechanical brakes of the same proved design as have been used for years on America's finest cars. Extra large braking area. Easy to apply.

Welded Steel Bodies—The Ford V-8 has a seamless all-steel body structure—electrically welded for still greater strength.

Safety Glass Throughout—All Ford body types are equipped with Safety Glass in the windshield and all windows at no extra cost.

V-8 Engine—Fine-car power, speed, acceleration and smoothness. The reliability of the Ford V-8 engine has been proved in actual service by more than two million cars and trucks—4 million Ford V-8s purchased in the last year. Figures show that the Ford V-8 is the most economical fine car ever built. Every refer the Ford costs less to run.

No "Breaking In"—The Ford V-8 engine is made to such high standards of precision that it requires no "breaking in" period. Step on it. You can drive it 60 miles an hour the first day.

Efficient Cooling—The cooling system of the New Ford V-8 for 1936 circulates 4½ gallons of water through a new, larger radiator. Natural thermo-syphon action is assisted by two centrifugal water pumps. New style hood louvres permit rapid flow of air around the engine.

Bodies Insulated for Quiet—The floor, dash and body panels of the Ford V-8 for 1936 are insulated with new materials that absorb and deaden sound. The Ford V-8 engine is quiet.

Centre-Poise Riding—All passengers ride near the centre of the car—cradled between the soft, flexible springs. Exceptional comfort on every road. The Ford V-8 gives a front-seat ride to back-seat riders.

Unusual Body Room—Short, compact Ford V-8 engine takes up less space under the hood and permits more room at the cowl to be used by passengers. Increased room in the 1936 Fordor Sedans because the rear quarter trim is recessed above the new arm rests.

PRIMO CARNERA MEETS NEUSEL

Man Mastiff Given Last Chance to Make Comeback

New York, Nov. 1 (AP)—Primo Carnera, the man mastiff, hoists himself into the Madison Square Garden ring tonight to battle Walter Neusel, blond German who has yet to be defeated in North America.

Carnera was a 6 to 5 favorite to beat the German but there was little betting interest in the fight despite the fact 15,000 patrons were expected to be present.

For Carnera it is a last stand; one more experiment to determine whether he should continue as a fighter or retire to his sunny Italy and live on the profits his bulk has brought him. For Neusel it is an opportunity to secure a match with Joe Louis and gain the money, and probably the pain, that such a bout would bring. Neusel has been promised a bout with the brown bomber if he succeeds in whipping Carnera.

OLIN LOSES IN FIFTEEN ROUNDS

Lewis, a Negro, Becomes World's Light Heavyweight Champion

St. Louis, Nov. 1—(AP)—John Henry Lewis, first Negro light heavyweight champion since the reign of Battling Siki, turned sanguinous eyes today toward the goal of goals of "another" Negro — the world heavyweight title.

The Arizona ebony storm, who gained the light heavyweight crown last night with a smashing victory over Bob Olin, said next step in the right world he would be a contender for the title sought by his friend, Joe Louis, another southern bombshell from the cotton fields and beaten pleader for a return bout.

Louis, who refereed one of the preliminaries, watched from the ringside as John Henry battered the most brilliant battle of his career, battered the champion, a slight betting favorite through 15 frenzied rounds before 8,000 hysterical fans.

"The first thing I'm going to do is fight some more and make some money," the 21-year-old champion-to-be said. "Then I'm going to start training for a fight soon enough to enter the heavyweight class."

Lewis, who turned professional in 1931 but who has been boxing established bouts during the past two years only, won the fight early with a beautiful right to the jaw in the fourth round that apparently left Olin slightly dazed for the rest of the encounter.

Newcomers Make Good Impression

Detroit, Nov. 1 (CP)—There is nothing like making a good impression at the start and that was the reason "Hec" Kilrea and Pete Kelly, newcomers to Detroit Red Wings this season, could not be blamed if they felt rather satisfied with themselves today.

Kilrea and Kelly scored both goals, when Red Wings tied the Olympics 2-2 in the first of the three-game city series at the Olympia last night, while another goal by Kelly near the end of the game was disallowed.

"Hurricane Hec," obtained from Toronto Maple Leafs and the redheaded Kelly, last year with St. Louis, worked on the same line with Gordon Pettinger and were by far the most effective trio in display.

The ex-Leaf snared the first goal of the game on a pass from Pettinger, while Kelly got his in the third period on a pass from Kilrea, Art Giroux scored late in the first for Olympics, while "Mod" Bruneteau got the other in the third.

John Katan Easily Defeats Bunny Dunlop in Main Go Of Excellent Wrestling Card

Semi-Final Bout of The Night, However, Stole Show

TAYLOR WINS

Local Boy Given Bout When Anderio is Too Rough

Although John Katan, Toronto's villainous wrestler proved much too good for Al Dunlop, the Cleveland lacaman, and won quite handily over the latter at last night's all-star wrestling show at the Arena, the semi-final bout of the evening really stole the limelight and saved the show, as Joe Katelmach and Chief Lynx wrestled to a draw in the opening bout "Irish" Steve Taylor was declared the winner over Mike Anderio, following continued roughness, that saw Anderio disqualified and the boy awarded to Taylor on a foul.

Katan made short work of Dunlop as he flattened the Cleveland grappler after 23.00 minutes. Katan, settling to a fast pace, started in bold and applying the pressure until Dunlop was forced to retire on the fall and was left lying prostrate in the ring. Seconds assisted Dunlop to the dressing room where he remained and failed to answer the bell for the second round. Katan being declared winner as Dunlop conceded the bout being unable to carry on. Dunlop's ankle was badly injured during the applying of the Japanese toe hold. Katan proved a more popular villain than the pugnacious Dunlop and gave the latter the well known "works," when the fall for Dunlop in a savage manner to settle him up for the final fall. Only once during the 23.00 minutes of the first round did Dunlop look to have any chance that the more powerful Katan easily warded off this attack and went on to have matters his own way and lower Dunlop to the canvas with a series of elbow smashes terminated by a hammer-lock.

Lynx Mixes Matters

The semi-final scrap on the card proved the feature attraction and stole the show, when Joe Katelmach and Chief Lynx staged a hectic scrap for 45 minutes. Each man won a fall, but the last round saw Katelmach have the Indian purely on the defensive throughout, as the ex-Winnipeg heavy went to work on the Indian, who was eventually tired by the time the last fall was secured. Flats and knees subsequently had him from the ring following a bend-loose. Katelmach's first fall in an orthdox manner but the Indian continued to mix matters until Katelmach in fecandi aroused and he retaliated with the same tactics employed by the Indian, who took to the outside of the ropes for protection. The round was the fastest ever seen in a local ring as the contestants repeatedly resorted to illegal slights which kept Referee Wells in hot water. After 21.00 minutes of settled and furious attacks Chief Lynx forced Katelmach to his knees with a punishing arm-lock, applying such terrific pressure, that Katelmach conceded the fall rather than shorn continued punishment. Katelmach's conceding of the round proved most prolific as he took a rest and came back into the ring to demonstrate he could be the real villain if such was necessary. Katelmach attacked the Indian most ferociously employing a little of the Indian's own strategy along with it. After ten minutes of torrid pounding holds, knees and otherwise, Katelmach softened Chief Lynx with a series of flying tackles and pinned him with a body press, tying both boys a tall Katelmach came out in the last round to prove the aggressor, but Chief Lynx seemed satisfied to call matters a draw and was on the defensive throughout. The bell saved the Indian as Katelmach had settled him for the killing which the gang intended.

Taylor Defeats Anderio

In the opening bout Irish Steve Taylor gained sweet revenge over Mike Anderio, Taylor winning the first fall after 8.11 minutes, when Taylor pinned the latter with a flying whip and flattened Anderio, who became ferocious in defeat and returned to unmercifully attack Taylor and win the second round following a series of rough and illegal slams. The third round saw Anderio disqualified for illegal holding and unlawfully attack Taylor with knees, elbows and even went so far as to choke Taylor. After being warned Referee Wells banished Anderio for repeated fouling and declared Taylor the victor.

In the main bout a rather amusing incident happened when Katan pulled Dunlop over atop of Referee Wells, pinning both Wells and Dunlop to the mat. Eventually the official squirmed out of his embarrassing position and capably resumed his duties.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Bob Greer, catcher for the Picton Athletic Bank of Commerce nine and for O.H.A. hockey player, has received an offer to go to Toronto and play in a bank hockey league. It was announced recently. Bob is employed in the Picton branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and is perhaps he given a transfer. Greer is still of junior age and would progress rapidly under the watchful eye of some of those more expert than onto hockey and baseball coaches, more particularly hockey however. Greer was given a week in which to decide whether he would accept the transfer or not.

Congratulations are due to Harry Ridley for his winning of the club championship of the Belleville Golf Club this season. It is Harry's second consecutive winning of the club championship while Mrs. W. H. Reeves won similar honors in the ladies' group this year. Incidentally the younger and less experienced golfers turned in very creditable records at the Belleville Golf Club this season, much to the satisfaction of Jock Mitchell, the club pro.

Yeoman will be served!

Normie Himes, veteran New York American centre player, landed back in his home town of Galt with a very unconditional release in his possession. Slowly but surely veteran N.H.L. pucksters are being replaced with new blood, but to see veterans who are slowing up, much praise should be given. Professional hockey has advanced with leaps and bounds during the past decade and much of its success is due to the players as Himes and others, who today find the going a little too fast for their weary and battle-scarred limbs. There is little sentiment in sport.

While Frenchy Bellanger, former world's flyweight champion, was in town last week end he approved Promoter Clem Allen in regards to coaching the local stable of boxers, Allen tabled terms, that called for Bellanger to go to work, the employment being practically assured, this apparently the ex-champ does not relish the idea having to buckle down. At any rate he failed to contact Clem a second time, especially after the word 'work' was mentioned.

Coach George Laughlin's B.C.I. A's, Belleville Intermediate Junior experienced little trouble with the Trenton High School kids yesterday, the score of 24 to 2 about indicating the play. The Trentonians battled gamely and well against overwhelming odds, as the local squad showed their superiority in almost every department. About the only good feature Trenton possessed was their ability to field ground balls, the majority of which were either knocked down or intercepted, however. The local junior public opinion kids have won their first two starts in the Bay of Quinte junior section of the C.O.S.S.A. and as there are only two teams, Trenton and Belleville, in the loop, Coaches Grey of Trenton, and Mr. Laughlin are quite anxious to continue the series to four games at least. The suggestion sounds right and proper as these junior players, of both squads, need the experience.

Have you heard this one:

Johnnie: "My sister has a wooden ear."

Freddie: "That ain't nothin'. My sister has a cedar chest".

Local wrestling fans went to the Arena to see the Indians and were not last evening. Much to their satisfaction Katan, one of the villainous Al-Dunlop a little of his own medicine, but the bout that stole the show was the Katelmach-Chief Lynx battle. Katelmach tried to give the local real ostrich wrestling bout, but after continued illegal attacks on the hands of the Indian Katelmach proved to all and sundry that he could not only 'take it', but also dish out his share. Lynx mixed plenty of flats, fists and knees, etc. as a matter of fact, local wrestler's win, Steve Taylor over Mike Anderio, pleased the fans to a better degree, than the ultimate result of the Katan-Dunlop affair. Although Katelmach-Indian bout stole the limelight, we are of the opinion, that the contestants in this bout carried their illegal tactics a little too far, Referee Wells tired to tame the battlers on three bouts in order that the fans might get some wrestling for their well-spent money, but in so-doing he became a target for the public's abuse. Referee Wells could have disqualified every contestant for fouling but, being a level-headed official he tried to eliminate the rough, tens and nasty tactics and for their money's worth.

There is one thing certain, Dunlop was no match for Katan but a return bout between Chief Lynx and Katelmach is inevitable. What a return is finished fight between these two men. Then again Irish Steve Taylor, the boy is to make good, is not entirely satisfied with the termination of his bout, even Mike Anderio, the loser, admits to fouling me, but I would like to meet him just once again, you see he beat me once," calmly stated Taylor after being awarded the decision as the pugnacious Italian lost to Taylor due to continued roughness. Taylor, who is only one man in the ring, Katan. The Katan-Dunlop bout, however, packed a wallop, Katan born ever shooting and a merry time was had by all. A return bout here is practically demanded by repleted, however. The local junior public opinion.

Migration of Canada Geese Altered By Advance of Man Into Northland

Toronto, Nov. 1—(CP)—Steel rails march gleaming into Canada's northland, locomotives and trains roar into the barren fields, settlements rise—and the fate of the Dominion's wild geese suffers a tragic alteration.

Because of the advance of civilization, thousands of geese which have their nesting ground in the vicinity of Hudson Bay and Baffin Land during the past two years have altered the route of their migration southward each autumn.

"Today ornithologists were pondering whether the recent dramatic phenomenon of between 5,000 and 10,000 geese settling on the swirling Niagara River, some 200 of them being swept over the Horseshoe Falls to death, might be traceable to the disturbing influence of man's march into the north country.

L. L. Snyder, ornithologist of the Royal Ontario Museum, said "Within the last two years, routes of the geese in flight has altered. The flight which passed over Toronto has been changed to Hamilton, is one of the largest ever witnessed by some of the oldest observers. It seems just barely possible that the arrival of man so near to that ancient gathering ... in Hannah Bay (in the south part of James Bay) has in some way upset the balance of certain normal instincts of migration, causing birds to leave earlier than other change from their normal routine.

Mr. Snyder added if the annual migration continued to follow the route of the last two years, Niagara Falls might easily become a death-trap annually for hundreds of birds.

3 KILLED, 7 HURT IN MOTOR CRASHES

By The Canadian Press

Three men were killed and seven persons were injured seriously in motor accidents on Ontario highways late yesterday and last night.

Two Hamilton men, Frank Hodgins, both of London, Ont., were fatally injured and three persons with them were hurt when the auto they were riding in struck the guard rail of a bridge on No. 2 highway just outside London. Dennis was killed instantly and Hodgins died soon after he had been admitted to a hospital.

Two miles outside of Harrow, Ont., William T. Richards, middle-aged Amherstburg farmer, having had an auto to get a ride into town, when the car struck a culvert and overturned. Mr. Richards was killed and his son, on his tenderin-flicting fatal injuries. Police today still were endeavoring to identify the old man.

A motor car with four men in it crashed against one of the stone pillars of the gate at the south entrance to North Bay. All four were unconscious when found, and seriously hurt. Guy Plamondon, traveller for a grocery company and driver of the car, was believed to have been unable to make the turn in the highway approaching the bridge. The three hurt were Leslie Horace Saunders and Joseph Case. All received concussions. They are in hospital at North Bay today.

Regina-Winnipeg Scrap Shapes Up as Finest Football Game of Year

By BOB FREESTLY
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Winnipeg, Nov. 1—There is every indication that the Regina Roughriders-Winnipeg tilt, in Winnipeg on Nov. 2 will be the greatest game of rugby played on Canada this year.

Both are presenting the strongest teams they ever fielded. Both are bolstered by some mighty fine talent from across the southern boundary line and these boys have apparently supplied Regina and Winnipeg home-brews with sufficient inspiration to permit them to do or die "for dear old Rodgers". The result is that their respective fans have witnessed better played football than they ever saw before.

Work For Ritchie

Al Ritchie has Olson, Pierce, Kirk and Walker of last year's United States players on the Roughriders, and, in addition has Lorenzon, Kobasnuk, Partridge, Shand and McDonald as new faces. The home-brews are Chiga, Miller, Connolly, Lydard, McIntyre, Young, Gariuk, Thompson and Stinson. The latter, however, will see on a until form again this season because of a recent injury. His loss will be felt.

Westerners have learned to realize that these players pack a mean football license, and when they are harnessed together in one well-oiled machine and the redoubtable Al has been functioning as they should.

Home Talent Shows

Russ Rebbole and Greg Kabat are now considered full-fledged Winnipeggers but in case they felt lonely Coach Bob Fritz and Line Coach Bert Oja, along with Herb Paschal, Fritz Hanson, Perpich and Marquardt, arrived this summer to keep them company on the Winnipeg football field.

The home-brews gathered around them, and playing back-up football, include the old reliable Roxy Adelman, Lane Curtiss, Christie, Kushner, Mogul, Nicklin, Herb Mobberley, Coulter, Kobrinsky, James, Roseborough, Daigle, Grant, Peterman, Patrick and Law. Then to top things off, Nick Pappas, a former star who learnt his football in New York high schools, turned up at practice one night and surprised everybody with a nice turn of speed and a decided knowledge of what to do with the ball when the had it. Dave Harding, that hardy perennial of many gridiron gardens, is also on hand and is still able to show how it used to batter his way through tough opposition.

Have Individual Battles

The "big battle" is supposed to settle once and for all an argument which started down in the Dakotas, as to which is the better brokenfield runner, Fritz Hanson, Peterlittle package of speedy elusiveness, or Ralph Pierce, Regina's fleet-footed streak of lightning Roxy Adelman is out to show Ted Lyznal that he has no right to be picked as centre on last year's all-western team.

Winnipeg possibly possess the more versatile and better balanced backfield. Adelman, Curtiss, Mogul and Kobrinsky and Pappas have disappointed many backers all season, while Fritz, James, Rosebrough and Coulter pack real dynamite in every line plunge. Though riders have had Olson and Kirk doing a world of plunging, Olson has been heaving both long and short forwards, with Pierce and Andy Young doing a swell job of toting the ball around the ends and back on passes. In kicking neither club has been showing anything to rave about.

Rests With Coaches

Along the line it should be a battle royal. Winnipegs may be better coached there and there is every possibility of Kabat, Oja and Mogul walking off with premier honors. Greg, who helped Carl Cronin with the coaching in 1933 and who assumed the full responsibility last year, is relieved of coaching duties now and playing far better football this season than he was able to show in the two previous years. Ole has no peer in western Canada as an offensive lineman and is a bear-cat on the secondary defence line.

Defensively Regina may have the edge but that remains to be seen. Big Jack Thompson is back in harness again, Johnny Gariuk is going better than ever while Lorenzon packs a lot of bulk and knows how to use it with a lot of drive. The difference may lie in the secondary defensive line. As long as Pepp can keep their first string intact they will put up a veritable stone wall but it might be different when substitutions have to be made.

Carry West's Threat

Both teams are powerful and from this angle, it appears to be up to the quarterbacks. Olson and Fritz as field generals, by using a gaining victory out this hot grid-iron.

It is plain to be seen that, barring accidents to key men, whichever western team goes after Dominion honors, plenty of opposition will be provided for the east.

The experts are picking either Regina or Winnipeg to represent the prairies. They appear to be correct. No one is expecting anything like the same opposition from Alberta or B.C., though either one of courses may be in the final analysis spring a surprise.

In Hockey Training Camps

(By The Canadian Press)

While Ottawa civic officials pondered whether Alex Connell would be given leave from his job to act as Montreal Maroons goalie this season, Manager Tommy Gorman sent in his World Champions through another workout at Winnipeg today.

o o o o

While Gorman is believed to be anxious to have the Ottawa guard Maroon's nets, he's not counting on the Gatlin being able to join the team. During the training grind he has expressed satisfaction with the way Eric Pettinger has performed.

o o o o

But he was far from satisfied with the way several other of his stars worked when Philadelphia Ramblers beat them 3-1 Wednesday night and he turned on the heat yesterday. He had them out on the ice for 2 1-2 hours and put them through every manoeuvre in the code.

o o o o

The Montreal Manager's displeasure was also evidenced when he sent two players hustling off to the showers. Andy Smilinger, defenceman was returned to Providence Reds and Tos Blake, former Hamilton native was also sent to the Canadian-American team for seasoning.

o o o o

A satisfied manager today was Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings. He saw Detroit Olympics of the International League hold his Red Wings to a 2-2 tie at Detroit last night and as he controls players of both teams he couldn't help but like the result.

o o o o

He watched Eric Pettinger, whom he bought from Toronto Leafs during the off-season, perform a goal and decided "Hurricane Hec" was in for a great season. An old friend and admirer of the blonde Ottawan, Adams snapped him up from Leafs at a bargain and we hasn't any regrets.

o o o o

He also liked the way Pete Kelly, Manitoba amateur—who got the other goal, worked in with the Red Wings. A penalty shot gave Olympics the lead early with only three minutes to play, "Mud" Bruneteau scoring it for Olympics. Art Giroux got their other marker.

o o o o

New York Rangers showed some of their old high-scoring ability in an exhibition game with the Northwestern League all-stars at Calgary, winning 12-4. Lorne Chabot, Cook-Boucher-Cook line proved powerful in scoring goals and defensively. Frank Boucher and Bert Connolly each got four goals but one of Connolly's was a gift affair shovved into the net by Sam Tinmouth, all-star goalkeeper. Butch Keeling scored two anger goals and Doug Bryden one.

o o o o

As Chicago Black Hawks prepared to conclude their training at Champaign, Ills., Howie Morenz, their veteran centre ice star reported a holdout a few days ago, was laid up with a wrenched back. Trainers believe a few days rest will fit him for the season's opening roar next week.

B.C.I. JUNIORS DEFEAT TRENTON

Score 24-0 Over Lighter Team in Well Played Grid Contest

Confining the bulk of the day's play in their respective territory's, the Belleville Collegiate Junior Interschoolastic football squad romped home to a 24 to 0 victory over the Trenton High School kids in a game played on the Collegiate S.S.A. fixture at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon. A large gathering of the student body got on hand to cheer the local tri-colored aggregation to greater heights, as they swept the opposition before them and applied the whitewash brush.

The local line of scrimmage continually held the Trenton huskies opponents back, as their speedy backfielders gained ground with broken field running. The work of Kerr, Dickens and Carson stood out in the rear guard as Eckesh and Clarke carried the bulk of the offensive work along the line. Dickinson was also a star during the latter two starring for the local tri-colored aggregation. Carson punted a substantial distance as he out-kicked Vanderwater of Trenton. Milten was the pick of the visitors, while Kenny, Emmerson and Wright played good ball for the lighter Trenton squad. The powerful B.C.I. line ripped and tore their opponents until at times they were smearing the Grey-couched squad for loss of yards before they could start their plays behind the line of scrimmage. The B.C.I. squad scored in every period except the third, during which they kept the ball in Trenton territory throughout the entire 35 minutes, however.

Skirls Short End

Shortly after the game got under way McCabe punted over the Trenton goal line and a Trenton was rouged. Trenton later fumbled on their own ten yard line, Eckesh recovering and on the second down Kerr skipped around the short end for a touchdown, that McCabe promptly converted making the score 7 to 0 as the second stanza opened. McCabe attempted a placement twenty-five yards out, tempted a placement 25 yards out, but missed, B.C.I. getting a point for what proved a rouge. Eckesh intercepted an attempted Trenton forward pass on their ten yard line and galloped over for a try, that was not converted, leaving the count 13 to nil at half-time. Although the majority of the play was confined to Trenton territory in the third quarter, the visitors held Belleville scoreless, but in the fourth quarter McCabe punted over the Trenton goal line and as Milten's attempted return kick was blocked, Clarke fell on the ball for a touchdown, that McCabe converted, scoring now 19 to 0 and prior to the final whistle Clarke raced around right end for a touchdown that was not converted. Final score 24 to 0 for B.C.I. and V. S.

The line-ups:

B.C.I. — end, V.S.—Flying wing, Milten; tackles, Kerr, Sonsky, Carson; quarter, Dickens; snap, Dack; insides, Kokesh, Patterson; middles, Moon, Clarke; outside, Argo, Dickinson; subs, Morgan, Noakes, Price, Warren, Webb, Clark and Whitehead.

COLLEGE TUSSLE A STANDOUT ON SATURDAY'S CARD

Queens And Varsity Ready to Battle to Last Whistle

SQUADS IN "PINK"

More Than 20,000 Expected To View The Contest

(By Elmer Dulmage)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

College football, graduated from its uninspiring stage of two bucks and a kick and this year in particular just what the doctor ordered for sustained high-tension, will put on its greatest Canadian spectacle in years tomorrow at Varsity Stadium, Toronto.

Queen's and Toronto, whose rivalry in football takes rank with the most bitter of the Athletic feuds, will battle for the second time this season. The first encounter, in which no points were pulled, ended in a 2-2 deadlock. Neither team has beaten the other by more than a single point in their last four meetings.

Even as those established prides of Toronto, the Argonauts, move in straight lines for second interprovincial Union title in three years, Western and Varsity Blues have charged upward to capture the imagination and, incidentally, the biggest box-office "takes" of this autumn.

The big Toronto Varsity Stadium will hold about 20,000 when Ted Reeve, a newspaper columnist here for a football coach, sends his Presbyterians out to battle the Blues. The Presbs must win to create a tie for the Intercollegiate leadership.

In this case, Toronto is favored to win. It is a comparison of records that the Blues were also favored to win each of their last four struggles with Queen's and that the best they got was one victory, one tie and two defeats! So nobody is going to put the slightest attention to the betting odds.

Wonderful Backfield

Toronto has a wonderful backfield and a good-passing wingline. Behind the line are some of the year's best performers, notably Hutchinson, Bobby Coulter, Cam Gray and Hughie Munro. Queen's has defensive strength, backed by a fine punter, Johnny Gallagher, and the ability to come through with points when they are needed.

This game will have its college bands, cheering sections, card stunt-ups—the glamor that college football hasn't had in five years.

Only 400 miles away, in the H.A.A.A. grounds in Hamilton, Argonauts will be battling with the big four championship with their seventh consecutive victory and Tiger, who shut straight over the Tigers.

Hamilton is almost as football mad as Toronto and the biggest crowd in years—perhaps 10,000—is expected to watch the clash. The Argos are bowed to no other foe this fall and title hopes will remain alive until the Argos go in and prove their rights.

Similarly, all will view the McGill-Western Mustangs at Montreal; the Ottawa-Montreal big four duel at Ottawa and the Scottish-Hamilton Cubs O.R.F.U. tilt at Hamilton. McGill has only a remote chance of overhauling Toronto or Queen's.

Connell's Future Is Problematic

Ottawa, Nov. 1 (CP)—Alex Connell's hockey future and perhaps a few other Ottawa and Montreal Maroon's chances to retain the Stanley Cup have been tossed neatly into the ample lap of Prime Minister Mackenzie of Ottawa.

He will decide whether "Dead-Pan Alex" will step into harness for another season under the bright lights of the National League hockey palaces or spend the long, cold months in the fire department's office's obscurity.

Prodded by sportsmen anxious to see Connell in Major League hockey, Ottawa's Board of Control last night recognized him as a civic political problem. They stepped into the tug-of-war between Maroon Manager Tommy Gorman and Blackler for the goalie's services but failed to pull all their weight either way.

They considered instructing the chief to give Connell leave of absence without pay from his secretarial position for the winter but when Controller Stan Lewis objected to that they decided to inform the chief of their unanimous desire he grant the time off and left the rest to him.

POLICE BLOTTER

"Damage was kept to the minimum last night, we believe, as only four damage calls protesting Hallowe'en damage at automobiles were received by our department," stated Chief Reid Ashley. "That there seemed to be having a good time without the destruction of private property. Our department was augmented with three additional policemen, who were on duty in the night, while three police cars patrolled the city streets all night-long," added Chief Kidd and he further stated, he appreciated the co-operation of the citizens and more of the children for their thoughtfulness. No accidents have had been reported to the police at noon today.

One major crime was reported in Belleville last night, however, when an automobile was stolen from the parking place on Coleman St. The automobile is a 1929 model Chevrolet Ontario license plates number W-3123, was stolen from the car early by four youths. It is believed the car was taken for a joy ride, but could not be located today. The vehicle was the property of Joseph Brown, Coal Company driver.

A ladder reported stolen from the Bowra store Saturday was recovered yesterday, it being hidden in a lane. Two slight motor accidents were reported also yesterday, one of which resulting in fender and bumper damage only. Two persons were charged settled upon the arrival of P. C. Nicholls and Constable Orr, the transients were sheltered in the police station on Hallowe'en.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 1 (CP)—Niagara Falls was not damaged by last night's earthquake and apparently no rock slides occurred in the gorge.

IMPRESSIONS OF QUAKE

the earthquake. Those who had not retired reported tables and chairs moved in their rooms and dishes overturned by violent shocks. Those who had retired tumbled out of bed to see what was happening.

In one home on Strachan street a clock was left so distinctly according to the residents, it "just couldn't have made them sick".

Halifax—Today's early earthquake brushed past the Canadian Maritimes with scarcely a jolt to the Nova Scotia capital.

Only in Saint John, N.B., was it felt severely. There, a number reported two distinct earth tremblings at 1.30 A.M. E.S.T.

Brantford— Brantford's earthquake shocks lasted for approximately three minutes and were distinctly felt by residents. There was no damage in this area so far as could be learned. Lights were out, bricks were dislodged from chimneys, plaster fell to the floor and articles were tumbled from dressing tables. At the Brant Sanitarium there were many patients who were awakened last night after the sudden alarm.

Belleville—Two chimneys toppled over, houses were shaken and in some residences dishes were shaken from the cupboard in the severest shock experienced here at 1.30 a.m.

Hamilton—A woman in Hamilton received a threat of bombing during the earthquake which sent her hurriedly to the police station, but when she arrived there was no one to blame for the quake.

Guelph—Nature played the biggest Hallowe'en prank of all in Guelph. An earthquake which set ornaments dancing on dressers, dishes rattling in cupboards and beds sliding over the floor, struck the city about five minutes past one o'clock. No damage was reported but thousands of citizens rushed into the streets in their night attire.

Chatham —The only tangible evidence of the earthquake in Chatham and district was the unseating of a water pipe in the Sanitarium, which caused the flooding of rooms. The tremor was felt at 1:05 a.m. Beds shook, windows and dishes rattled.

Washington, Nov. 1.—(AP)— The earthquake did not shake the White House, home of the United States President but it gave the man at the telephone switchboard a chance to make a snappy remark.

When reporters telephoned to say that a quake was felt over much of the country, he said:

"Business ought to be good in the churches next Sunday. A fright like that will send a lot of sinners to church."

Y'S MEN'S PARTY HUGE SUCCESS

Children Had Enjoyable Time at Hallowe'en Function

Youth had its fling on Hallowe'en and nowhere was this more apparent than at the annual party given by the Kiddies by the Y's Men at the Y.M.C.A. Long before the time of opening, there were hundreds of children outside the "Y" clamoring for admission, feeling their hopes were not to be realized. Led by such a parade and marched through the Victoria section and then they returned to find the doors open, where there was one grand time in the gymnasium floor, where the exercises were held.

The costumes were grotesque in the extreme, while sprinkled here and there were those who had not bothered some time on "fixing up" for Hallowe'en. For the boys, the ever-present costume and the one most favored was the "hobo" outfit, while the girls were either fairies or gypsies. One costume in particular brought a reminder, that war is going on in Ethiopia, when a young boy appeared at the party as an Ethiopian soldier, sans boots. He was most certainly the marked man of the party. Little tots accompanied by their parents enjoyed the novelty of the occasion, but some became frightened, when they saw others dressed more grotesquely than themselves.

Dr. Jack Marshall, president of the Y's Men's Club with an efficient corps of members to assist, were busy arranging the retails in dividing the awards and with Ralph Morden of the "Y" staff. The children were well behaved and the program was run off in quick order. Suitable prizes were awarded and during the child-dren were given "goodies" consisting of apples and candies which they dispersed to make merry marching up and down the main thoroughfare. It was a gala night and added more laurels to the club and the staff of the "Y" for the handling of this annual party. The committee was:

Best dressed Darkies: Leo Bellinger, Marshall Rosebush.

Best dressed girl as boy: "Patsy" Holland.

Best dressed boy as girl: "Jerry" Forster, Fred Bly, Dick Browne.

Best dressed group: Betty Rush-low.

Best Clown: Vernon Gwyer.

QUAKE EPICENTRE IS NEAR OTTAWA

Ottawa Nov. 1.—(CP)—The Dominion Observatory today estimated the epicentre of the earthquake this morning earthquake was between 175 to 200 miles from Ottawa either in Upper Ontario Valley or in the vicinity of Lake Champlain around Plattsburg, N.Y.

Ernest A. Hodgson, seismologist in charge, said the records of the instruments a short time after the shocks were felt here and found there of the Dominion Observatory thrown out of commission after registering for about 10 seconds. The instruments showed the first preliminary tremors arrived at 1:04:20 a.m. E.S.T.

A statement by Dr. R. Meldrum Stewart, director of the Observatory said breakdown of the three instruments under the earth shocks, a common occurrence in local 'quakes, "makes the work of determining the azimuth rather uncertain".

Officials agreed in general with Dr. Stewart that Richard Dimitri-ty Seismologist, that after-shocks would probably occur but they were unwilling to predict they would be severe enough to be felt over any large area. There were slight tremors this morning.

Mr. Hodgson said after-shocks almost always occur at the epicentre of the original quake but that they are frequently a minor nature.

MANY GUN PERMITS ISSUED IN CITY

Judging by the number of gun permits issued during the past day or so, scores of local hunters are invading the uplands of Prince Edward County and other counties, where legal shooting of pheasants commenced today, according to Mr. H. W. Barrett, Front Street lasser, that forty permits were granted yesterday.

Since the first of September about forty permits have been granted in all by gun carriers, it was stated at the office.

SOUND OF QUAKE LIKE HUGE FIRE

Bell Telephone exchange was also busy answering the queries of anxious telephone users attempting to trace the occurrence. More detailed information was given from this office.

Foxboro, Point Anne, Marysville, Cannilton, Tweed, all reported shocks of varying intensity. It is believed that the most severe disturbance was felt in the northern townships, although the front section where the limestone strata is particularly solid, offered a better medium for travel of the tremblors. Belleville residents are divided in their opinion regarding any accompanying noise with the earth shocks. Some staunchly maintain today that a distinct roar accompanied the shock. Others were equally insistent that dead silence was noted immediately preceding and following the quake.

Bricks tumbled from the chimney on the roof of Chief Alexander Kidd on Sheridan street, pictures were shaken on the walls.

Local Experiences As Earth Rocks

One of the best of the earthquake stories filtered in from the R.C.M.P. detachment yesterday to the local police station this morning. Mr. William Coon, well known farmer of that address believes he owns the rescue of some of his flock of White Leghorns in the first earth tremor which awoke him from sound slumber at about one o'clock. Co-incident with his alarming discovery was heard sounds of commotion from his chicken pens in the rear yard. Hastily dressing Mr. Coon managed to get outside and investigate just in time to see the shadowy figure of what were believed to be two chicken thieves disappearing empty handed into the darkness.

"Yes, mother, what is it?" sleepily replied one West Belleville youth to the parent who asked what he believed to be his mother shaking the bed violently. "I'm coming."

Hurriedly awakened and switching on the light, the youth found that it was alarm in the "Y" due to the jostling of the bed ceased. Firmly believing that a burglar was loose in the room he arose and peered under the bed in his investigation.

According to reports, the city constable on the early half a century continued its steady ticking through the night undisturbed despite the commissioner's line. "It takes more than an earthquake to stop the Big Ben," commented Mr. Jack Rollin, custodian.

Mr. H. Seldon of 238 Dundas St. was awakened by the crash of glass on the sideboard and bureau of his home and awakening sleepily to observe his familiar pictures on the bedrooms wall dancing crazily. Several distinct shocks were reported by Mr. Seldon.

High water marks on the locks and wharves along the waterfront south of the city early this morning revealed a sudden rise in the water of the Bay of Quinte and harbor some time during the night. The rise was put down to the effects of a tremendous wall of water sweeping in from the lake following the earthquake which struck shortly after one o'clock this morning.

Mr. W. H. Nobes, township clerk of Sidney, reported today he awoke after the first slight tremor with the belief that a heavy motor truck was passing on the road nearby. Second thoughts convinced him that the shocks were too distinct and too heavy and severe to be any ordinary vehicle. Windows rattled and dishes shook, but the shock soon became more pronounced. Damage throughout the township was slight, was reported nil by Mr. Nobes.

One of the chief questions asked via telephone at the local police station this morning was answered by the query: "Is it going to start again?" Sergeant Bert Ashley of police individually confessed that he believed Belleville shocks were up to earth tricks. Told that it was just an earthquake, he sighed, hung up, and went back to sleep.

"I thought that the coal in the bin downstairs was falling down," declared Mrs. Thomas Hall, 17 Arthur Thomas, superintendent of the Belleville cemetery. "The shock was very severe and I was terrified. Pictures and pictures were left hanging crooked." Mrs. Hall said.

Prince Edward County felt the shocks which disturbed Belleville to an even greater degree in some parts of the thickly populated rural district. At the United Church parsonage the earthquake shook the chimney and while houses rattled and windows shook many residents of Wooler, Rednersville and Carrying, prominent resident of the village, were awakened by the disturbance last night after. Upon learning of the cause of the shocks they retired to their beds.

Trenton reported no damage except a few loosened bricks in chimneys. For the most part reports to the ning police officials of the Trenton district indicate that the shock was quite perceptible, but for the most part were accepted with equanimity and little excitement. R.C.A.F. personnel employees and officers for the most part slept through the shocks.

Rossmore folk were awakened by the noise and the tremors after 1 o'clock this morning and many got out of bed, thinking a thunderstorm

Near Victoria Church about nine miles from Rossmore in the upper end of Ameliasburg, in one part the lamp chimney shook so violently that it almost fell off the table.

The night watchman at a local plant tells this one. The earth shock was so severe that the milk bottles in a case delivered for the employees of the factory were dumped out.

Down on Dundas Street east residents of a double house had a coal bin divided only by a light partition. After the earth tremor had passed, one of the residents had all the coal.

CELEBRATE FEAST OF ALL SAINTS

Monsignor Nicholson Preaches on Significance of The Feast

The Feast of All Saints, a holy day of obligation, was commemorated at the Church of the Assumption the Archangel today by the celebration of Mass at 9 o'clock, seven and nine o'clock, the last being a High Mass with the pastor as celebrant. The Mass was chanted by the children's choir.

Monsignor Nicholson spoke on the meaning of this ancient feast. The world has its heroes whom it cherishes in memory, proclaiming the world has not made a happy selection of those whom it holds up for emulation. Still, to honor the great is founded on an instinct of the human heart, a reverence for qualities that make men great. The Church has its own heroes, men, women and children who, down the ages, are associated with her origin and victories. We commemorate their memory today.

The marvelous panorama passes before us of the heavenly host, among whom we hope to find our place some day. Among these blessed saints of God are patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, confessors, virgins. At their head is Mary, Mother of Angels and Saints. The Feast of All Saints stirs us to honor their memory and stimulates us to imitate their example. Extraordinary deeds are not so much required as the worthy performance of our ordinary Christian duties.

We honor the saints and invoke the intercession of their prayers because they are friends of God. When we recite the creed we assert our belief in the communion of saints which doctrine states that all who belong to the Church can assist each other by their prayers and good example. The saints are members of the Church in Heaven and by virtue of the communion of saints may help us, their brethren who are still on earth.

Large congregations were present at all the Masses, many of the parishioners receiving Communion. This evening at seven-thirty there will be the Vespers of the Dead and a sermon preached and at eight the Office of All the Souls. Masses tomorrow morning will be at six, seven, eight and a Solemn High Mass of Requiem at nine o'clock.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

"As you wish," Bill accoded. "And about the car..... did you want to decide that, too, Mrs. Swayne?" His tone was stronger, firm with a respect he had never quite had for lovable, irresponsible, happy-go-lucky Mike Swayne. For such a heart-high little girl, she certainly was the old McCoy for hardy common sense.

"Oh," Judy said blankly, "the car. Why..... yes, Mr. Cummings. Yes." Judy felt as if she were scaling mountains, whose tiny heights, and precipices she could not hope to chart. "How much does Michael owe on it now?"

Bill grinned apologetically.

"He gave me fifty dollars," he explained, "and said he was getting something on his insurance to cover the rest. I guess he forgot or something."

Judy began to understand why so many of Michael's plans had fallen through. He had probably used the rest of his insurance money to pay for the emerald ring, and wedding ring.

"And we've had the car ever since on only fifty dollars!" Bill was uncomfortably silent. "How much do you expect is due you, Mr. Cummings for..... rent on the car? It will be rent, of course?"

"I don't know, Mrs. Swayne. It never occurred to me," he confessed in puzzled confusion before her direct, businesslike purpose. "To tell you the truth, it never occurred to me that Mike would not be able to pay for it. Mike is the salt of the earth, you know. Pretty decent."

"Yes," Judy said blankly, defeatedly, "I know, Mr. Cummings. But ..... but a little confused about money matters. Now, about the car ..... I'll have to have a definite sum agreed on. If we're to work off the debt."

"Would a hundred dollars be all right?" Bill was visibly uncomfortable. "You understand, I'm not pushing this, Mrs. Swayne. I'd far rather you let things go until Mike's able to swing this. I'd much prefer to wait."

"If Michael wants to buy back that car later," Judy "told him simply, "that will be between you two. Right now I'm budgeting this account!" She drew a deep breath. "Together with the two hundred and forty back rent, I'll owe you three fifty!" She could not even see far enough ahead in the future to imagine when the debt would be written off. "It will take some time."

"Don't let it worry you," Bill said generously. "Mike is my friend. I can wait, Cindy."

He left, and Judy went into the kitchen to make a supper of scraps. She ate mechanically, thinking harder than she had ever thought before in all her 24 years. Beside her plate was a strip of yellow scratch paper, and on it she listed everything Michael had bought for the apartment. It would all have to go. Even if Mr. Hazens proved as difficult as Mr. Blenheim had, things would go back. One by one, Judy was forcibly wrenching the iron palings from her cage and laying them aside in a pile of discard. One by one she was scrambling over mountainous obstacles that had nagged, tormented her for long, weary months. Mike made up of bleak midnight hours, with seconds eons long, as she had added, added, added the bewildering columns of debts, and tried, childishly, to shriek the combined income of Michael and herself, to cover even a portion of the staggering total.

It was right, she kept telling herself fiercely as she kept the list. It was right that they pay their debts honorably. It was wrong to gamble with someone else's good. Agreements made should be kept faithfully. Or else cancelled.

She washed her plates and glass and silver, and stacked them in the kitchen cabinet. The pot of little ivory and spring green enamel cabinet that would have to go back to Blenheims for some other young married couple to start out with.

She went into the living room and rolled up the beautiful, luxuriously simple velvet rug, after cleaning it thoroughly with the vacuum cleaner. The lovely oversized set. The card-table and chairs that Michael had entertained his friends over so many, many late nights. Nights when he demanded "revenge" for past loses, and usually collected further obligations, with only rare winnings.

The radio. The big morris chair.

It seemed but a few days ago that Michael had lounged there, turning the dials, excitedly calling her attention to the programs he picked out of the air, between artless creation of endless paper novelties which he exhibited proudly, gayly. It seemed such a bitterly short while ago that they had begun the wicker of this exquisite little parcelette. Michael's "black." His "home sweet home." His can..... call..... nurse own.

"God," she prayed childishly, "don't let him hate me for this! Don't let him misunderstand!"

Judy moved the radio out, pulled the plug and wound the cord around the cabinet. On the drawer, in the next room, she began removing things from drawers.

Michael's clothes. Here. From the closet, his topcoats, suits, shoes. Years streamed down Judy's face, while face as she worked, packing everything into their luggage. The expensive pig-skin luggage Michael had bought for their honeymoon. The expensive tweed suit and topcoat he had had tailored especially for the occasion.

A tiny black book fell out of one pocket as she folded a suit coat. A folded slip of paper with the English printing across the top. "De Wythe Custom Jewelry," the slip said. "Received of Michael Swayne, fifty dollars on account. Balance, three hundred." And on the back in fine writing, "One emerald engagement ring."

Judy sat down on the bed and burst into a storm of defeated tears.

CHAPTER 21
ALLISON MATARS PRESENT

The emerald ring glowed with a brilliant radiance of flashing fire that seemed to burn right through Judy's eyes into her brain, leaving a searing, scarred brand there. Judy picked it out of the tiny satin and velvet box of white kid and slipped it on her finger, where it left a shivery little ring of ice-cold, past the wedding ring, and the days. the hours rolled back, and she lived again that ecstatic moment when Michael had produced the ring, kissed it reverently, and, placing it on her finger, sealed their future together.

"I'll show you, sweetheart," he had promised then, in a hushed, husky voice of deep stirring emotion. "Just give me time, and I'll show you! I could go out and buy out the town..... for you."

He just about had. Only in some obscure fashion, he had bought it all on a shoestring, a shoestring that had snapped in the end, and now both ends had parted completely from sight!

"Michael," Judy whispered slowly, her thought spoken aloud unconsciously, "if you'd only given me a cheap little ring, a five-dollar ring, and paid for it, I could have at least that much....." Still.

The tears had dried on her burning face now, and Judy's fingers were unsteady, fumbling, as she placed the emerald ring back in its box, and placed it, with the De Wythe receipt, in her shabby little purse.

So the evening passed. An evening peopled with ghosts and memories and a thousand broken dreams as one by one she collected the things Michael had given her, that had never been paid for, that would never be paid for, and got them ready to return to their rightful owners.

Judy finally slept, her soft face streaked with tiny marks where tears had fallen, her eyes faintly bloodshot from exhaustion, one hand covering her soft mouth, as if to ward off blows, as if the brutaling she had gone through mentally were physical.

The alarm shrilled briskly, and it seemed as if she had been asleep only a few minutes. Her body ached with a deep physical exhaustion, and her mind felt dulled, taut from so much anxiety, so much strain. The coffee boiled, while she had her bath and dressed. She drank two cups, black an hot, standing in the little kitchenette that would no longer be hers after that day. She was dressed, ready for business, but there was no appetite, no reason to think of anything but the black coffee, and the stiff program ahead of her.

"Thank goodness, today is only a half day!" was her fervent thought as she left, an hour early, in order to have time to stop at Hazens' on the way down, and DeWythe's.

Mr. Hazens proved more difficult than the furrier had been. Perhaps there was a more faithful story to him. Or possibly he realized the simple, direct truth behind Judy's words.

"He is most unhappy for all of us, Mrs. Swayne," he said. "Would you like us to keep the furniture in storage? We can make very generous allowances in a case like this. If you like, we shall make no charge to hold them....."

Judy shook her head. "There are too many other debts that absolutely have to be met," she explained. "It's very kind of you, Mr. Hazens. I.... realize it breaks a number of business rules. But.... it isn't fair to you, either, to let this go on." She couldn't finish the argument and had planned to give him. She could only flash him a tremulous smile that was heart-breaking in its gallant attempt to hide the tears weighing her heart over the dearest

The anger of Abu Bein against Jevert had been stimulated by the specious words the Russian had cast upon the courage of the Arab and his followers. "Dog of a Nazrany," ejaculated the sheykh, "He called us cowards, we Bedawy, and left us here to guard the plunder of his camp!"

"He is but an instrument of Allah," said one of the Arabs, "in the great cause that will rid Africa of all Nazrany."

"I would rather have my freedom on the desert," said Abu Batn, "and gather wealth longer in this Nazrany camp!"

"Not Zverl always reminding us of the money, and the women, and the power we shall have when we have thrown out the English!" said Abu Batn. "Allah is moved only by his green. Let us take presents and be gone."

Judy's voice as quite steady, amazingly calm, as she answered:

"I want to keep it for best, Michael. For times when we celebrate. It ..... it makes me feel like a duchess."

He grinned, his lean fingers, pale amazingly since his illness to a golden sun-tan, picked at the counterpane restlessly, and the golden, dancing flames in his brown eyes sobered to a quiet, steady glow.

"I..... was scared you might..... might....." he began, and stopped, unable to voice the fear. Staring up at her mutely, he pleaded with her to understand.

hiigh of her little home.

"I'll be at home after two, if your boss can come. You'll have to get everything this afternoon, because I'm closing up the place tonight.

"In spite of ten years of business experience, his sympathy forged ahead of hard dollars and cents.

"I'm so very sorry, Mrs. Swayne. I wish there were something, anything, we could do to help you keep these things, I..... know how much they mean to you and Mr. Swayne."

Judy thanked him in a blurred, unsteady little voice, and almost fled from the place. She was seeing again Michael swaggering about, pointing at this chair, that divan, those draperies, these rugs, with his swagger stick, his amber eyes glowing like flames with eagerness, with bursting pride and happiness over the home—the first home he had ever known in all his life, that he'd make.

It was the same story at De Wythe's, only the scene was different, the clerk a little more suave and polished, a little more incredulous, more firm in his efforts to persuade her to keep the ring, with a deferred date of payment, and lowered installment rates. And a frigid, polite regret when she finally convinced him that it was out of the question. That they'd be fortunate to pay for their food, and a room to stay in, until Michael began working again.

"I don't want him to go to work for a long time yet," she explained. "And he will—he'll go back long before he's able, if he has these things to worry over."

The clerk was sorry, but in such a cold, unemotional way that Judy shivered, as she escaped from the place, and hurried toward the office.

The morning was a confused blur of thoughts that flashed through each working our. Things she kept remembering. Things she put down on a list that grew and grew, as the hands raced toward noon. Call the hospital, and explain to Miss Calkins that she'd not be able to come to her at the old number; make her understand that Michael must not know. She would explain it all when she came, that night. Call the tailor's, the cleaner's, the telephone and light companies, and give them a definite plan of payment on bills of several months' standing; the former possibly a year's accumulation. Engage a room at a boarding house until she could find out about a place to stay. Perhaps her old rooms, if they were free.

At one, she stopped to speak in minutes with Michael, against vigiting hour schedule, because her afternoon would be full, closing the shop.

"Got a date with that lousy contracting engineer again?" Michael knew. She would explain it all when she came, that night. Call the tailor's, the cleaner's, the telephone and light companies, and give them a definite plan of payment on bills of several months' standing; the former possibly a year's accumulation. Engage a room at a boarding house until she could find out about a place to stay. Perhaps her old rooms, if they were free.

At one, she stopped to speak in minutes with Michael, against vi-

"Why aren't you wearing your fur coat, Judy?" he asked. Critically. "It's cold out today. That wind blowing now all morning! What's the sense of hanging in a nice warm wrap away until it's out of style, out of date, and full of moth holes?"

The Importance of Accuracy and Quality in Lenses!

Accuracy and precision are the prime requisites in the manufacture of lenses and there must be no deviation from these requirements.

The very best eye examination is of little value unless the lenses are correct in every detail. That is why good results are never obtained with cheaply made glasses. Is it not sensible, then, to get the best, when they cost so little more?

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODD TIES

Detroit, Nov. 2 (CP)—Juror Theodore J. Hoover went on a brief strike yesterday for over-time pay. Ruling abruptly in the beer strike trial was in progress, Juror Hoover protested. Recall Judge Goodhue H. Eaton it was 10 seconds after time for adjournment and he would sit no longer unless assured of overtime.

"All the jurors got denied a couple of days ago while the Judges went to a funeral," Juror Hoover argued. "I think we ought to get overtime, too. It's later than 4.15 p.m."

"I assure you if you have it coming, it will be taken care of by the Board of Auditors," Judge Eaton said.

"All right," replied Hoover, taking his seat again, "just want to make sure I get it."

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 2 (AP)—A five o'clock curfew was rung last night in this "Grass Grows" city of Illinois.

It applied not to children, but to all prospective brides and bridegrooms.

Thirty-two offices as Lake County clerk, Russell H. Alford announced Waukegan's fame as a "marriage mill" was at end. His first official act was establishment of strict office hours for the issuing of marriage licenses. Licenses will hereafter be issued from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. None will be available to romantic couples who want to say the vows before going home from work. Saturday night party—taken they decide to say them before noon closing.

Mrs. Ward is demanded of Cheney for 18 months of unpaid rags and fees for 18 months' courtship, average, he also alleged Cheney had paid her $1,000 on an $800 automobile painting job. She did not say how many pairs of Cheney's rose-colored pajamas she has in her wardrobe closet.

Judge Joseph Scott will proceed a while and suggested they return each other's property, and the court coats and forget it. They shook hands and the matter was written off as res adjudicata.

ROYAL WEDDING ASSENT GIVEN

Parchment Scroll Will Be Nearly Yard Square in Old English

LONDON, Nov. 2. — (AP)—The Duke of Gloucester, third son of the King, has found preparation for his marriage Wednesday to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott a complicated business.

First of all by an ancient act the Duke had to get his father's consent, given at a meeting of the Privy Council. In the time honored phraseology royal consent has been published in the London Gazette.

Not until the King had given this royal consent by order in council could the Duke be published with the wedding preparations.

Another ancient custom of the marriage li—cense will be made at the Archbishop of Canterbury's office. That will be done on a parchment scroll nearly a yard square in old English lettering.

The death of the bride's father in October caused the pageantry usually associated with royal weddings to be discarded in favor of a quiet private ceremony in the chapel of Buckingham Palace.

Invitations 'ill be sent to the bride's home from the Palace. For the ceremony 'ill be about a year's newlyweds from the palace to a station to board the train for their honeymoon trip.

M. McCARDELL IS GIVEN 12 YEARS

Confessed Kidnapper of J. S. Labatt Sent to Penitentiary

London, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Michael McCardell, confessed kidnapper of John S. Labatt, 5-year son last August, was sentenced to 2 years in Kingston Penitentiary when he appeared before Magistrate Hawkins today.

McCardell was the third man to be sentenced for the snatch of the wealthy youngster. David Meisner, former Cincinnati bookmaker, and Jack Shannon, ex-beer-runner, are already serving 15-year terms.

McCardell was chief Crown witness in the trial of Bannon, absolved by the jury of all blame in the crime in his testimony.

Magistrate Hawkins Hawkshaw if he had anything to say when he appeared today for sentence, McCardell replied: "I only want to assure Mr. Labatt there will be no reprisals."

PREMIER CLOSES NINETEEN HOTELS IN THE PROVINCE

Considered "Tied" Hotels By The Government

BREWERS WARNED

BREWERS WARNED Told Not to Have Any Interest in Hotel Properties

Toronto, Nov. 2.—(CP)—Doors of beverage rooms in nineteen Ontario hotels did not open for business today following a government order suspending their beer and wine authorities, they are considered "tied" hotels by the Government.

Fourteen of the hotels affected are in Toronto, and the remaining five in Windsor, St. Catharines, Sarnia, Port Dover and Woodstock.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, in announcing the decision of the Cabinet after it had considered the report of Liquor Commissioner E. G. Odette, said operation of the hotels definitely was linked through a firm known as Mohawk Investments, Ltd., with Breweries affiliated with Brewing Corporation of Canada.

"We are not," Premier Hepburn said, "opposed to the chain hotel system, but this was a clear-cut case of hotels being operated for the sole purpose of selling particular brands of liquor, other words establishing a monopoly for sale."

Cure is Sought For Common Cold

New York, Nov. 2. — Columbia University will soon begin experiments with a new type of vaccine which may be truly effective in immunizing human beings against the common cold, it was announced by Dr. Alphonse R. Dochez of the university's department of medicine, announced at the eighth annual graduate fortnight of the Academy of Medicine.

The vaccine with which Columbia will experiment will contain a filterable virus, which tests at the university have proved to be the cause of the common cold, Dr. Dochez explained. The vaccine will also contain certain of the bacteria which are associated with colds and which are believed to be secondary invaders

"No one, of course, can predict what amount of success the future holds for the method of prophylactic immunization against acute infection of the upper respiratory tract," Dr. Dochez said. We propose, however, to give a thorough and critical trial to a method calling for the development of prophylactic vaccines containing both the virus of common colds and a certain number of other important organisms."

2 P.C. OF WEALTH IN UNIVERSITIES

Amount Devoted to Training Young Canada $579,571,187

Ottawa, Nov. 2 (CP)—Two per cent of the total estimated national wealth of Canada, is invested in schools and universities.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has estimated the amount of capital devoted to training young Canadians at $579,571,187, roughly two per cent of the country's total assets.

Canadians have twice as much money invested in schools as in the electricity supply industry, only a little less than in the mining industry or in automobiles,about one-fifth as much as in railways and banks, one-tenth as much as in farming.

University and college property is valued at $145,000,000 and normal, private, Indian and special school property at $50,000,000. The bureau could offer no data on the debts of these institutions but estimates they would probably be offset by endowments which amount to about $50,000,000.

Italo - Ethiopian Peace Grows More Remote as League Sets Sanctions

Sir Samuel Hoare Speaks Plainly to Baron Aloisi

MAY REDUCE STRENGTH

Part of Fleet May be Withdrawn From Mediterranean

BY WADE WERNER
(Copyright, 1935, By The Associated Press)

Geneva, Nov. 2 (AP)—The League Nations' committee of 18 for "immediate" sanctions decided today upon November 18 as the date for enforcement of an economic boycott of Italy.

The committee's decision was unanimous and took the form of a recommendation to the full membership committee of the nations, expected to meet late in the day.

In view of the unanimity of the committee of 18, League sources deemed it likely the general committee would endorse the decision.

The League, with Italo-Ethiopian peace growing more remote, had already brushed aside technical obstacles to early adoption of economic sanctions.

Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare of Great Britain and Baron Aloisi of Italy discussed the East African conflict and the grave international tension between Britain and Italy in an interview lasting three-quarters of an hour.

Subsequently, an Italian spokesman said the conversation was cordial and in the nature of a general review of the situation. There were no indications in diplomatic circles, however, the general situation had improved.

An authoritative source said Great Britain was ready to withdraw some of its powerful naval units from the Mediterranean if there was a cessation of tension between Italy and Britain—tension which the British considered unjustified and provoked by the Italian press and more recently by manifestations against British-controlled shops in Rome.

Canada Makes Proposal

The committee of 18 decided on November 18 as the date for the application of economic sanctions after its sub-committee on clearing agreements recommended the boycott of Italy be launched first and then decide as settlement of questions of credit balances remaining in Italy's unfrozen funds.

Canada proposed to the committee of 18 and all of the nations on the list of products, exportation of which would be prohibited under the League-voted sanction. They are purchases by League stated from Italy and shipments of products to Italy; Great Britain and France

Free Thinkers Demand Return of 20 Cents

New York, Nov. 2.—Assertions that Trinity Church is selling "phoney cards" to those who call there at Wednesday Washington making it appear to be a prayer were made before the Supreme Court of the Free Thinkers Society of America by Joseph Lewis, "Chief Justice Supreme Court" Justice Shienkag, who dismissed his suit for an injunction to restrain the church from selling the cards at 10 cents each.

The Free Thinkers also demand that the society be accepted as an attendant in St. Paul's Chapel on Feb. 10, 1934, for two cards bought by representatives of the society and asked $5,000 additional as punitive damages for the persistent deception and fraud in obtaining money for such worthless cards." The complaint also asks that a tablet marking a prayer which Washington made there be removed from the church.

Chas Mellen, counsel for Trinity, stated in a brief that the plaque on Washington's pew and the cards sold by the church under is printed state that the source is W. G. Ford's collection of Washington's writings. Mr. Mellen admitted that the letter in that collection which is exactly the same as the "prayer" ascribed to Washington but forms part of a letter to Washington's wife.

Any one who objects to any part of a sermon preached in St. Paul's might have a cause of action on the ground that his "sensibilities" were offended.

Entrance was obtained by means of sliding down the coal chute into the coal and basement and then opening the cellar door that led to the main floor of the store. Later the local police ransacked and rifled all drawers and desks in the office but as all cash was securely locked in a large safe, nothing was taken.

SECOND QUAKE NOT FELT HERE

Shocks Were Light

The first two shocks were light but that of 7.30 p.m. was felt quite distinctly by a seismograph. It lasted about one minute. Mr. Hodgson said no aftershocks of yesterday's quake were recorded until this morning, which is unusual inasmuch as they generally occur immediately after the original quake.

The observatory was unable to determine the time of the first shock as the recorded ad sheets on the seismograph were being changed. Officials said they would not disturb the instruments again today unless further shocks occurred because they took a chance of missing a quake each time they changed sheets.

Toronto, Nov. 2.—(CP)—William O. Carroll, seismologist at the Dominion Meteorological Bureau here, reported another earthquake, the fifth another slight earth tremor of a few seconds' duration at 8.35 a.m. today. Mr. Carroll said he had had several telephone calls reporting the disturbance but had immediately started to check his seismograph.

The tremor had been listed very very slight and not generally as noticeable as the disturbance at 1.06 a.m. Friday.

Mr. Carroll explained it would be some time before he could get official data on the tremor as the seismograph there had to be developed and computations made.

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Earth tremors were felt in this district at 8.35 a.m. this morning but they did not last as long as Friday morning's disturbance. The quake was very noticeable to persons in the streets and in homes.

Owen Sound, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Return of earth tremors to Ontario was indicated today when a "quake was felt here at about 8.30 o'clock this morning. Owen Sound residents said the "quake was "quite noticeable".

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—At exactly 8.33 o'clock this morning another earth tremor was felt in North Bay but lasted only a few seconds.

The tremor was felt by many persons on the streets and the shock felt in practically all the homes in the city.

Rochester, N.Y., Nov. 2.—(AP)—Several residents of outlying sections reported shocks from 10 min. today there were several slight earthquakes they thought were repetitions of the morning's severe quake.

One woman living just outside the city said her home swayed perceptibly and newspaper offices had several calls just after 10 o'clock.

As far as could be learned the tremors were not felt in the downtown section.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 2.—(AP)—Slight earth tremors like yesterday's earthquake were recorded on the seismograph of Canisius College this morning, but no damage was done throughout Buffalo.

Father John P. Delaney, in charge of the seismograph, said the first shock came at 8.23 a.m. and 8.33 a.m. He stated they usually follow a quake such as was felt yesterday at intervals of approximately 10 minutes.

Kitchener, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Second tremor was felt here at 9.30 o'clock this morning. It was not as slight it was not generally noticed. Desks at the Canadian Goodrich Rubber Company reacted slightly.

St. Jacob's, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Friday's earthquake was a new elixir of life to the people of this little artesian well in this village. The flow of water ever since the disturbance has been heavier than ever before in its history.

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 2.—(CP)—Faint earthquake shocks were felt in Sudbury at 8.33 a.m. this morning. The jolts were so weak few noticed them. Dishes rattled in some homes and windows in streets detected a slight trembling.

Policeman Loses His Club Bag

When a man bites a dog, that's news, so when a burglar steals from a police officer, he also should constitute something along similar lines. On Saturday night in Belleville burglars limited from the door of Constable Reginald Jones, the person's automobile and stole a club bag and contents, valued at $50.00. The man subsequently broke into the entire robbery is the fact, that Constable Hodgson's automobile was left parked directly in front of the police station, while he was attending the Hallowe'en dance at the Armouries Arena.

Officer Hodgson who resides at Brampton and is a member of Provincial Police Force, was in town holidaying in Belleville at the time of the robbery. Mr. Hodgson parked his motor car in front of the station house and locked the doors, upon his return, however, the left-hand door had been jimmied open and the valued club bag stolen. To make the robbery more predominate as news, the local police department was out in full force and augmented that night, but perhaps the help rather than to help for it is just outside the portals of any police station. No information in relationship to the discovery of the club bag had been received to date.

Ethiopians Said to be Rushing Troops to Central Sector

By JAMES A. MILLS

Addis Ababa, Nov. 2 (AP)—Ethiopian military headquarters was understood authoritatively today to have made plans to rush troops into the central sector to stem any Italian advance on the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad.

Headquarters was said to be expecting daily that Italian forces in the Mount Musa Ali region would launch their heralded drive to cut off the railroad, Ethiopia's only modern route to the outside world.

Informants said the spearhead of the attack would be armored cars and tanks and the Italian objective would be the town of Afdam, 60 miles west of Diredawa.

The Ethiopian headquarters was understood to be ready to hasten six warriors from Harar and Diredawa areas to guard the railway, considered a vital element in the safety and defense of the empire.

Emperor Haile Selassie who celebrates the fifth anniversary of his coronation tomorrow announced he had given to the Ethiopian Red Cross all the household properties of Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa, former son-in-law of the Emperor and Governor of Makale, who went over to the Italians.

If Gugsa ever attempts to return, authorities said, he will be tried for treason and probably sentenced to death.

'Isostatic Balance' of Earth Disturbed Say Scientists of Tremors

In Other Words The Earth Shifted The Surface Load

C.N.R. HARD HIT

Epicentre Definitely Fixed 120 Miles North of Ottawa

By The Canadian Press

The east forgot its earthquake fears today as predicted follow-up tremors failed to appear following Friday morning's disturbance. Possibility of further minor shocks remained, however, although seismologists did not agree on whether they were likely.

William G. Carroll, attached to the Dominion Meteorological Bureau in Toronto, said it was unlikely that further tremors would be felt. Ernest A. Hodgson, of the Dominion Observatory and Dr. Don Lee of Harvard University, agreed that after-shocks nearly always occur at the epicentre.

The epicentre was about 130 miles north of Ottawa, in the vicinity of Parent and Doucet, Que. It was at this source the greatest damage occurred and from which spread the ripples along the earth's crust that were felt as far west as Port William, as far east as Saint John, N.B. and 17 cities of the United States.

Earth Shifted Load

Science described the tremors as a disturbance of the "isostatic balance, in other words the earth shifted its surface load.

Heaviest loser through damage was the Canadian National Railways whose line running through Parent was heaved and torn by the quake. A sand fill-in on the Mancoan subdivision, slid into a small lake, leaving a gap in the roadbed 216 feet long and 40 feet deep.

Passengers are being taken up to the load today before being transferred to trains on the other side. Freight traffic was rerouted. Joe O'Neill C.N.R. station agent at Parent, said he believed the tremors most have caused some displacement of rock from the mountain sides.

Dr. Hodgson, chief seismologist at Ottawa, will leave Monday for the epicentre to discover if the contour of the country there was changed in any way.

Popular concert, movie and radio star, together with Richard Crooks, metropolitan baritone, will be guest artist on the new "Voice of Firestone" series commencing Monday evening, Nov. 4th.

CANADA OFFERS HUGE BOND ISSUE

75 Million — Will Be Used For General Purposes

Ottawa, Nov. 2.—Finance Minister C. A. Dunning announced Friday night that a $75,000,000 Dominion of Canada bond issue will be offered to the Canadian public on Monday next.

In Two Series

The bonds will be in two maturities, 4-year 3-per-cent. bonds maturing November 15, 1939, at 98.63, and accrued interest, to yield 3.15 per cent. to maturity; and 10½-year 3-per-cent. bonds maturing June 1, 1945, at 98⅞, and accrued interest, to yield approximately 3.08 per cent. to maturity.

The long-term 3-per-cent. bonds will be callable at 100, and interest on or after June 1, 1900.

The proceeds of the issue will be used for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

Application may be made to the Bank of Canada through any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or through recognized dealers. All subscriptions will be subject to allotment.

Expects Good Response

Mr. Dunning expressed confidence that the issue would receive a favorable response from Canadian institutions and individual investors. Commenting on the general financial situation, he said:

"These are times in which financial responsibilities of a Government are particularly onerous. To the maintenance of ordinary Government service is now added the very heavy burden involved in meeting the problem of unemployment.

"At the same time we must all recognize that there are limits to the amount of debt which present and future generations of Canadians can be called upon to bear, and the Government has no uncertain view as to the necessity of the early balancing of the budget and the ordering by financing of its maturing and callable obligations. While our problems are weighty, I see none that cannot be solved by energy, co-operation and common sense.

"I appeal to all those who are interested in the financial stability and welare of our country to support the present issue. I have every confidence that the offering will receive prompt and favorable and immediate and favorable response."

ONTARIO SELLS BOND ISSUE

15 Million Short Term Loan at 2.65 Rate

The Ontario Government has sold a $15,000,000 short-term issue of bonds to a brokerage syndicate headed by Wood, Gundy and Company, it was learned at Queen's Park, Friday. The issue consists of three-and-half-year debentures, and was floated at 2.65.

First intimation that the Government was financing came immediately announcements which simply described a loan to be provided by the loan it was stated, will "used to retire $15,000,000 of bonds and other indebtedness maturing on Dec. 1, which were issued in 1930, at a cost to the then Government of 92.34-8.62 per-cent.

GERMAN WOUNDS FELLOW VETERAN

Shooting Occurred in Lonely Cabin in The Far.

While Court, Alta., Nov. 2 (CP)—Through the snowy wastes of the barrens, Otto Schmid, a German war veteran, trudged with a dog team today to bring to an outpost hospital on this northern Alberta settlement, a fellow veteran Eric Moeller, whom he shot and wounded in a trapper's lonely cabin 15 miles distant.

The hospital at this settlement 165 miles from Peace River, prepared early in readiness to receive Moeller and from Edmonton a plane was coming to perform an operation.

Schmid told Royal Canadian Mounted Police that the shooting occurred after Moeller reached for his revolver. The bullet nicked a bone in Moeller's wrist and veered upwards, striking the man just below the heart.

They had been involved in a court case over ownership of a dog. Schmid, believing Moeller was robbing his cabin, took Tom Martin another trapper, to Moeller's cabin Wednesday night.

Accused of theft, Moeller was said to have drawn a revolver. Schmid shot first.

Schmid travelled by snowshoes to Peace River, where he reported. He obtained a dog team so he could return for the injured man.

ITALO-ETHIOPIAN PEACE

supported this proposal.

It was in this atmosphere of determination on swift enforcement of economic sanctions the meeting was held between Baron Aloisi, Premier Mussolini's spokesman at Geneva, and Great Britain's Foreign Secretary.

Hoare Talks Frankly

Hoare talked frankly with Aloisi, authoritative sources said, and informed him the British government was anxious for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, but "no settlement can be contemplated, which goes over the head of the Emperor of Ethiopia or contrary to League principles."

Unfortunately, these sources said Hoare told Aloisi, no basis for a settlement which covers these two considerations seems to be in prospect.

The Foreign Secretary assured Aloisi the search for a basis of settlement, embracing respect for the sovereignty of Ethiopia and League principles, would be continued indefinitely.

Sir Samuel emphasized the fact the East African war was not a dispute between Italy and Britain.

He exhorted Aloisi to do everything possible to prevent the Anglo-Italian aspect of the situation from being emphasized or exploited and pledged his word Britain would do its part to bring about lessening of any tension.

Attention Called

Hoare called attention to the vicious anti-British campaign in Italy and the large number of Italian forces in Italy's North African possession of Libya, bordering on Egypt.

The foreign secretary voiced hope everything possible would be done to ameliorate the situation, thus apparently alluding to a British desire to see more Italian troops leave Libya than the one division thus far recalled.

Referring to the reinforced British navy in the Mediterranean, Sir Samuel said he would study the entire question of Anglo-French relations in the Mediterranean upon his return to London next weekend.

Authoritative sources said the British were ready to reduce the strength of their fleet in the Mediterranean because of a complete understanding reached between Britain and France concerning general European co-operation and mutual support in the event of an attack by the Italians in the Mediterranean sea.

British sources said French warships theoretically would replace British units, making it less and less necessary for the British fleet to be maintained at its present strength.

No decision has as yet been made, however, they said, to withdraw any British units.

MEMBER IS ASKED FOR RESIGNATION

Australian Premier Says Minister Not in Accord

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 2 (CP Cable via Reuters)—Prime Minister James Lyons announced today he had asked William Morris Hughes Vice-President of the executive council, to resign from the cabinet owing to differences on the question of sanctions.

Dr. Lyons, in a telegram to Hughes referred to a passage in Hughes' book: "Australia and War Today," which says, "economic sanctions either mean an empty gesture or mean war."

The telegram said "this diametrically opposes the government's policy, challenges its wisdom and calamity and strikes at the root of our support of the League and the loyal discharge of our covenant obligations."

It added Hughes' position in the cabinet appeared untenable. his views having been quoted in support of the attack of the Labor party on the government's policy. Therefore, Dr. Lyons regretfully asked for Hughes' resignation, since he could not have a divided front in this vital matter. The telegram concluded.

It was sent following a social meeting of the cabinet.

William Morris Hughes was Prime Minister of Australia from 1915 until 1923, a member of the imperial war cabinet 1916-23 and a delegate to the Peace Conference of 1919. He has been a member of the House of Representatives since 1901.

Lost in Woods Aged Man Found

Hudson, Nov. 2—Weary and hungry, but otherwise showing no ill effects after wandering for nearly a week in the bush near Deacon Lake, south of here, in the northwestern part of Ontario, 70-year-old Walter Bishop was found by searchers Friday.

Only meagre details were available, but reports said Bishop was in good physical condition except for being very tired and famished.

Winter weather settled over the heavily settled hinterlands, and searchers feared for the safety of the aged man, who lives near Redgill, on the main line of the Canadian National Railways.

Ontario Provincial Police let posses of settlers in the search.

QUAKE EPICENTRE WILL BE SOUGHT

Ottawa, Nov. 2—(CP)—Dr. Ernest A. Hodgson, seismologist at the Dominion Observatory here, started preparations today to leave on a search for the epicentre of the earthquake that rocked the eastern half of North America early yesterday.

Dr. Hodgson will leave Monday by train for an area on the old Canadian National Railways transcontinental line about 130 miles north of Ottawa where the tremors are believed to have originated. He does not know how long his investigation will take but expressed the belief last night the search would be difficult owing to the wildness of the country and its sparse settlement.

Dr. Hodgson and Dr. R. Meldrum Stewart, director of the observatory, estimated the epicentre 130 miles northwest of Ottawa after checking records of their seismographs with those of other North American stations and receiving reports of damage from the area east of Doucet Que.

They agreed after shocks might be felt but Dr. Hodgson said they probably would occur close to the epicentre and might not be heavy enough to be felt far from that spot where the earth's crust broke or skidded, yielding under some stress that might have been accumulated over a vast length of time.

WELCOME TO LORD TWEEDSMUIR

Canada's new Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir is welcomed to the post which he will hold for the next seven years. Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and his Government will greet the incoming viceroy tonight on the boat at Quebec and entertain him in the Provincial capital.

His Excellency has had a long and practical career in diplomacy and politics and a famous life as a writer of stories and other literary works of a historical character and his term of office should prove one of the most interesting in the history of the viceregal office. The added fact that he was a commoner until recently adds interest to Lord Tweedsmuir's coming.

Scots all over Canada will be delighted to have their brawn John Buchan come and dwell among them for a while.

Canada delights to greet the new viceroy, Lady Tweedsmuir and their family.

PURE ENJOYMENT

More pure enjoyment of Hallowe'en this year, more children and youths and others participating in the festivities and the hilarities of the night were the best commentators upon the celebration in Belleville. While there was slight damage by a few rowdies, the harm done was infinitesimal as compared with the pleasure of the celebration. It was ever so—the best fun is always the most innocent fun, else how could children be so happy?

THE EARTH DID SHAKE

Friday morning's experience with earthquake tremors revives the feeling many had back some years ago when a quake which was very severe in eastern Quebec was felt in Belleville on a Saturday during the early evening business hours. Many however did not feel the shock at that time but the extended time and the severity of the tremors in the latest movement of the earth's crust made Friday morning's experience one long to be remembered by the great majority of the people. Everyone had an experience of his and her own and the event will be a topic of conversation for some time.

MARK TWAIN

The whole world stops for a moment to think of the creator of immortal stories and characters, and of the United States type of humor for Friday was the centenary of the birth of Samuel Clemens, better known as Mark Twain.

Love of farce and comedy was never so great as it is today. This is evident in fiction and in everyday life. One reason may be that the stress of modern life causes the craving for that lightness of touch and hearty spirit which comedy and farce invoke to suffer for the problems of present day existence. Many years ago no less a world figure than the late Lawrence Irving, son of Sir Henry Irving and himself a noted actor, told a Belleville interviewer that the Canadian loved comedy and farce in preference to tragedy. Somehow this love of the lighter is inborn in the people of this country.

Twain can never be overshadowed. Geniuses greater in some ways may come and go but Mark Twain's fame is assured forever. There after many years his stories still appeal to the boy and girl, the man and woman because they are concerned with the human heart.

Stories of Samuel Clemens it is only the rare one who is so gifted as to see with unfailing vision the human heart. In the case of such instinct is unfailing because the love of humanity is unfailing.

Boys of New York City at a grand picnic presented a petition signed by 25,000 of them, requesting the mayor to buy the old Mark Twain house at 21 Fifth Avenue as a shrine for the boys of the city. The two boys presenting the petition were dressed as Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer. In the parade the same day were "peaked straw" hats, carried fishing poles, had blackened faces, to represent characters out of that vast and teeming social comedy, the colorful work of Mark Twain. They also bore signs demanding a memorial of Twain. The anonymous housekeeper in the former Twain home did not know what they meant. The home had forgotten Twain but someone had draped the iron fence about the red-brick home with bunting, and inside the dim discreet-voiced housekeeper who refused to give her name, looking down a dark stair well admitted that the old house had come to life that day, with people staring at it from bus-tops or passing to and fro before the bronze tablet for longer intervals than ever before. This tablet stated that Washington Irving had also at one time dwelt here.

How close this humorist came to the lives of boys can surely be realized. No man could seek to leave any better memorial than creations of characters which live in the imaginations of the world's boyhood forever.

GARDEN OF THE GODS, BAY OF QUINTE DISTRICT, WAS SHAKEN Friday morning by a baby earthquake, and for a few seconds we thought we might have to revise some of our frequent boasts that this district is free of hurricanes, earthquakes, famines and pestilences which afflict other less favored lands. However, we were rocked but not knocked and the disturbance passed off very quietly as an aftermath of the Hallowe'en celebration. A few tins danced around in the kitchens and the delicate balance of some home pictures may have been thrown out of plumb for the time, but, aside from the novelty there was nothing to be alarmed about, and the Great Family Journal's telegraph, wire and wireless connection with all parts of the world brought us the information that our baby earthquake was but the last shiver of a shake which started in Honduras and got to shaking real bad in Montana before calling it a day and ending out a few shivers to the rest of the continent.

JIMMIE WALKER HAS RETURNED TO NEW YORK AFTER THREE YEARS' EXILE. Jimmie was the most popular Mayor New York City ever had, and his sudden departure from that burg was hastened by the inquisitiveness of a certain reform investigation which wished to ascertain where all the money came from necessary to keep Jimmie going in the style in which he was accustomed since becoming Mayor. Even the Tammany Tiger could not help Jimmie in his extremity so he removed himself across the Atlantic to wait until a possible change of administration and a public forgetfulness would make it convenient for him to return. Jimmie as Mayor only took advantage of the easy money situation prevailing in official Tammany governed New York and if he found a few thousand dollars profit coming to him occasionally from stock investments made for him by others he just put it down to an all-year round Santa Claus. However, by and large, Jimmie Walker was a good fellow, and he certainly was a good Mayor of New York, for no celebrity ever had anything to complain of in the reception line. As a show-piece Mayor Jimmie was the goods, on the business side he was a bit ragged. Jimmie's Jimmie's home and is getting the glad hand on all sides—on sides a more or less warm welcome from forgotten friends with past due accounts while in his day of having Jimmie forgot to settle. A whole lot of people to whom Jimmie loaned money in the halycon days of the past listened to the reappearance of the debtor on the scene. So Yesterdays are behind him, his Today's are with him—what his Tomorrows will be depend largely upon himself and the use of his past experience.

New Message of Hope For Crippled Children

Belleville Rotary Club Campaign in Behalf of Children—Hon. Dr. Faulkner to Speak

For those who have eyes to see and ears to hear the dawn of of a new day has arrived—sights and sounds of a new era are more than audible in the land.

The fact that more than two hundred crippled children of Belleville and district who would otherwise have received no medical treatment at all have received the kind and careful medical treatment of the most skilful specialists in the land in the past few years is indeed positive fact there is a new spirit moving, a spirit of loving-kindness and concern for the health and happiness of others, more especially the children.

Over two hundred crippled children given specialist treatment, most of them completely cured, all of them helped, is a wonderful story of Christian helpfulness and a cheerful acknowledgment by many men that "I am my brother's keeper."

When it is considered that some of the children under treatment have been receiving specialist treatment in the Hospital for Sick Children as long as two years one can imagine the extent of the work and its thoroughness.

MIRACLES OF HEALING

Belleville Rotary Club undertook this work several years ago and the members have given of their time and money freely in extending to as many crippled children as possible the blessings of medical specialist treatment. The work has expanded beyond the limits of the city and the Rotary Club is now entering a very much larger field of action and wish to extend the work to all parts of the district, as well as helping as much as possible the general work in the province.

Belleville has attained widespread fame as leader in this work of rescuing crippled children from the pain and sorrow of a lifetime of heapmeal and handicapped existence and with a large visit of opportunity opening it is purposed to permit the general public to participate in this wonderful work and share in the blessing which has always attended any help extended to the weak and helpless among us. When the Saviour of Nazareth told the doubters who bid Him to suffer them not to forbid them to come unto Him and forbid them not for

OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN"

HON. DR. FAULKNER'S MESSAGE

A Bigger and Better Campaign in behalf of the crippled children of this district has been planned and the first shot will be fired in public Monday night. Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, will address the members of the Belleville Rotary Club in like fashion as at noon on previous occasions affecting the crippled child in Ontario and what is being done and can be done to bring sunshine into their lives and start them on the road to complete cure of their affliction, if obtainable. Following this inspirational meeting the Rotarians will go into a huddle and arrange to go places and do things. A campaign of education will be conducted so that all may know the extent of the work already effected and accomplished, and to be done, and how best to do it. The plans include the publishing of a special edition of the Ontario Intelligencer by Rotarians which will tell by word and picture the story of the crippled child—the voice of the crippled child crying out for help. Who can refuse that plaintive cry?

ROTARY DAY A SURPRISE

Rotary Day for the Crippled Children is another high spot planned for the campaign and it is expected that that day, earmarked for the near future, will be long to be remembered with pleasure.

Information as to the plans and purposes of the campaign will be published as they develop and there is no doubt that all citizens of this district will be greatly and helpfully interested in the work.

COL. WOOD'S VIEW UPON ELECTION

Why Alberta Adopted Social Credit in Provincial Voting

Canadian political life is developing a new social consciousness, in the view of Hon. Lt.-Col. J. H. Woods, O.M., a member of the Canadian delegation to Geneva, interviewed in London by "Canada's Weekly". Col. Woods' exposition of

"Amid all the political happenings of the year the main question that is exercising the minds of thinking people, is: 'What are the real impulses and motives that have led the electorate to express such drastic changes of sentiment?' Why should the people turn so single mass number of the party which had administered it for twenty years and give fifty-six seats out of sixty-three to another party whose policy is entirely new and but little known? Again, why should Alberta have voted so solidly for Social Credit?

"The phenomenon of the Social Credit party is surely one of the most singular freaks of politics which has occurred in any modern country. As a strong critic of this new policy, I am willing to pay tribute to the political sagacity character of Mr. Aberhart, the party's leader. He is a sincere and earnest Christian, who has taught his Bible class in Calgary for over twenty years. Deeply concerned at the distress of some of our people, he probably failed to find in the more orthodox methods of Government the means to better their condition. The Cleary of Social Credit appealed to his imaginative and he espoused it, notwithstanding the opinion of every competent authority on economics that such a policy could not be made applicable in practice in a single Province with a population of 800,000 set in the middle of the Dominion. The mentality which led the people of Alberta to adopt Social Credit, and of other Provinces to effect drastic changes in their political representation, deserves the attention of all serious statesmen, for in it may be found the clue to what is in the minds of people in many parts of the world.

"As far as Alberta is concerned, doubtless there are those who found danger.

an irresistible attraction in the promised payment of $5 per month. But that does not explain why others who believe that the bounty will never be paid, and people who have no need of the money, and probably would not claim it, also voted for Social Credit. It is with, in my personal knowledge that whole districts inhabited by relatively wealthy people supported the scheme, although they would probably be the most heavily taxed to provide the bounty. Nor can it be said that the less wealthy in Alberta, or any other Province, are unintelligent.

"Canada is not in the position of an uneducated proletariat under conditions of direct hardship turning to some new form of Government out of a policy of sheer desperation. On the farms of Canada can be found a higher proportion of men with a university education than in any other country in the world. In my view the answer to the question lies deeper than a change made merely for the sake of change. It is the manifestation of the consciousness of a need for new policies to meet the economic and social plan of our national life, factors which will be adequate to cope with the situation that now confronts us after years of depression. It is a consciousness of a new need that must be met. Few who voted for Social Credit have any reason to see it put into operation in the form in which it was presented to them at the election, but they feel that out of it will come something that will be for the economic and social good of the Province.

"Canadians may have their hardships, but from my travels I know that in comparison with many other countries they are well off. If Canadians could only see for themselves the privation and uncertainty, of circumstances endured by many other nationalities they would go down on their knees and thank God that they live in such a country."

FASCIST ITALY STRIKES BACK

Drives Forward With War And Reprisals Against Sanctions

By GEORGE JOBDAN

Rome, Nov. 2 (AP)—Fascist Italy struck back at a League of Nations boycott, now considered virtually inevitable, by driving forward today with its war in Ethiopia and directing further reprisals against nations imposing sanctions.

Following the strident demonstrations against Great Britain, which caused a temporary closing of some British shops, reprisals against "sanctionist" countries were extended to newspapers and other types of publications.

Postage and sale of newspapers and periodicals from nations imposing sanctions were forbidden this morning in Turin. Heads of that northern city were required to withdraw from the journals, posters and booklets of "sanctionist" countries from their reading rooms.

Intensifying in its worldwide adjustment of troops to East Africa, the government announced three steamers would leave Naples tomorrow with 10,000 Blackshirt troops.

Toronto Conference, association of minor Ethiopian chieftains and arrival of new men and supplies marked the dawn of the 31st day since General Emilio de Bono's northern army launched his successful drive on Adowa. The Ethiopian campaign concluded the first month quietly.

Besides the food restrictions and other economies ordered effective next Tuesday to counteract the effects of sanctions at home, Italy's railroads were ordered to reduce services.

When British Sailors Risked Lives in Reseue

One of the incidents which helped to ease the tense situation existing between England and Italy was precipitated by the fire and explosion aboard the Italian liner Ausonia, as it lay at anchor in the harbor at Alexandria, Egypt. This spectacular picture shows the ship blazing fiercely. Three men were injured in the explosion and seven lost. Two of the dead were the surviving members of the crew and the thirty-five passengers were taken off safely by British naval craft also lying in the harbor. The Italian government immediately made its appreciation for the courageous rescue effected known.

Arctic Night Wins Race With Radium-Laden Ship

The northland's eight-month long night creeps closer and closer to the Arctic coast this week, parallying water and air transportation with approaching sleet.

With a $500,000 cargo of radium aboard, the Soviet mineral shipment to come south by water out of the Great Bear Lake mining district, the ice-breaking company's river steamer, S.S. Northland Echo, is racing Fort Chipewyan, Alberta, on Lake Athabasca. The Echo, last river steamer to come south from Fort Fitzgerald, has a big human cargo made up of trappers, traders, mushing wood choppers, who'll spend summer days and nights piling up cord wood along the banks of northland rivers for the paddle steamers. Royal Canadian Mounted police furlough for the first time in three years, missionaries, radio station crews and representatives of every phase of life in the land of the midnight sun.

Should the Echo be unable to force herself, passengers will disembark from the end of the Northern Alberta Railway's steel. Meanwhile, wind, rain, snow and ice have grounded aeroplanes in the north.

Tied up at Chipewyan as well is a large cargo of machinery for the Athabasca gold fields. Pushing a barge load of freight, the boat probably will be frozen in until next spring.

MORE TREMORS WILL FOLLOW

(By the Canadian Press)

Further earthquake shocks will follow the tremor that ran across eastern parts of the continent, seismologists said today. Their intensity could not be predicted.

From official reportings, the epicentre of the early morning tremor was placed within a 200-mile radius of Ottawa. Dominion Observatory officials said the epicentre probably was 180 miles northwest of Ottawa in sparsely-settled country.

Dr. L. D. Leet of Harvard University at Cambridge, Mass., said further shocks were certain: "Some may be small, some large; we don't know how large. He expressed surprise none other than minor damage over the whole area was reported.

Meanwhile, aid was being rushed to quake-stricken Montana where a shock almost 12 hours earlier brought death to two persons and caused heavy damage. Helena, the capital, underwent its second shock within a month.

Moral for the Immoral

(By JOHN E. DE ROSO)

Frankie Amory had never been in love. He did not believe in love. He said there was no such thing. At least, not for him. He was right.

For Frankie, alas, was a professional gentleman, i. gigolo—a genteel swindler, clever at the precarious art of blackmail. He could not afford to believe in love. It would not be wise.

But Frankie, despite all his wisdom, had erred, and the police were after him. He had made the sad mistake of pretending to make love to a police commissioner's wife, a very wealthy woman. Unfortunately, however, her husband happened to be a remarkably perceptive man and in a short time Frankie was very hurriedly leaving the city.

Frankie alighted at a summer resort high in the mountains. He took a room at the leading hotel and slept through most of the day. That night at a costume masquerade he met Mrs. Winters, a wealthy, middle-aged divorcee. Frankie immediately went to work.

That week-end he was a guest at a house party in the great white castle on the mountside that was the Winters' mansion. And there he met Stephanie. He had been strolling among the guests with the possessive and almost girlish air, Winters and they had come upon a large group at one end of the drawing room. Mrs. Winters playfully grasped one of the men by the sleeve.

"This is my bad, bad nephew Lyle," she said to Frankie, smiling broadly. "Lyle, this is Mr. Amory."

"Lyle has brought a charming young thing for the week-end," said Mrs. Winters. "I hear he has been paying a great deal of attention to her in the city." She smiled insinuatingly.

Frankie could catch only an occasional glimpse of the shoulder of the girl beyond Lyle. She was almost entirely screened by the men about her. Lyle turned toward her. "Oh Stephanie."

The girl emerged from the circle smiling. Her eyes met Frankie's.

Frankie gasped. His heart seemed to stand still.

The next morning he sought out Stephanie. "I must talk to you," he implored. "I've got to talk some where?"

She nodded eagerly, her eyes very bright, very innocent, very young. "I'll get a jacket—" She flushed at his arm in a gesture of confidence. "I won't be a moment!"

He watched as she hurried away. She was so sweet!

They followed a little path up the mountainside and sat for hours in a cleared space overlooking the broad valley below.

After dinner they went for a drive. In the gradually gathering darkness they drove slowly up the mountain road. Passing a smooth stretch of grass Frankie swerved the car, and the wind whipped about them. Stephanie sighed, moving closer to him. He laughed with her, His arm, in an unconscious manner, encircled the girl's shoulder. She leaned her head against the soft cushions.

Farther on they stopped and walked. Frankie talked of himself. They sat there a long while. Once Stephanie said, "Oh Frankie, isn't it grand! Grand! Can't we stay here forever and ever?"

He looked at her. Everything within him seemed to fall away and leave him lost and alone. He took her hand. "Stevie," he whispered, "you're adorable!"

She looked up at him. She said nothing, but he could feel her move so that her head lay close to his lips. "I like you, too, Frankie," she said, very softly and very low. The moon light was silver on her moist parted lips luminous from her passionate kisses.

He drew her to him, tight, tight. She could feel her fingers press into his face, tracing the line of his lips, his chin. His words were lost in the silence of the night. Only she heard them—"I love you Stevie I love you."

Lyle Winters sipped down in a chair with a shrug of resignation. Stephanie came across the room with a new girl glory, was a different Stephanie. There was an air about her as she sauntered over. She spoke calmly to the man in the chair, but her tone was brittle. "Well did you get the dough from your uncle?"

Winters nodded. He reached into an inside pocket, and brought forth a neat parcel of currency. "Got the letters?"

"Yeah." Stephanie opened her hand, and produced a packet of envelopes. "Let's have the dough!"

Money and envelopes changed hands. Winters sighed with relief, "Well, that's that, anyway!" he said. A horn tooted outside.

The girl nodded toward the window. "The limousine is here."

Winters rose and went to the window. "The limousine?"

The girl nodded. "Yeah." She crossed the room and paused by the door. "Well, so long." She smiled "And say, never write love letters to girls you don't know anything about". And she was gone."

Winters sat thoughtful bend over and his Frankie. He watched as the car slid down the driveway.

Frankie sighed, and said aloud. "I wonder how much she'll get out of that sucker."

Captain Forecast Something Unusual

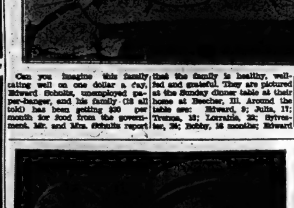
Quebec, Nov. 2—Perhaps Captain Edgar Pelletier came closest of any Canadian in predicting this morning's earthquake.

The commander of the Government steamship Druid, always calls at a lower town telegraph office when in port to learn the weather news.



When advised Thursday night that the probs were "cloudy and mild," he shook his head and said, "somethin's brewing."

"This unseasonably mild weather gets me," he went on. "For several days past we've had pea soup for fog and extremely mild weather. I'm in for something bad—a big blow, a hurricane, anyway something unusual."

Model Home Attracts Ladies of Belleville

Formal Opening of Modernized Furniture Store Notable Event—What's New and Attractive in Furniture.

An interesting event occurred Friday in Belleville's business section, notable for so many improvements which have taken place in the past few years in modernizing store fronts, including new fronts and general pepping up of merchandising methods. The event in question took place of what is known as the New Percival Store, operated by Jos. Abramsky & Sons, Limited of Kingston. This firm took over several of the Percival stores when that organization went into liquidation. The Belleville store has been thoroughly modernized, and additional showroom space secured to display the immense stock of furniture and house furnishings generally carried by this enterprising firm.

Workmen have been busy for weeks remodelling the store and the result adds a very modern and attractive merchandising establishment to the city's already notable list. Hardwood floors, painting and decorating have contributed to the general result which is very satisfactory from the firm's standpoint and very pleasing and convenient to the shopper.

The ground floor is devoted to living room furniture and the display is both large, varied and attractive of the very latest creations in modern furniture. The arrangement of the furniture on either side of a large centre aisle makes inspection very easy and pleasant.

The upper floor introduces the visitor to a completely furnished model home. First the reception room with its tastily arranged furniture, then the living room with its handsome suite of Renaissance furniture, suggesting the antique with a modern touch quite compelling. A dainty breakfast room next invites attention with helpful hints on color schemes and such. Then the bedroom is shown where the spirit of comfort is symbolized in the restful looking furniture suggesting that sound and refreshing sleep would be automatic.

There are other large show rooms where bedroom suites are shown in variety, also living room suites, and the upper floor where studio suites, mattresses, etc., are shown in great variety.

Visitors to the New Percival Store were numerous opening day and all expressed delight with the attractiveness and convenience of the handsome surroundings, and ladies were especially captivated with the model home display on the second floor.

Manager W. J. Todd, who was in the furniture business in Kingston for seven years before coming here, besides much experience before that, expressed himself as delighted with the success of opening day and expressed himself as pleased with the reception given himself and firm since coming here and the prospects for a satisfactory business future in Belleville.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR NEIGHBOURS

On Tuesday evening last about eighty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. Robert Peacock to spend a social evening with them, before moving to their new residence at Hamilton. Mrs. Cora Beer called the gathering to order after which Mrs. Walter Sheffield read the following address:

Dear Bob and Brownie,—

We, your friends and neighbors of the third and fourth line, have gathered here tonight to spend a social evening with you before your departure for your new home. You have always been counted among worthy citizens of this community and we really are sorry to assist in any way possible, and we hope that you will soon feel at home in the place to which you are going.

Our best wishes go with you for health, happiness and prosperity.

We all of us have a road to take, That road is the Road of Life.

Each of us have a share of joy, And each have a share of strife.

But when we all must travel that road,

In sunny or stormy weather,

We each can lighten the other's load If we all pull along together.

We'll say we could not let you leave without showing our appreciation for your sterling qualities in some small way. We ask you to accept these chairs and may they ever serve to remind you of your many friends in this community.

Signed on behalf of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Peacock then thanked their friends for the lovely gifts, and all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," after which lunch was served and a social hour spent.

PRESENTATION

Roslin, Nov. 2—A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bennett, 5th concession of Tyendinaga on Friday evening Oct. 25th when their friends and neighbors numbering about one hundred and fifty gathered to spend their twentieth anniversary with them. About seven-thirty the gathering was called to order and Mr. and Mrs. Bennett were seated while the following address was read by Mrs. W. Goodfellow.

Dear Lucy and Joe:

This being the twentieth anniversary of your wedding, we, your friends and neighbors have gathered here tonight to spend a social evening with you as we have always found you good, faithful friends and neighbors, we would like to show our appreciation. In this way and would ask you to accept the this gift (a chair) as a token in which you are held and wishing you many more years of happy wedded life.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors, Annie Alford and Olive Goodfellow.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett were presented with a beautiful set of china dishes for which they both made a suitable reply and the evening was spent in cards and dancing till the wee small hours of the morning.

MART ATTENDANCE IS QUITE LARGE

No Change in Prices Noted From Week Ago

Bright sunshine and ideal fall weather contributed to make Saturday's market large in attendance on the part of both buyers and vendors.

Little change in prices were noted, except hi-eggs where a few cents reduction had been made. This particular commodity was quoted at 36 and 40 cents per dozen this morning. Butter maintained its firm price of 38 cents per pound, or the command, two-pound roll for 75 cents. Fowl in the fields market also remained at about the same prices, while fat young chickens selling at from 60 to 75 cents and in some cases at $1.50 per pair. Older hens were readily disposed of at from 40 to 60 cents. One fat goose in this morning's market realized $2.00, while ducks were also in evidence at from 90 cents to $1.15.

Potatoes were quoted at $1.15 per bag, or 80 cents per bushel. Vegetables were still firm with carrots, beets, turnips and other staple foods selling at from 30 to 35 cents per peck. Most plentiful were the offerings of cauliflower, white and wonderful this season, at from 5 cents to 20 cents per large head. Cabbage at 5 and 10 cents per head, pumpkin at 5 cents each and citrons at 10 cents were also in profusion.

Apples, one of the best crops in several seasons were plentifully displayed and sold at an average price of $1.75 per bushel. Greenings, the most expensive were quoted at $1.25 per bushel.

There was no advance in the grain markets today according to local speculators and buyers.

Declared due to the fact that the British market has been slightly "off", pork prices both for live and dressed produce dropped during the past week. Today butchers were buying quoted at a price of 11 cents dressed, and 7½ cents live. This is the lowest it has been for several months.

Lambs are still firm, with choice animals selling at 14 cents dressed and 7½ cents live. Calves are steady and beef cuts at about the same price as last week, 8 cents live and 12 dressed.

While fish at 15 cents per pound; pike at 19 cents; pickerel at 18 cents; trout at from 18 to 20 cents and whitefish and two pounds for a quarter offered a welcome change for many buyers.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Have you ever felt while speaking that you have held the same conversation before with a different person? As you talk and the other answers, it seems as though you know what you are about to say almost before the thoughts shape themselves in your mind.

Not only that, you also sense and can foretell what your companion will reply even before you have completed your own thoughts. The experience is rather uncanny, but is not infrequently occurs. When it does, your unconscious mind is not checking or hampering in any way the free flow of ideas from your conscious storehouse.

It must be remembered that all our thoughts, actions in the past are stored up in our unconscious minds along association fibres, delicate nerve strands that criss-cross throughout the brain. Any conversation you may have is recorded along these lines.

If, then, you have another conversation at some future time that bears resemblance in ideas to the previous one, his second conversation runs along, or at least starts along the old first paths. And so you get the feeling of having experienced the entire conversation in the past.

Whenever mental experience sent to repeat themselves, it is occasion you are traveling along associative fibres already set in the mind. This accounts for mental automism is rather difficult to explain. There is nothing particularly mysterious about it. In fact, many apparently startling thoughts and feelings can be elucidated and made plain in the light of modern psychological knowledge.

The repetition of the same experiences again and again forms, of course, a habit. Certain of our mental association trails are being used in this way day in and day out, and in a way, such repetition of mental experiences makes for ease of thinking. However, when we try to overcome a habit of thought, we see the difficult it is.

Apparently, nerves that are used so frequently like less resistance to the flow of mental energy than do those nerves which are used seldom. Accordingly, we must think in the same or similar way again and again in order to establish such lines of lesser resistance before new thinking habits can be formed.

In childhood, many habits of thought-flow are laid down. These habits are like eggs laid in fundament and seem never to become entirely hatched even after the entire allotment of new paths during later life. The importance, therefore, of what goes into a child's mind and what such a child thinks is apparent.

It is possible also that as an adult we sometimes get experiences which feel a we did as children. Here, too the stream of mental energy is following a course along old paths which have not been used much, if at all, for years.

One can theorize, of course, in many ways concerning these phenomena, but one thing is almost certain what actually takes place.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Many women actually jeopardize their health by not eating enough because they wish to keep down their weight. They fail to realize that the body requires energy. Such women should stress protein foods because these provide vital energy, articles of diet with a high carbohydrate content.

Library Corner

by E. G.

Forming the front rank of a new movement in English poetry, with T. S. Eliot as their leader, is a group of three young poets, C. Day-Lewis, W. H. Auden, and Stephen Spender. The literary characteristics of this group are the desire to use in some cases the technique of sixteenth and eighteenth century poets superimposed upon a modern "revolutionary" outlook.

C. Day-Lewis in his volume "Collected Poems, 1929-1933" speaks in a voice of challenge and indignation. The volume contains three groups of poems, Transitional Poem, From Feathers to Iron, and The Magnetic Mountain. Of the group of three poets, C. Day-Lewis has been called "the most lyrically broad-minded." He has included in his book of poems a long essay "A Hope for Poetry," in which he states the peculiar perils and dangers afflicting the modern poet as well as the attempts he mind makes to avoid them.

"Poems" by W. H. Auden reveals this poet at his best in his analytic and harsh satire of the modern world of confusion of thought and disorder in life. His poems have been called "savagely intellectual."

Stephen Spender in "Poems" and "Vienna, a Poem" displays a warmth of emotion. Where Alden stabs and argues with class brutality, Spender is haunted by the images of hunger and despair. His narrative poem "Vienna" is a passionate defense of the principles behind the revolution, an elegy in tribute to those who met death heroically. Horace Gregory of The Nation says of him "Stephen Spender, with his first book of poems, shows promise of being the best lyric poet of his generation in England."

One of the most famous of women travellers, Elinor Mordaunt, writes of her journeys from the Caribbean to the South Seas, to Cuba, to Africa and the Far East in her book "Rich Tapestry." "It seems to me," Mrs. Mordaunt has said in her foreword "that travel is not so much a matter of the body as of the mind. It is the remembering—the something different—which hangs one's life with an ever-changing series of memories." These memories flash with exotic colour and native wit, in her stories of Christmas in Central America, England and Florida, the drums of Zanzibar, the river world of Borneo. Elinor Mordaunt, in "Rich Tapestry" appears as a keen, amused but understanding observer of life.

REDUCE FOOD BILLS USE MORE CHEESE

Cheese is an excellent "buy" for the money. It is amongst the cheapest foods and can be very frequently used to replace other more expensive muscle building foods.

Cheese Souffle.

2 tbsp. butter, 2 tbsp. flour, ¼-cup milk, ¼-tsp. salt, yolks of 2 eggs, 1 cup grated cheese, whites of 2 eggs, cayenne, 1-3 cup cheese, grated.

Make a white sauce with butter, flour, milk and cheese. Season. Add the beaten egg yolks and, when the mixture is cool, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a buttered dish and bake in a slow oven 45 minutes in a slow oven. Serve at once.

Macaroni and Cheese.

1 cup macaroni, 2 qts. water, 2 tsp. salt, 2 cups milk, 3 tbsp. butter, 4 tbsp. flour, 1 cup grated cheese, ½ tsp. salt, pepper.

Add the salt to the water. Put over the heat and, when boiling rapidly, drop in the macaroni broken into pieces about one inch in length. Boil rapidly until the macaroni is tender, then drain in a sieve. Pour cold water over the macaroni in the sieve to prevent sticking together. Make a white sauce by making ingredients and into this stir the macaroni. Serve hot. This may be put into a baking dish and sprinkled with buttered crumbs and baked in the oven until brown on the top.

Old friends meet and ally themselves in a good-looking ensemble. Plaid and suede are the small blouse woolen, and the cape has a tailored velvet collar. Add a matching tam in a vividly colored confetti tweed mixture with a row of velvet buttoned blouse.

Crudita are given for taste as well as erudition on the campus. Useful for general wear is a plaid jacket tweed in gray, brown and red. It is worn with a red velveteen lumberjacked blouse.

A tonic with any black dress is a set consisting of bright red cap and gloves. Add a red belt buckle to a point and is finished with a feather curled in an interrogation mark.

A new low is reached by the front decolletage of many of the new dresses. A tiered dress of black tulle has an extremely low front décolletage hidden by red velvet roses. There are shoe-string shoulder straps.

Even though your child is "regular," his elimination may not be thorough. 90% of all children, doctors have found, are affected by constipation. Your safest course, when a youngster becomes dull and droopy or irritable and rebellious, is to give a laxative.

But—give a child's laxative. Give Castoria! It will never cause painful cramps nor act so severely that the user should be afraid of establishing its normal regularity.

Made especially for children

Castoria is made especially for children. Ask your doctor about it. He will tell you that it contains no harsh purgatives, no narcotics—only such ingredients as are suitable for a child's growing body. And children take it gladly . . . they like its pleasant taste.

Keep a bottle of Castoria always in the house . . . from those your oldest child is born until the youngest is 11 years old. ## PREMIER CLOSES NINETEEN HOTELS

tion of the tied-hotel system, so-called because of the obligation of the hotels to sell certain brands of beer, about five years ago. He presented certain evidence to Premier Hepburn, who promptly instructed Commissioner Odette to look into the matter. Odette's report was submitted to the Ontario Government Cabinet yesterday.

Shortly after Premier Hepburn's administration came into office in July 1934, the Liquor Board informed brewers known to have hotel properties to get rid of them. Instead of pursuing that course, the Premier said, certain brewing interests not only organized new companies with which to continue to operate hotels but, through these companies, acquired other hotel properties.

Suspensions, Mr. Hepburn said, will remain in effect until the hotels involved are sold or otherwise disposed of and new management, satisfactory to the commission, are established. The Government must not, in any way, be connected with the brewing industry.

WON'T BE "NUDIE"

MISS BENEDETTA LEAVER

Miss Henrietta Leaver, "ABOVE," of McKeesport, Pa., who won the title of "Miss America, 1935," has been offered a role in a forthcoming Broadway musical production as a "Nudie"—calling for draped and mostly undraped posing. But Miss Leaver rejected the offer, declaring she would appear in nothing less than a bathing suit.

CHEESE BOARD

Fewer cheese offered on the Belleville Cheese Board Saturday morning than usual, a firm bid of two prices, 10¼ and 10 5-16 cents. A total of 561 cheese offered were sold. 190 sold at 10¼ cents on Mr. W. R. McCreary and the remainder at Jas. Ellis at 10 5-16.

Buyers present were: Messrs Code, Murphy, Hart McCreary, Hill, Morton, Cook, Hunter Taylor.

In the absence of President W. R. Mercer Hunt, Secretary-Manager of the Board, Mr. Odette's report was submitted to the Ontario Government Cabinet yesterday.

Board Room Gossip

As Supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

QUESNEL GOLD

The company owns 800,000 shares of Big Missouri and has an option to purchase an additional 800,000 shares at 55 cents. Through its deal with Nemaska on Pamour Porcupine, Quesnel Gold will own close to 1,- 600,000 shares. Of all the stocks reviewed here Quebec Gold is selling at a price representing the lowest percentage of assets.

SUDBURY BASIN

Chief asset consists of holdings of 1,309,500 shares of Falconbridge Nickel which at the present market valuation or nearly 6,000,000 or the equivalent of $2.40 per share. Company also owns 252,467 shares of Canadian Malartic, 251,100 Sherritt; 200,000 Beattie; 198,000 Manchenoka (Consolidated); 80,000 Hard Rock; 64,117 Sullivan; 40,333 Beaufor and 36,800 Ripissing.

The local market is gaining considerable momentum on the upside. Advances are very general with many securities all new high levels. The market is rapidly enjoying the best sponsorship it has had in several years and public confidence is returning.

Without a doubt the rise at the present time is the most pronounced of the last four years and one of the heartening factors in the situation is the way in which low priced securities are included for attention. The similarity of the situation today to that of 1929 appears to be that the liquor stocks are in the limelight. Following the leadership of Distillers-Seagrams, which has more than doubled in value.

Considerable talk is heard in connection with the possibility of a reduction in the American import tax on whisky. This would have been mooted for many months and holders of the Liquor issues are not replacing much fall in the present rumours. Should the efforts of the Liberal Party to bring about a lowering of the liquor tax, it would be a considerable boon to the country as approximately 30,000,000 gallons of matured liquor would be rapidly sold to American blenders and rectifiers.

The rise in many "dormant" stocks has been responsible for releasing considerable "frozen" cash for the purchase of other stocks. The higher stocks go the more money becomes available for speculative purchases, and the more investment purchases. Public participation so far has often been stated that the market's potentialities are to be found in the low priced issues.

Major Angas, in an address this week, stated that fears of decisions by Mackenzie King to check radical waves of prosperity in 1936. He thinks Canada's prosperity has been victous circle of deflation and caused improvements in consumers buying power. This is followed, he said, by recovery in capital goods industries and finally by a boom. Any boom such as United States has never seen, he predicts, and trade boom would be accompanied by falling retail prices and that such a trade condition would not destroy confidence.

MONTREAL POWER

For the last thirty years "Power" has always been a favorite market in any big bull market. There are reasons to believe that this well seasoned and highly profitable favorite will, once more, take its proper place in the limelight. The next move on this is a big affair. Some people think that the next big bull market is now in the making. The investing public will then look back and ask themselves why they did not buy this stock at a time when a few cents per share meant big profits. Financial Service intends to dwell at some length in a later bulletin on the present position of Montreal Power Consolidated.

O. S. D. SCORES 21-4 VICTORY

Win Places School in Tie For Third Place With St. Mikes

Frank Cunningham's O.S.D. interscholastic squad moved out of the cellar into a tie for third place by victim group of Senior C.O.S.S.A. football yesterday with a decisive 21-4 victory of 24 to 1 over the St. Michaels's. The O.S.D. squad scrambled into a tie with the Irish for third position by virtue of their initial win of the season. The game was filled with action and spills with numerous line-ups being registered between the contesting players.

During the first half the O.S.D. backfield ran amok and secured the substantial lead of twelve points. The Cunningham-led squad played sleight football and looked the better team from the kickoff to the whistle. Skittie Schreiber's aggregation from St. Michael's looked to be disorganized and at no time showed their usual form. A combined aerial attack by the Irish failed to regain lost ground in the last half for the Irish, as the many powerful O.S.D. touches swung into action and scored ten more points in the second half to raise their score to 24, as St. Mike's managed to evade a whitewash job by scoring a field point on a rouge.

Stothart, Nichols and Kosti, starred in the best efforts for the winning squad with Whalen proving the ace lineman of the O.S.D. team. Vokin was on the job in full uniform, however.

The line-ups:

O.S.D.—Flying wing, Blakey; halves, Malchin, Alexander, Lavalle; quarter, Bostnatt; snap, Lillie; insides, Hawthorne, Graham; middles, Malyuk, Hoage; outsides, Kosti, Whitley, Lillie, Major, Pearson, Pierce, Dawson, Sperling and Hemphill.

St. Michael's—Flying wing, Peale; halves, Jack Doyle, O'Neill, R. Doyle; quarter, Schreiber; snap, Cannan; insides, Whalen, Doran; middles, Butler, Maichler; outsides, T. Peale, Mondello, Cullen, Chisholm, Scally, McQuaid and Lye.

Referee—Art Cole.

LITTLE CHANGE IN N. Y. RANGERS

Patrick Standing Pat on Lineup That Made Finals Last Year

New York, Nov. 2 (CP)—Hockey fans of Gotham will see little change in the personnel of New York Rangers when they take the ice against Toronto Maple Leafs in the home opening of the National Hockey League season here Nov. 14.

Bill and Bun Cook centred by Frankie Boucher and Bill Regnier, the highest scoring trio hockey has yet known will again form the starring front line. Manny Gerard and Lorne Chabot, who hasn't missed a game in the three seasons of major league competition, and Ching Johnson, the burly defence star who rounds out the line-up, will be on hand to open with the club since the Rangers made their debut in 1926. Only absentee will be Ott Heller, who is with the Rangers open hibernation.

Little Arie Somers, the colorful Winnipeg veteran with the windmill knee action that earned him unconditional release and Bill McKenzie, assured that he will not report for duty, has been returned to Montreal Maroons. In their places the Rangers acquired Lester Patrick, the disbanded St. Louis Eagles, Verdun Arres and Joe Cirkovich.

Earl Seibert, the bulwark of the Ranger defence last season, still a holdout but is expected to come to terms before the season starts.

Pair Hurt

Blaky Harold Starr and Ott Heller, the utility forward and veteran defence lineup that will guard young Davey Kerr, spectacular net minder from Toronto.

Last year's rookies, Lynn Patrick, the manager-coach Lester Patrick's son and Charlie Mason, won the right to serve as regulars during their first season and are expected to improve on improving. Murdoch and Cecil Dillon, a pair of veteran left wing checkers in the league, will hook up with Rube Bowling and Alex Shibicky in addition to doing emergency duty when the team is short handed through penalties.

However, while this collection was good enough to give the Stanley Cup semi-finals last season manager Patrick admits that he is not satisfied yet with this team unless it delivers from the outset.

SCORING POWER OF LEAFS BETTER

London, Ont., Nov. 2 (CP)—Sterling prospects of the Toronto Maple Leafs, which failed disastrously in the National League playoffs last season, has taken on signs of returning in exhibition games this week, it was revealed here last night as the Leafs bewildered a mixed London Tecumseh Intermediate Stars team for a 7-1 victory. Ounces from every angle and Leaf lave stepped the score into double figures had they wished.

Two of the Leafs' youngsters, Gus Bodnar and Pep Kelly shared the high-scoring honors with a goal and an assist each. Red Horner chared one, besides running into two penalties. The other Toronto counters came from the sticks of Charlie Conacher, young Art Jackson, Bill Thoms and Frankie Finnigan. Bingo Kampman starred for the lons London lally when he took a pass from George Lyver, he took Training in the maritimes for their N.H.L. opening, Boston Bruins were a bit slow scrambling into shape and in the season's first clash with their farm club, Boston Cubs. Since then, however, they have gone ahead by leaps and bounds son, the Bruins will drill many times reminiscents of other fighting Boston clubs. Here is the Bruin brigade ready for the fray with most of the regulars who will start this season's uniforms modelled. LEFT to RIGHT they are: Back row: Roger Jenkins, defence; 'Babe' Siebert, defence; Jack Riley, centre; Charlie Sands, wing; Eddie Shore, defence; "Tiny" Thompson, goal; Art Jackson, wing; Ralph "Scotty" Bowman, coach. Front row: Jerry Shannon, wing; Marc Kaminsky, centre; Ted Graham, defence; Peggy O'Neill, wing; "Cooney" Weiland, centre; Bill Cowley, centre.

as hockey players and in their hey day added plenty of color to the game will tackle referee's whistle this season in the National Hockey League. Reginald Noble and Ed "Newsy" Lalonde are among the new arbiters appointed by President Frank Calder for service in major league rinks. Noble campaigned for the N.H.L. if playing experience is help, this pair should make good as referees.

Two men who made their mark eral Canadiens' most colorful and aggressive star. He later managed minor league teams and for most of two seasons led his old club in the N.H.L. If playing experience is help, this pair should make good as referees.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

According to the Lindsay and Peterboro sports correspondents one would be lead to believe it will not be healthy for the local O.H.P.U. squad to fulfill their schedule dates, in those two towns. More especially the Lindsay scribe comes out boldly and tells all and sundry, that it will be unhealthy for all players appearing in Lindsay on Nov. 8th wearing red and blue sweaters, that's the day the Orange Lodge is scheduled to cross the Scugog in a row boat. The Colborne scribe predicts a rough passage for the locals when not in as drastic terms as does his Lindsay confrere, however, he does what the local gladiator will be doing, while the Lindsay squad is administering this promised shellacking! Knowing one or two, yes six or nine of the local journalistic family in its entirety before a foreign crowd, but we do feel the locals will be able to get at least a nibble. While those rough nasty Lindsay players are gobbling a full course meal, do what?

To see a sport scribe try to incite players to riot and encourage pugnacious attacks upon visiting teams is really appalling, but as a general rule these looking for trouble are generally accommodated to the highest degree. In the meantime Coach Ed Kennedy is not attempting to give his charges any boxing or wrestling lessons, but on the contrary confining nightly training to the neat old fall classic of football. The local squad are not sustained any injuries (touch wood) since Odell broke his collar bone last week. Art Cole is back into the line-up, but Fred Temple is still hobbling around on a pair of crutches, the result of a broken ankle he received in Peterboro. The locals still hold their practices on the Collegiate campus and find a goodly crowd of pig-skin lads in the interwhich is very encouraging. The Kennedy-led squad are idle today, as Peterboro journeys to Lindsay, and Oshawa Collegiate journeys to Colborne. All we can say is—"come on Peterboro and more especially smear 'em Colbourg." The Oshawa and Colborne squads today would elevate the locals into first position in the, Lake Shore group.

There seems to be some little controversy between two different factions of local wrestling fans. Outside contend, that the wrestlers are getting too rough and not showing enough of their actual wrestling wares while the majority say—let 'em go to it. The contestants are either factions, however, we ride the middle rail. Of course it depends on which side of the argument one looks at the set-up; for instance Hitting catching the wild ferocious and pugnacious attacks of Jim Clark and Ben Kilgour, the rival and Chief Lynx are right up their alley. In the other faction want to see a little orthodox wrestling the calibre of which Joe Kaiserovich, The Terrible Turk and other men can display. At any rate it looks as though both parties have a good argument; so the promoters are dishing up a little of both next week. What ultimate result however is the announcement that Referee Parnell is going to wrestle. We're already made arrangements for same on with the local speaker announcer, in hopes that Parnell will not even so much as get a glimpse of an little bear cat.

Lower Rinks' senior interscholastic football squad annexed another victory of Quinte title to their list yesterday, as the Stimsonites Albert College with an 11 to 5 victory over the yellow and black. The game was interesting to watch as the lead changed hands three times. B.C.I. kept them Albert and finally the Collegiate came back. All the players on both squads gave everything they possessed in the line of football for their colors but there actually were two plays, that stood out. First Jones' perfect forward pass 25 yards to Fox, who received the ball nicely and romped 35 yards further for a touchdown. The play was perfectly executed and stood out. The other was Dick Leslie's two crashing plunges in the third quarter, the final one resulting in a major score. Logie ploughed through like like a big engine. Both plays deserve special mention. Incidentally during the game the B.C.I. and V.S. squad advanced the penalty sticks nine times, while Albert moved them ahead on five different occasions! Albert attempted two forward passes, completing one, while the Collegiate attempted ten forwards and completed six of them. Albert surely missed Mc-Crie, their ace punter who is laid up owing to injuries.

Up at the O.S.D. Frank Cunningham's O.S.D. champs are having a reprise on St. Michael's and downed them by the score of 24 to 1 in the victory of the current season. Referee Cole informs us the game was the roughest yet played in the local interscholastic group. There being six or seven little scraps in the matter what happens in the remaining games in the local interscholastic group now, the B.C.I. is 1935 group champions; so it's "congratulations Collegiate."

Yesterday over 700 students and adult fans attended the Albert College game, one of the largest crowds ever to witness the fall classic in Belleville. The school yells, cheer leaders and general atmosphere of football made the game really stand while. Now that interscholastic football has been finally established let's hope for continued advancement in the game.

GATE IS SHORT

St. Louis, Nov. 2—John Henry Lewis, Phoenix, Ariz., negro, who weighed from No. 2 challenger to fight heavyweight throne by soundly whipping Champion Bob Olin, had nothing but a sliver cap to show for his victory.

Lewis was to receive 12 1-3 per cent. of receipts over the $15,000 guaranteed Olin. There weren't any receipts over that amount. In fact, Olin only got $10.000 as the gate fell far short of the promoter's expectations.

B.C.I. SENIORS GROUP CHAMPIONS DEFEAT ALBERT

Beat Played Game of The Season Goes to Collegiate 11-5

MANY HURT

College Team Handicapped When Mackie Unable to Play

Belleville Collegiate senior interscholastic gridders threw down the gauntlet to the Albert College squad by the Quinte group C.O.S.S.A. football championship yesterday at the Albert College gridiron, and defeated Albert team battled courageously and held the more powerful Collegiate squad to a tie until the first half, but injuries in the second half to the outstanding players of the tri-color squad proved too much for the Beach-led aggregation, who battled to the last ditch and were on the aggressive as the final whistle sounded.

Led by Dick Logie, their powerful backfielder, who repeatedly tore through the Albert line for yards and who also scored the only major count registered by the Collegiate, the tri-color backfield Johnston and Fox went well while the work of Muir at quarter was all that could be asked. The stonewall defence set-up by the Collegiate line of scrimmage, however, was what actually stood between the Albert gridsters and victory. Although they were also rough before the game ended the yellow and black were minus the services of three of their star players, including McCrie, their ace punter. With the B.C.I. squad piling up well and their powerful line continually pounding the lighter Albert team, the game was sailed away in the third stanza, after Albert had made a fine stand for the first two frames. Burton, Fox, Burgess and Noonan played stellar football for the vanquished team. Jones and Fox standing out. Chase and Hollingsworth at outsides went well until injured and removed from the pastime. Baker, kicking for B.C.I. out-distanced the combined efforts of Jones and Hodgson who could not seem to get any distance into their punts.

The Play

Albert kicked off and Logie ran back 30 yards. Baker booted to Albert's 17 yard line and the ball was downed. A down brought the ball to Albert's 35 yard line and Johnston made a beautiful and perfect placement for three B.C.I. points. Fox and Johnston made yards and Baker kicked to the deadline for a single point and the score was 4 to 0 for B.C.I. For the first ten minutes of the second stanza all the play was in mid-field, Albert trying two plunges and a kick with little success for Albert. However, Albert fumbled in mid-field Jones threw a forward pass, completing one, who took the ball on the fly and raced 40 yards for a touchdown. Meanwhile, that was not converted, making the score 5 to 4 in favor of the Albert team. The third quarter saw an aerial attack on Albert's 15 yard line, that kept the ball in view for considerable time. Logie and Dick Baker kicked over the Albert line, Logie finally making the count. Not a little distance on his attempted run-off of the end. Logie ploughed through centre for a touchdown. Baker's attempted kick made the count 10 to 5 as the last quarter opened. Logie and Baker made 25 yard forward pass from Johnston. After some scrimmage Baker kicked and Derry Baker kicked and Albert was rouged for an 11 to 5 count. In the very minutes of Albert came to life and started a march down the field, only to be met with Jones running 50 yards to Albert's 10 yard line. The Albert gridsite held as the final whistle sounded giving B.C.I. the game by a 6 point margin. Albert squad battled hard and deserve a world of praise as do the victorious Collegiate through injuries especially to McCrie and Logie who starred. The group champions were congratulated in victory by their defeated foes.

The lineups:

Albert College: Flying wing, Burton, halves, Fox, Burgess, Hodder; quarter, Muir; snap, Hollingsworth; insides, Claxton, Weir, middles, Millen, Hodgson, Noonan; outsides, Hollingsworth, subs, Clouse, Allen, McCrie and McDonald.

B.C.I.—Flying wing, Carr, halves, Johnston, Derry, Logie, quarter, Muir, snap, Derry, insides, Baker, Hanna, middles, Bradford, Chase, Jones, Fox, outsides, Archer, subs, Elkes, Saunders, Foley, Reynolds, Ketcheson Cooper, Lacklander and Irwin.

Officials: Townsend, Powell and Cole.

NOTRE DAME IS READY FOR TEST

Have a Fair Chance to Down Powerful Ohio State

Columbus, O., Nov. 2 (AP)—Notre Dame versus Ohio State; national championship hopes, all-America berths, prestige of coaching systems — all these and more are wrapped up in those five short words.

The Bucks and the Irish meet here today to determine which must drop from the unbeaten and untied list and Ohio and United States gridiron fans hold their breath awaiting the outcome.

It was more than just a football game as the attendance of more than 80,000 attested. Notre Dame, struggling to regain the heights to which the late Knute Rockne led it, was ready for its best game of the year against a larger and more versatile foe.

Ohio, seeing a chance for the glory it last knew almost a decade and a half ago, was determined to unleash all its power.

The rival coaches, Elmer Layden of the Irish and Francis A. Schmidt of the Bucks, met last night. Their conversation was brief.

Schmidt said: "I will, Notre Dame good luck but not too much of it."

Layden answered: "Thanks, think we'll need more than that."

Bill Shakespeare will give the Notre Dame team an edge in kicking unless Johnny Kabealo is in as Buckeye punter.

In Fromhart, Shakespeare, Layden and Carideo, the Irish presented a hard-running, fine-blocking backfield. Each is adept on either end of forward passes.

COMMITTEE ON OLYMPICS MEET

Montreal, Nov. 2 (CP)—With representatives of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and affiliated bodies in attendance, the Canadian Olympic Committee met here today under the chairmanship of P. J. Mulqueen of Hamilton, Ont., to discuss plans for Canada's 1936 Olympic team.

Interest centred around possible discussion of Canada's stand in the current movement to remove the United States to withdraw from the games in Berlin because of alleged discrimination on the part of Nazi officials.

It was not expected any motion would be raised to have Canada pass up the games as no official protest has been received by the committee.

Routine matters to be discussed included the number of men and women athletes the Dominion would send to Berlin and means of covering expenses of the games.

Among A.A.U. officials in attendance, however, unofficial discussions regarding Canadian hockey "tourists" playing in the United States were expected.

PRIMO CARNERA WINS IN FOURTH

Defeats Walter Neusel in Comeback Trail to Nowhere

New York, Nov. 2 (AP)—Primo Carnera, hitting the Coney Island comeback trail that leads nowhere, emerged from the smoke haze of Madison Square Garden today with a technical knockout victory over Walter Neusel, blond German heavyweight.

Refusing to be floored under a barrage of punishment, sweeping lefts the spindle-shanked victim threw up his hands and quit in the fourth round last night after Carnera inflicted a deep cut above his eye with a massive right.

As blood spurted from the cut, Neusel turned and walked to the ring with the towel, but he beat Carnera to the punch by a split second from the grimacing Italian to his corner, apparently relieved it was over.

Before a near-capacity paid attendance of 12,768 that netted $31,621.53 to witness Carnera's afternoon appearance and Neusel's first public appearance since last summer, the former heavyweight champion belted the German challenger all over the ring and easily won every round.

Carnera weighed 268, Neusel 201.

AMAZING AMERKS DEFEAT DETROIT

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 2 (CP)—Any doubt the "Amazing Amerks" of New York will continue to amaze in the approaching National Hockey League scramble would be erased today following their performance against Detroit Red Wings.

In a game that was fast, sleight, exhibition in name only, "Red" Dutton's Americans trounced the Detroiters, a team as strong as any they will meet this season, 4-2. Ten penalties were handed out.

What impressed the 2,500 fans who witnessed the game was the dashing display of the comparative youngsters, Lorne Carr, Bryan Hextall, Art Chapman and Tommy Anderson and the rugged effectiveness of the defence. Roy Worters too showed he was well within the timer circle as goalies go.

Carr bagged a pair of goals. Anderson got the final goal of the game while Hextall counted for the other in the second period.

VICTOR EMANUEL BACKS CONQUEST, ASSURES WORLD

Italian King Speaks of Civilization's Task Borne by Italy

WORLD PEACE AIM

Merchants Cover English Words on Windows to Avoid Trouble

By GEORGE JORDAN
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Rome, Nov. 1 (AP)—King Victor Emanuel came openly and publicly to the support of Premier Mussolini today for Italy's campaign of conquest in Ethiopia.

Speaking from the same platform where Il Duce stood yesterday when he inaugurated the university of the City of Rome, the king observed virtually the same words as the premier.

Victor Emanuel asserted Italy was fostering her civilization at home while engaged in defense of "her security and her future.

"It is not without significance this citadel of thought is opening its rooms consecrated to noble and quiet studies while my country is engaged in an undertaking which will determine emergence of her life, her security and her future has imposed," the king asserted.

New Centre of Culture

Il Duce, also proclaimed on the same spot yesterday this new centre of Roman culture was being inaugurated while Italy was engaged in carrying civilization forward with their courage and their arms.

Without mentioning the current international crisis, Victor Emanuel specifically, "King Victor Emanuel" absolved Italy of any intention of disturbing world peace.

"Italy asks nothing more than to be permitted to pay for her fulfilment of her life in order to work and to dedicate the energies of behalf of those common ideals which constitute the sacred heritage of civilized humanity," he said.

The monarch concluded his address with an appeal to enlightened present at the ceremony to spread word of Italy's mission of civilization.

Fascists Against Britain

Meanwhile Fascist feeling against Great Britain mounted higher amid preparations to put into operation the economic blockade by the League of Nations, attributed primarily to British opposition to Italian imperialism.

Many merchants placed covers over English words on the windows of their establishments to avoid demonstrations and Fascists paraded yesterday and last night before the British Embassy and several others.

Some store-keepers removed British goods from their shelves, locked them down and counters, lest they arouse antagonism. A constant guard of police and several score carabinieri, or mounted soldiers, were stationed around the British Embassy.

"That is the way the Great War started," commented one foreign observer of the demonstrations.

Favorable Terms

Reports that Great Britain was increasing its Mediterranean fleet and heavily reinforcing Malta aroused further excitement in official circles. Italy would speed construction of a German submarine being built at the navy yards of Taranto, Genoa, Spezia and Trieste.

U. S. GRABS THREE PACIFIC ISLANDS THAT ONCE WERE CLAIMED BY BRITAIN

IMPORTANT AS TRANS-PACIFIC AEROPLANE STATIONS

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Writer

Washington, Nov. 2.—While the world has been too much preoccupied with Benito Mussolini's attempt to grab Ethiopia to observe grabbing activities elsewhere, Uncle Sam has effected a neat grab, which he is consolidating with no opposition whatsoever.

He has grabbed three important islands and has colonized them.

Previously they were uninhabitated. Now they have populations of four each, a total of 12 in the trio.

They are Jarvis, Howland and Baker islands in the mid-Pacific. Jarvis is exactly in the middle on the equator and the 160th meridian, the precise centre of the Pacific ocean, 1,600 miles due south of Honolulu. Howland and Baker, also on the equator and about 90 miles apart, are approximately 1,000 miles to the westward of Jarvis.

Pin-Points on Map

They are coral islets, each with an area of approximately six square miles, and in their centres they rise to altitudes just sufficient to keep their inhabitants (if and when there are any) out of the wet when storms rage and seas are high.

The British pre-empted them once, long ago, but left them uninhabited, and a claim of that sort isn't recognised under international law without inhabitants to hold it down. Accordingly the United States nave-rompted them later on, but also left them uninhabited.

It can't really be said that title to them has been in dispute between Uncle Sam and John Bull, they weren't considered worth quarrelling over.

Still, their status has been incidentally on maps as "indeterminate."

United States Act

Eight months ago, however, the United States gobbled them forthwith as was necessary to overcome the resistance put up by three absolutely uninhabitated islets.

It was done secretly. Only within a few days has the news leaked out.

The "coup" now is what diplomats call a "fait accompli."

It looks as if the U.S. has gained a trick in the trans-Pacific or trans-world airways now planned in both nations.

The U. S. revenue cutter, Itasca effected the conquest. On each island it landed its quota of four colonists, and Navalines, each that the appointed four set up a flag pole and from its tip floated the stars and stripes. At the foot of each pole a leaden plaque was affixed, like this:

"Jarvis (or Howland or Baker) Island.

"Latitude and longitude so-and-so.

"This island is colonized this day (date given) by American citizens, under the United States of America.

"Notice Trespassing Allowed."

On each island this warning was signed by the chief of that particular island group of four.

Aeroplane Stops

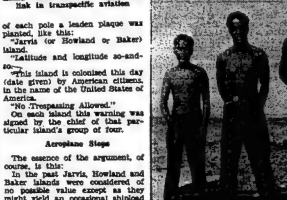
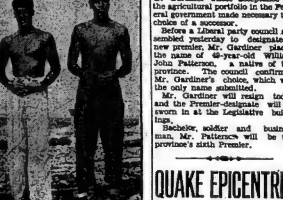
The essence of the argument, of course, is this:

In the case of Jarvis, Howland and Baker islands were considered of no possible use except as they might yield an occasional shipload of guano. To-day they are vital stations for airship stops between Hawaii and Australia and New Zealand.

And, for once, Uncle Sam has seen an overseas advantage first.



The Itasca colonists are reckoned as able to take care of themselves among south sea island colonists. They are fishermen. They are used to living in modern style on "canned stuff." All the water that they have will have to drip from the eaves of their tents ---but it rains nearly every day in that zone.



Nominally (to provide for their pay) they are weather observers. But not for the weather family.

Jarvis station in these have been posted on Jarvis, Howland and Baker islands, lying along the equator, 1,600 miles south of Hawaii.

the dancing, fantastic mobs of young pagans with their shrill demands to "shell out!"—Halloween was over.

One Nova Scotia child was dead. His mother was severely burned, a few other children were injured. At Lawrencetown, three-year-old Robert Acker was burned to death in his shed, where he was making a jack o'lantern. His mother was burned on the arms and face as she tried unsuccessfully to save him.

In Toronto a 13-year-old boy in a henkaway holdup gown darted across an east and street through heavy traffic and was struck by an auto. He suffered a concussion. Another Toronto child chasing apples rolled across the street by a horse-and-wagon was struck by an auto. He incurred a fractured leg.

But door handles were no longer linked with verandah posts. Garbage can covers and clothes lines were back in their usual haunts. Traffic signs were right side up. Old customs were stored away, and the nerve spirits that roam abroad on all saints' eve were back in their nether world.

Lloyds Have Insured Her Career

Lloyds of England who will insure you from anything from rain to twins, has now added another department. They will also insure your career. Joy Hodges (ABOVE), former Des Moines, Iowa, church choir singer, is their first client in that line. She obtained a $250,000 accident and life insurance policy carrying a rider guaranteeing her earning at least $135,000 for the next three-year period. The actress signed a studio contract expected to net her $371,000, and hence the career insurance would be effective only if her earnings fell below $135,000. The premium has not been disclosed.

W. J. PATTERSON SASK. PREMIER

Takes Over Duties Vacated by Gardiner, Who Goes to Ottawa

Regina, Nov. 1.—(CP)— A new Saskatchewan Premier, Hon. W. J. Patterson, who has been provincial Minister of Natural Resources, prepared to take the oath of office today in succession to Hon. James G. Gardiner whose acceptance of agricultural portfolio in the Dominion government made necessary the choice of a successor.

Before a Liberal party council assembled yesterday to designate a new leader, Mr. Gardiner proposed the name of 49-year-old William John Patterson, a native of the province. The council confirmed Mr. Gardiner's choice, which was the only name submitted.

Mr. Gardiner will resign today and the Premier-designate will be sworn in at the Legislative buildings.

Bachelor, soldier and business man, Mr. Patterson will be the province's sixth Premier.

QUAKE EPICENTRE PLACED IN CANADA

Further Shocks Are Likely To Be of Less Severity

Ottawa, Nov. 1 (CP)—Dominion Observatory officials today placed the epicentre of the Timiskaming earthquake almost definitely in Canada, northward of Ottawa and in a district in which no previous quakes are known to have occurred.

They estimated the distance from Ottawa to the epicentre at about 180 miles, narrowing down their previous estimate of between 175 and 200 miles from Ottawa. They pointed out, however, the latest figure also might have to be revised as indications of the exact break or slip in the earth's structure occurred at considerable depth. The wide area over which the shocks were felt, they said, indicated the source of the tremors was fairly deep.

Ernest A. Hodgson, Seismologist at the Observatory, said the record received on the seismographs indicated shocks travelled southward from the source and they were caused by a push. Shocks caused in such a way would be somewhat similar to those that travel the length of a long freight train bumped by a locomotive.

VETERANS MEET TO DISCUSS PLANS

Will Sell Crosses as Well as Poppies on Remembrance Day

At a meeting of the executives of the local branch of the Canadian Legion the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada held last evening it was decided that a committee of Belleville citizens would be given the opportunity of selling, on the coming small, seven and one half inch wooden crosses on Poppy Day, being held on November 8th, for the purpose of planting them in memory of deceased veterans. These will be in addition to the usual blood red poppies, which will be sold in the usual manner. A plot of ground in which the crosses may be placed, marked with the names and regimental numbers of those who have passed on, has been provided near the Cenotaph in Memorial Park through the courtesy of the local Parks Board.

Assisting the work of the veterans on Poppy Day, C.I. Barragar will also deliver two addresses in local schools, explaining the significance of the day.

An appeal for the volunteer services of tagsers for the day, over the use of which is being broadcast by the veterans.

It is anticipated, that before the campaign closes a substantial increase will be made to the membership of the Chamber.

Babson's Latest Report Places Belleville in Favorable Position

Improved Business Conditions Expected For Fall And Winter

LESS UNEMPLOYMENT

Belleville, Kingston and Peterboro are mentioned as representing Eastern Ontario among the more important centres where business will be better this fall and winter in Babson's report for Canada of the current issue.

The report calls attention to employment in Canada being the highest at present in the past four years. Canadian industrial employment added more than 15,000 workers to the program for September in the face of what is generally regarded as a seasonal decline. The report mentions that although the tendency in previous years has been for employment to slump off gradually as the year draws to a close indications are that there will be more than the usual pressure on the upside over the next few months. Everything points to these conditions being fulfilled in the three cities mentioned.

Bank conditions, not politicians, will signal to business men and investors of Canada what to expect as the dust of the elections now settles," declared Mr. Babson.

Uncertainty Ended.

"The incoming Liberal administration will neither upset business conditions nor confidence, nor very much affect existing business trends over the period immediately ahead. From a long range viewpoint, certain political changes in government policies will naturally play their part, but fundamentally the Canadian Babson chart showing the basic trends in business in relationship to world wide conditions and not the program at Ottawa will be the signal which will tell clients what to expect."

"Too much importance should not be attached to the apparent reversal of roles by the Conservatives and Liberals. In the campaign Mr. Bennett enunciated many New Deal doctrines. Meanwhile Mr. King seemed in many ways content to urge what sounded like good Tory doctrine. Political issues are always formulated out of particular situations. Actually, neither Mr. King nor Mr. Bennett has made any basic changes in their respective political creeds.

"Mr. Bennett remains a Conservative and Mr. King will prove to be the same Liberal Premier he was when he last held office. The best asset which Mr. King possesses as he takes office is the vigorous and sustained natural recovery that marked the closing months of the Bennett administration," declared Mr. Babson.

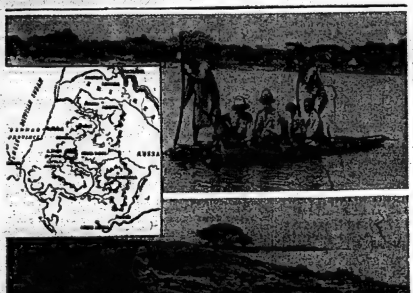
WHEN ITALIAN ARMY AVENGED OLD DEFEAT IN CAPTURE OF ADOWA



Thirty-nine years after Italian forces made a crushing defeat at the city of Adowa, Ethiopia, Italy erected a monument to the memory of the men who died in that battle. And it was with some measure of revenge that the dreamed-of victory (on paper), with Italian colonies, gathered around the simple stone monuments which reads, "To those who fell at Adowa, March 1, 1896. To-day avenged by victory, Oct. 6 1935. The Ovimana Division."

ELISSA DOOG'S NEW FLAME?

The new interest, flimland hears, has completely killed any chance of reconciliation between the former husband of Joan Crawford and Gertrude Lawrence, English stage star, to whom young Fairbanks was reported engaged. London film folk say young Fairbanks is constantly in Elissa's company away from the studio.

Lake Tana, Britain's Chief Interest in Africa

The ripples caused by the poles of these natives are theoretically registered on the political seismograph in the House of Parliament. The two Englishmen (seated LEFT) are being ferried across the Blue Nile (also called the Abbai River), about two miles below Lake Tana (or Tsana) in Ethiopia. At this point the river is about 180 yards wide and the water rushes by at the rate of 500,000 cubic feet per second. The country controlling Lake Tana could divert the waters of the Blue Nile much to the detriment of the agriculturists in the Egyptian Soudan valley of the river, in which the British was refused.

DECIDED TREND TO CONSERVATIVES

Result of Municipal Elections Different From Year Ago

London, Nov. 2.—(CP Cable)— A decided trend towards the Conservatives developed today with one-third of the results available in the municipal elections in some 360 cities and boroughs of England and Wales.

The result was in strong contrast with that of a year ago when Labor scored a smashing victory, winning 267 seats and obtaining a majority on 40 councils.

Some observers saw in the trend of the voting yesterday a favorable omen for the National Government in the general election this month although municipal voting is not considered a very reliable barometer of national sentiment.

Latest returns showed the Conservatives had gained 50 seats and lost 18; the Liberals gained 10 and lost 12; Labor had suffered most heavily, winning 36 and dropping 69 while the Independents registered 20 gains and 26 losses.

Conservatives scored notable victories in industrial districts. In Birmingham they gained six seats, all at Labor's expense, and in Leeds four. In Leeds they also wrested control of the council from Labor. Labor suffered a severe setback in Hornsey London suburb, where all their candidates were defeated.

INDIANS GAZE AT QUAKE TRENCH

Hole 40 Feet Deep Stirs Wonder of 800 Folk in Parent, Quebec

Parent, Que., Nov. 2 (CP) — Indians from the wooded hills about this French-Canadian village in Northern Quebec came today to the shores of Lake Manitouane, to examine a gaping trench, 40 feet deep, caused by a wrenching of the earth's surface in yesterday's earthquake.

They gazed at the immense hole and at the quarter-mile of twisted rails of the old Canadian National Railways transcontinental line, smoked good strong tobacco and summed up their opinion with a comprehensive "ungh."

Most of the 800 residents of this little railway town were also up bright and early today to have another look at the sort of thing that happens when a new wrinkle is forming on the countenance of Mother Earth.

The quake, which according to the calculations of the Dominion Government scientists in Ottawa, had its epicentre in this locality, lasted only 20 seconds but it will remain long in the memory of people in these parts.

Villagers had a better sleep last night. There wasn't much sleeping the night before with the earth grumbling, doors rattling, tin cups jingling on their nails in the wall and heavy steel rails screaming as they were wrenched and twisted with the force of the tremors.

The frame buildings had enough flexibility that they were not damaged and the only serious loss was to the railway. Trains were rerouted while repairs were being carried out. Trains from Quebec, 250 miles east of here, to Cochrane run through this sparsely settled area only three days a week and there was no traffic on the line near here when the quake occurred at 1.05 a.m. Friday.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

"You....you haven't much faith in me, have you Michael" She was fighting for them, for her man's love, brain to begin functioning again, to get her out of this hateful mood, to unravel the awful truth, and worried herself ill again; "You.... almost.... expect the worst of me!"

"Judy," he said agonizingly, "I'll.... I'll get straight up out of this bed and.... and spank you, if you talk like that! You know perfectly well it's because I know so that's caughty your little Puritan-child, New England tradition about debts that I.... I was afraid the expenses would get you down. Without me dragging at your ankles, I'm perfectly that most of those dire anxieties of yours are just imaginary troubles. They never arrive, Judy. Things always work out all right, You'll see." He flashed her a brilliant smile and his tone became brisk, more like the old Michael of commands, not admonitions. "Now you trot that bunch of cone-bids right out and wear it. Can't have my sweetheart catching a cold. I'll buy you a mink-rat coat for her. So you can dash up and out-duchess the social register."

Judy was so utterly dismayed over the conviction that he would do just that, unless she did something drastic to stop him, that it left her dumb and horrified.

"I.... I don't like mink-rat," she managed pleasingly, and he shouted with appreciation.

"Well, don't look as if Rome were burning, Judy-child. We'll get another raccoon.... a white flock of 'em. Only you better warm right up and take care of yourself. You'll worry me into plaid hair if you don't quit quivering. Now, be a sleazy two-year-old coat! The worst I think Michael Swayne's wife has to wear an Indian blanket because he's such a swell failure, if we don't look out!"

"You.... you're not a failure, Mike, darling," Judy hid her face against his chin, briefly, lest he detect the utter confusion spreading her. "You can't expect to hit the high spots all the way. You'll be far ahead of them all, soon as you're well again."

"Oh, can't I?" Michael's voice was cocky, bursting with confidence. "I was born under a lucky star, Judy. And I can cruise along on high all the way. Just wait and see. I'll show what I can do once I'm out from under this dumb health-victory rock."

Judy kissed him tenderly, relieved that he could banish his own mood of dark self-accusation, and proceed in the door, her eyes avoiding, studiously, the place fearful of chrysanthemums Allison had brought him earlier.

"I'll bring you some books to read, Michael.... What would you like?"

"I can't read, Judy. Books drive me crazy. My mind goes so far ahead of the words, it's like.... like a drug. Makes me sleepy. Saves me to dash."

Judy walked down the corridor, just as the nurse was reaching a rather big carton of expensive books, with a big sheaf of 60s magazines on top.

"For Mr. Swayne," Miss Calkins said brightly, cheerfully. "Aren't they grand, Mrs. Swayne?"

"Who.... who sent them, Miss Calkins?" Judy's voice was faint.

"His friends," the little nurse answered quickly—too quickly—and as Judy's steps were winged with panic, with flight, she sped down the stairs. They were from Allison Mahar. She knew it as surely as if her name had been printed in front-high letters across the box. She knew that Michael hadn't wanted her to bring him anything to read because he was afraid he'd be bored with her selections! He had known those were coming! Known Allison was sending them!

The truck from Hasen's was parked at her apartment house door and Judy hurried in, feeling guilty over having kept the man waiting.

CHAPTER IX.

JUDY MOVES

The last piece of furniture was gone, and still the lovely little rooms retained their strange charm. Stripped of everything, bare even to the polished floors, they pulled Judy with a tug as mysterious as it was strong.

She went through each room, dusting carefully, brushing up lint and adjusting shades, and it seemed as if she were saying good-bye to old familiar friends. Memories crowded in on her, frightening her lest she give way to the tide of grief constricting her throat, she turned hastily to the kitchen, looked it over carefully, and put on her hat and coat.

Her luggage had gone ahead to the boarding-house, and she would stay there until her plans were installed more definitely. She went to the window with the fresh sight and view of the river, for a last farewell, against her will. And for a ghastly moment Michael stood there beside her, as he had hundreds of times before, his arm about her shoulders affectionately, his chin brushing gently, speculatively against her bright hair, the rapture complete without words.

"Michael!" she gasped on a soft, sobbing breath. "Michael, why did it all have to happen? Why.... why couldn't we.... have kept the.... dream?"

She was shivering and icy cold as she let herself out of the darkened, empty apartment, more desolately alone and frightened than she had ever been before in her life. She had learned in bitter, harsh lessons how the irrefutable truth that is one something precious and beautiful that you have grown used to, familiar with, is a thousand times more cruel, more unbearable than to have known only the dull, blank loneliness of never having had it. Groping toward the light, toward some philosophy that would help her to bear the burden of sorrow, loneliness and fear closed in around her more tightly.

The boarding-house was a stark, grim affair of cold-gray paint brick, and odor majestic brownstone front. The steps were smooth, worn granite but the windows looked rickety and the parlor was staging, far from lovely, cheap curtains and shades that somehow very always ashew.

In the hall, a long row of garish tin mail-boxes and a deep shaft led to rooms, cut down from past magnificence, to barely adequate space for a bed, chair and bureau.

When Judy finally came back from the hospital, after stopping off at Bill's club with his apartment keys, she was too tired, too discouraged to notice, much, the drab, down-at-the-heel ruin of the place. She had selected it for price alone. It was cheap. It would give her shelter at a minimum expense. And every dime saved now meant something more for Michael. Things she bought passionately for him and didn't dare to, with the mountain of expense crushing her every move.

She slept almost-the instant she got into the hard, lumpy bed, and it was bright daylight when she finally awoke. Sunday morning.

Judy lay quite still for a long time, thinking. Remembering. Michael always got up Sunday mornings and got breakfast. Scrambled eggs, and rafts of crisp bacon and buttered rolls, sometimes an anchovy sauce and broiled mackerel. And a fat pot of English marmalade.

Saturday nights he always came home with a tall brown paper bag filled with "the makings". He'd never let her look in the bag, "what," he'd say mysteriously. "I'll surprise you in the morning."

And surprise he always did. He'd get up so quietly Judy never heard him, though she always intended to get up and help him. Only he was so careful never to waken her. He would be whistling, like a magic chef, with a huge tray, laden with delicious food, and a smile that Thrym brought Judy's heart up into her throat, and a mist of tears to her eyes.

Now Judy stared meaningly at the faded, drab, soiled wallpaper and scarred paint, the rickety bureau, with some handles gone, and the shade, crank-sided, the single line of lamp-cord, with a bulb dangling starkly, and it seemed a million years ago that she had been so safe and secure in that little Paradise, with Michael to do a thousand different things for her. Now she was safe for her protection and comfort.

The room became a prison, and Judy jumped out of bed, cringed from the cold, icy strip of linoleum her bare feet touched, and pulled on her robe and slippers. The bathroom was dreary, and Judy flinched before the greasy tub. She found a can of cleanser and scrubbed the tub until it was spotless.

There was no hot water, and she had to make do with a pot of a very tepid, lukewarm bath. By the time she had dressed hurriedly, in the chilly, barren little room, Judy had banished her moment of weakness.

Shivering, she realized, quite beyond doubt, that Michael could never come to a place like this. Michael, who believed that there was no loneliness like being in a hotel-room. Or a rooming-house room.

And ill, unable to go out for weeks, perhaps, it was unthinkable that he come to such a place. She'd have to hurry and find something that was some sort of compromise between this extreme and the $120 a month apartment, with the luxurious furnishings Michael's mother had installed.

She breakfasted frugally on toast and coffee, and started off, armed with a rent column from the Sunday paper, bought in the subway station, on her way to eat. Twenty-five a month. She'd have to find two rooms for that. Even if they were meagerly furnished, she'd love to make that do for a while. Later on they'd move. When they were out of debt, and had enough to get some furnishings together. Things they could own, not hire from an agency.

It became increasingly more hopeless. Within the price range she had set for herself, there was nothing. Not until she stopped at noon for a mashed milk to survive her flagging spirits did Judy remember her old place.

Michael would never go there, though," she told herself hopelessly, but how you were getting on, with your little street where she had made her home until her wedding day, she'd feel he was going back to my place. He'd hate it."

But fate seemed to be working a strange, intricate pattern in tying the threads of Judy's life tightly together again, in the same pattern it was before romance tore the fabric, and even the rainbow colors than ran wildly away, into disaster and tragedy.

Mrs. Parker welcomed her with open arms.

"Dearie," she crooned in motherly concern, "it's many the time I've I've thought of you, and wondered how you were getting on, with your little street where she had made her home until her wedding day, she'd feel he was going back to my place. He'd hate it."

But fate seemed to be working a strange, intricate pattern in tying the threads of Judy's life tightly together again, in the same pattern it was before romance tore the fabric, and even the rainbow colors than ran wildly away, into

Wamala was preparing the evening meal for his mistress, Zora Drinko. "Before you were left with the Bryan family," he said "and he was not good! Nor do I like any better the sheyka Abu Bain. He is not good. I wish that Bwana Coll were here."

"So do I," said Zora. "The Arabs have been surly ever since the expedition returned from Opar. They have sat all day in their sheyka's tent," said Wamala, "and often Abd Bain looked at you."

"He dare not dare to harm me," said Zora.

"Who would have thought that the brown bwana would have dared to?" Wamala reminded her. "Still, Tarzan, the first thing you know you will have me frightened," said Zora, and then suddenly, "Look, Wamala! Who is that!"

That black boy turned his eyes. At the edge of the camp stood a beautiful woman. Two golden discs covered her breast, and a narrow stomacher of gold and precious stones encircled her hips. She stood looking at them with fearless grey eyes.

Now, when she wanted so terribly to make it nice for Michael, since that it had ever been before, her hands were tied, and she dared not spend a dime. Every shade of brown and gold and purple pansy imaginable. "Miss, darling!" she whispered, "I was so busy.... How have you been?"

"Hey, Judy," he said excitedly, "guess what? They let me smoke, this morning after breakfast! Imagine that! They let me smoke a cigarette!"

Judy left, after a long, luxurious visit with Michael, more cheered than she had been in weeks. He was gaining so rapidly, his old, hilarious, high-heated moods were back again, and he sketched glowing, rainbow plans for making future millions, making a future so glorious it was breath-taking. And back of it, deep in Judge's secret heart, loved the realization that she had stopped most of the stupendous expense draining their income, mortgaging their future..far, far ahead.

There was but one sobering thought She had to tell Michael. Soon he would be well enough to go home. Then he would have to know. It was a terrifying thought and she dared not think about it. It made her ill every time she came to it.

a double row, down the table beside the bed. She had her eyes to the gorgeous, dull blue, flat bowl, simply brimming over with huge, velvety daisies. Every shade of brown and gold and purple pansy imaginable.

RE-MILITARIZE RHINE?

According to dispatches from London, a military conference in Germany has decided that the region along the Rhine river, demilitarized under the Treaty of Versailles, shall resound with the tramp of German soldiers. At the conference it was reported that the European instability and the weakening of Germany had materially changed German's plans for the war she is avowedly preparing for. Map shows Rhine area. FORMER ARGO JUNIORS NOW MAKING FOOTBALL HISTORY FOR UNBEATEN SENIORS

STUKUS — STAUG ETON — AUBURN

Operating a junior football squad for several seasons has paid Toronto Argonauts many times over as the excellent showing of the Big Four league leaders in 1935 has demonstrated. Starting out with a team wrecked by retirements and departures, Coach Lew Hayman had been able to weld a strong and efficient unit from former junior players, plus one or two stellar imports. Three of the players, who learned their football with Argonauts are shown. Annis Stukus, 30-year-old first-year man, is an accurate kicker, a fine runner, and taking Andy Mullan's job at quarterback when the veteran is off has proved himself an able and successful field general. Jack Auburn, middle wing, and Len Staughton, inside are another pair of fine lassies. Staughton here demonstrates his aptitude for falling on a loose ball.

Auburn, 20 years old and weighing 195 pounds, can hit the line like a battering ram. With plenty of youth on the lineup, Argos look to have a reserve for several seasons now, while opposition teams unable to beat them in six straight games, must rebuild ageing and fading lines.

After three years in the squared circle, his self takes a word of advice from his dad Mike Gibbons (left), welterweight champion in 1913. Jack has another relation of fight fame in the person of Tom Gibbons, who fought Jack Dempsey at Shelby, Montana, in 1923. He is Jack's uncle.

FLORIDA KEYS EVACUATED AS HURRICANE NEARS

Freak Storm Moves Towards Coast Between Miami And Palm Beach

WARNINGS ISSUED

Coast Guard Announces, Vessel Disabled Off Coast

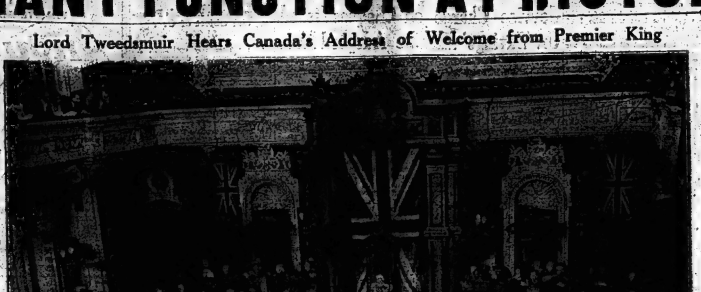
Miami, Fla., Nov. 4—(AP)—Relief workers hastened today the evacuation of the Florida Keys, where approximately 400 United States war veterans and others were killed in the Labor Day hurricane, as a freak storm moved menacingly toward the coast between Miami and Palm Beach.

William H. Green, in charge of relief operations on the Coral Islands sent trucks to take off 200 men at Snake Creek. From lower Matecumbe 69 other workers were making their way by boat to Snake Creek to board the waiting trucks.

Refugees will be brought here.

Power failed in the Miami News building shortly before noon. A drenching rain was falling, whipped by gusty squalls and at Fort Lauderdale, 30 miles to the north there were sustained gusts as high as 50 miles an hour.

Approaches Fast



The 11 a.m. hourly warning of the Jacksonville weather office said the hurricane was approaching the West Palm Beach-Miami area west southwest at the rate of about 10 miles an hour.

High tides along the southeast Florida coast were expected, the weather bureau said, with possibly hurricane winds and high water in the Lake Okeechobee section where more than 2,000 persons lost their lives in 1928 in the high water.

Churning southward through the Atlantic yesterday, the storm skirted Great Abaco Island late last night, taking Hopetown, small settlement on the eastern end of the island, with hurricane winds. There were no immediate reports of casualties or property damage.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 4.—(AP)—The coast guard announced today a portion of a wireless message intercepted from the S. S. Florida indicated the vessel was disabled about five miles south of Jupiter, Fla.

QUIET WEDDING IS DISAPPOINTING

Cancellation of Public Royal Wedding Causes Losses

London, Nov. 4 (CP)—Disappointment is being felt by thousands of Londoners and Britons from the provinces and overseas, who had planned to crowd the Capital Wednesday for the wedding of the Duke of Gloucester and Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott.

Cancellation of the public wedding in Westminster Abbey in favor of a private ceremony in Buckingham Palace because of the death of the bride's father, the Duke of Buccleuch, has robbed them of their last chance of seeing a Royal wedding for many years to come, assuming the Prince of Wales remains a bachelor.

Not only a general disappointment but heavy financial loss has hit many traders.

Agents and private persons had sold thousands of seats on the stands to be erected along the routes the royal procession would have followed, in store windows and on balconies.

Week ago the public began paying from $8.00 to $50.00 for these vantage points. Practically all the seats had been sold when the public wedding was cancelled.

Just a few business men are laughing. They had insured themselves against such eventualities as cancellation and they have made as much profit on the insurance as they would have gained from the sale of their seats.

New Governor-General Enroute to the Capital After Quebec Ceremony

Lord And Lady Tweedsmuir Welcomed at Brilliant Function

TAKES THREE OATHS

Replies to Address in Both English And French

By W. W. MURRAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Nov. 4 (CP)—Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's new Governor-General, was today enroute to Ottawa, where, in the national capital, he will again be greeted by the Government before he proceeds to Rideau Hall, which will be his residence for the next five years. His inauguration here on Saturday night was a function attended with all the brilliancy and solemnity that surrounds such occasions.

The ceremony took place in the Legislative Council Chamber immediately after His Excellency disembarked from the liner Duchess of Richmond. It was an evening affair, since the ship did not dock until nearly six o'clock.

Representatives of the official life of Canada were present in the Council Chamber, headed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King. The Dominion Cabinet, the judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, the Lieutenant Governor and Premier of Quebec, ecclesiastical notables and officials from many walks of life thronged the Chamber, whose bright red furnishings were highlighted by uniforms of Military, Naval and Air Force officers, privy councillors and foreign diplomats.

His Excellency took three oaths after his secretary, A. S. Redfern, who read aloud the commission from the King appointing Lord Tweedsmuir Governor-General. These were the Oath of Allegiance, the Oath of Office and his Oath as Keeper of the Great Seal of Canada. Following this, Prime Minister Mackenzie King read an address of welcome from the Government and People of Canada. To this the Governor-General replied in English and French, voicing his pleasure at being selected for the office and his hope that during his regime he might contribute something to the well-being of this country.

Another welcoming address was delivered by Premier Taschereau, to whom His Excellency responded, also in the two official languages. From Mayor Gregoire of Quebec the city extended its welcome, and received His Excellency's thanks.

When the ceremony was over the Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir held a reception in one of the State halls. This was attended by many hundreds, who had been present to witness the ceremony of inauguration.

The vice-regal party then boarded a special train which moved out of the city to Belair, where it stopped for the night. His Excellency motored to St. Joachim yesterday and viewed flocks of wild geese. The party spent last night on the train, which left Belair for Ottawa early today.

BELIEVED ART OBJECTS FAKED

Opinion on Works in Toronto Museum Expressed

Baltimore, Nov. 4 (CP)— Some Christian art objects displayed in the Royal Ontario Museum at Toronto today are fakes, according to Dr. David M. Robinson, professor of archaeology at Johns Hopkins University here.

Famed for having unearthed the old Greek city of Olynthus, Dr. Robinson stirred up the world of archaeology yesterday with the statement that not only the Toronto Museum but the Field Museum of Chicago harbored false Cretan artifacts, and that a number of United States museums had faked Byzantine objects. As incidental to his contention that the Royal and the Field had spurious Cretan objects, the archaeologist said the most noteworthy faked object pretending to be Cretic art was the Cerveteri Sarcophagus, once prominent exhibit of the British Museum in London.

The British Museum has acknowledged it was hoaxed in its purchase of the Sarcophagus long regarded as a relic of 600 B.C.

Charge Permit Issuer Without a Permit

Leo O'Coin, 17-year-old Tweed youth, appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in County Police Court today charged with a serious offence. There not being sufficient evidence, the charge was dismissed against the accused. During his term in custody, O'Coin was examined by Dr. Doyle of the Medical Health Department, Kingston. Following the examination of O'Coin, R. C. Donovan, K.C., local Crown Attorney, upon the receipt of the report of Dr. Doyle, pointed out to the accused he would be given one more chance to behave himself and endeavour to re-establish himself in his community. O'Coin was then permitted to return to his home in Tweed.

Service Charge on Cheques Issued On 'Savings' May be Adopted Here

Chairman of Local Clearing House Explains Why Operating Charge is Necessary—Custom in Great Britain And U. S.

Charge for checking privileges against savings accounts is being made in a number of cities and it is probable that the same practice will be adopted by banks in Belleville in the near future.

Service charges on current accounts have been in force in Belleville for some years and are in effect, at present, in addition at the present time.

On the question of service charge on current accounts, Mr. G. A. C. Wilson, Chairman of the Clearing House at Belleville, and local Manager of the Bank of Montreal, today said: "The main reason for the institution of the service charge has been caused by the gradual diminishing earning power of the banks. In the formation of the Bank of Canada, the commercial banks lost note issue privileges which reduced their earning capacity to a marked degree. Then, the demands for commercial loans in the past few years have been very limited and service charge on current accounts is really following a practice carried out both in the United States and Great Britain for years. The local banks have had no difficulty with their customers in the adoption of these service charges."

"In the matter of an operating charge on savings accounts which is being carried out in some parts of Canada, Belleville included," said, "it is altogether likely that a service charge will be put in force in Belleville. In the United States no banks allow checking against savings accounts, and in most cases, the interest on savings accounts is worked on the minimum monthly balance. In Canada checking has been allowed on savings accounts and interest is allowed on minimum balance, a balance which is far more advantageous to the depositor.

"One of the banks in New York started a new scheme for unprofitable checking accounts. The account may be opened for one dollar and no more than five cheques are allowed. The bank makes a charge of five cents for each cheque drawn and every cheque deposited.

The minimum charge on unprofitable current accounts in Canada is fifty cents a month, and the charge is based on the number of cheques drawn and the average bank balance carried in the account. Mr. Weir explained.

Just what charge will be made in Belleville on savings accounts is not known. In some places, it is said that a charge of twenty cents of cheques are allowed monthly on the balance of five hundred dollars or more.

Belleville: The Financial Post there is a considerable cost in looking after these savings accounts. It is further surprising to realize that in Belleville there are many thousands of savings accounts on each of them very small and yet costing the banks something in the way of service to allow checking. Even in the event of improvement in business it is understood that the policy of charging on unprofitable savings accounts will have to be put in force.

BRIDE AND GROOM ARE HONORED

On Thursday evening Oct. 24th, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hicks, Carmel, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Pringle (nee Mary Hicks). About 30 immediate friends being present to spend a social evening with the happy couple.

On Friday evening Mary's friends and neighbors called her home and presented her with a cabinet of "Her Majesty" silver. Later the chariwri crowd presented her with teaspoons and a sugar shell of the same pattern.

The following address was read by Miss Phyllis Atkinson:

Dear Mary and Wesley:—

We have dropped in tonight to wish you "bon voyage" across the well-traversed ocean, the tea of matrimony on which you have embarked. We trust that the skipper whom you have signed with is staunch and true; and we can all wonder for the sterling qualities of his worthy mate, whom we have known since childhood.

As you know, the ocean is not always calm, for storms will sometimes gather, and rocks loom ahead but if you both put your trust in the great Pilot He will guide you to a safe anchorage, and your barque will rest at last on that beautiful shore.

We are glad of this opportunity to do honour to one of our girls, who has been such a valuable asset to our church and community life.

In all phases of our Carmel church work, you have taken an active part and gave unceasingly of your time and talents—as a convener in the Young People's Union, member of the choir, and as earnest worker in the Sunday School.

To remind you of this happy event in your future life and also of your friends in this community we ask you to accept these gifts as a slight expression of our regard for you.

We hope as you travel along life's pathway together you and Wesley will always find the bright side of life and that God's richest blessings will follow you. "May the winds that blow ill "Ere they reach you stand still"

Signed on behalf of the community: Margaret Reynolds, Ruby Bowes, Mabel Ormsbee, Percy Patterson.

Harold Brintnell then read the following address on behalf of the chariwri crowd:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Prindle:—

We do not expect to add much to what has already been said. In looking over your past, Mary, we find that you, the other women, like a verse in the Bible, "Became a father of men," and we hope you have landed a good one. And also, Mary, if Wesley doesn't obey, tell him his mother took him across her knee and that you will do the same. And Wesley if Mary does not obey, tell her a cold winter is creeping around the corner, she may need a foot-warmer.

You may have ups and downs in life, especially if you live in a hilly country. You may have obstacles and spectacles. Try and see through both. We hope you will meet, on any dark days, if you do, just sing "Brighten up the corner where you are" or "If your heart keeps right, there'll be joy and gladness through the darkest night."

This advice which is freely and cheerfully given comes from the Serenaders, and we hope the notes of the cow bells, dinner bells, circular saw etc, will ever linger in your memory as a token of esteem and friendship which is combined with the good wishes of the Serenaders which we ask you to accept as a gift which we hope will be useful for years to come.

Signed—Glenn Patterson, Floyd Bigford, Carman Dafoe, Joe Brintnell, Gordon Howes, Charles Brintnell, Percy Reynolds, Harold Brintnell.

Mary and Wesley in a few meaningful heartfelt words thanked their many friends. Lunch was served and a happy social hour was spent.

3RD SIDNEY

Third Sidney—A jolly time was spent at Centenary school on Thursday evening when the tea-bell rang. Mr. Edgar Adams gave a masquerade party for the pupils, their parents and friends. Almost everyone came in costume, and during the promenade the judges found their task a difficult one.

Miss Johnson and Miss Helen Hart marched off the first prizes and Mr. Douglas Holton was found to be the best dressed man with Master Bruce Holton winning the children's prize. A good program was given by the pupils of the school.

Games and games were played, and after a peanut scramble, lunch was served. Mr. Fred Adams acted as chairman for the evening. Congratulations are extended to Mr. Adams for the success of the evening's entertainment, and the parents appreciate the efforts taken in entertaining the children and young people, on an evening, that they might otherwise be tempted to be out playing pranks and perhaps be getting damage to property. Some of our young people who attended the "Seeing Belle Home" were rather fortunate in experiencing the thrills of a real earthquake while wide awake, while others only have a faint recollection of how the house suddenly awakened from a deep sleep by a terrifying rumble and rattle of windows. Many and varied were the explanations told concerning the tremors felt from the quake on Thursday evening.

There was a large crowd gathered at the home of Mr. Frank Jefford on Thursday evening the charivari his son Murney, who was married in Saturday last to Miss Gladys Rush of Bayside.

Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner and family have moved into the house formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Oden Penn.

Mrs. Harley Hubble spent a few days recently with Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Parks, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Goodman, Thurlow.

A good number from this line attended the chicken tea at Centenary on Tuesday evening and all report a bountiful supper and an excellent program.

Mr. Harold Cummings met with a painful accident and had several fingers injured on his right hand while operating his threshing machine last Saturday at the home of Mr. Saylor, Front Road.

Mrs. Chas. B. Simpson has returned to her home at Smithfield after spending the past week at the home of her sister Mrs. Geo. Parry.

The sympathy of this community goes out to Mr. Job Clapp, 2nd., line, who lies critically ill in Belleville General Hospital as a result of an accident that occurred on his farm while repairing a wagon. Mr. Clapp received a fractured skull, and other head injuries.

Mrs. Albert Page spent Tuesday of this week with Mrs. E. Hubble.

Thanksgiving guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Parry were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Simpson and Miss Mae Tuckerry of Smithfield, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Clark and Miss Reta Clarke, Thurlow. Mr. and Mrs. D. Minaker and baby of Odessa.

Roslin and District

Roslin—"Manchuria as I Saw It" was the subject of a very interesting address given by the Rev. Y. A. Koffend of Stirling in St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday evening.

Speaking of conditions in China Rev. Koffend said China was never hit by the depression, as she has always been in the throes of depression.

China a Land of Bells

Bells are used everywhere. At the birth of a baby especially if it is a boy. By the trades people to attract attention, but the finest bells are found in the Temples, and many of these have been taken by tourists and souvenir hunters.

Chinese streets are narrow and crooked, they are built thus to keep away evil spirits, as these supposedly always walk in a straight line.

"China a Land of Yells"

Shopkeepers hire men to stand before their places of business and cry their wares to attract trade.

Beggars in the streets cry for money and food, they are banded together with a wealthy man as their leader and every day, each member must bring in a certain amount or he is disqualified. Some of their methods of securing money were described by Rev. Koffend.

The fisherman sing at their work and laborers work to the rhythm of song.

China a Land of Smells

Rev. Koffend very vividly described some of these.

"China a Land of Father Sons" is the name for many suffering which is being alleviated by Christianity was described.

Formerly it was the custom to bind the feet of baby girls to keep them small, at birth the feet were turned backward and the feet bandaged and each day the bandages were tightened.

Through the work of Missionaries a law has been passed prohibiting this practice.

A number of stories were shown by Rev. Koffend, A pair of shoes worn by a woman, bound feet, has been bound. A fly swatter made of camel's hair used to keep flies away while eating as the Chinese people never kill an insect.

Several fans were shown, fans are used extensively in China, but you must not buy your own fan but wait for a friend to present you with one. These are usually hand painted on the front and hand engraved on the back and in front some message and the autograph of the giver.

The coat of a Chinese Emperor and a table cover from a Royal Palace were also shown these were heavily embroidered with threads of pure gold.

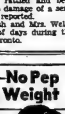
Before and after his address Rev. Koffend sang several groups of songs. Mrs. Koffend played his accompaniments, and also sang in a number of them. Her first group included "My Task", "When Roses Bloom" and "Three Le Jack". The second was "Danny Boy" and "Only Seven". Rev. Koffend then gave a reading "A Consecrated Being Examined for the Ministry" following this "Going Home", "There ain't Nobody Knows the Troubles I Seen" and a Negro Spiritual Duet" were sung.

After his address Rev. and Mrs. Koffend sang "Drifting Low Sweet Chariot."

Rev. D. C. Hill expressed the appreciation of the gathering to Rev. and Mrs. Koffend for the splendid entertainment.

After the programme the ladies of the church served the delicious pie supper.

On Thursday evening members of their family gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Ruff to honor them on the occasion of the forty-first anniversary of their wedding. A P.M. dinner was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in a social way.



Mr. and Mrs. Reid were the recipients of some lovely gifts. Guests from a distance included the former sister Mrs. Mackenzie Spencer of Detroit, Mich. and brother in law Mr. Andrew Knott also of Detroit.

Mr. J. P. Hume, B.A., Goderich, Ontario, and his son Mr. Donald Hume of Toronto spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White and family.

The earthquake early Friday morning was felt by many residents of this community. Windows and doors rattled and dishes shook, though no damage of a serious nature has been reported.

Mr. H. E. Welsh and Mrs. Welsh spent a couple of days during the past week in Toronto.

BOY DISCHARGES RIFLE IN CITY

Gun is Confiscated And The User Severely Reprimanded

What local police believed to be a modern record was established in Belleville one day last week, when not a single transient applied at the local police station to search a sleeping quarters, on Sunday night, ten having been accommodated the night previous.

Local police were asked to endeavour locating Frank Stephens, 11 year old Toronto youth, who ran away from his Shuter St. home on Monday morning. Young Stephens is believed to be heading towards Halifax and was last seen riding his bicycle. He is described as being 5 feet 2 inches tall and of dark complexion. His parents are anxiously awaiting information leading to his apprehension.

Saturday night's heavy traffic in Belleville saw two automobile owners return to their parked cars only to find police stickers attached to their windshield. The vehicles were parked in front of Front St. garages and too near fire hydrants, contrary to the city by-laws.

Constables Hand and Evans were called to Murney St. on Sunday afternoon, where a number of youths claimed they were being used as a target, by some person discharging a 22 calibre rifle, but the youths were at a loss as to where the sharp shooter was located. The boys were playing football on the west side of Murney St., when they heard bullets whistling over their heads and lodging into a barn nearby. The boys were of the opinion the marksman was trying to puncture their football. Subsequently investigation on the part of the constables, however, disclosed a sixteen year old lad residing on Dundas St. had been discharging a .22 calibre rifle out of his bedroom window. The bullets were fired over a barn and had apparently frightened the football players. The gunman could not see the football game in progress and was surprised to hear his bullets were interrupting a perfectly good Sunday rugby game. The gun was confiscated and taken to the police station, however.

Only one juvenile was apprehended in Belleville over the week-end.

Lighthouse Keeper's Wife Saved by Wireless

Halifax, Nov. 4 (CP)—A seaplane rescue for a man in lonely Sable Island with a doctor on board did not take off Sunday because a splutter of strokes probably saved the life of Mrs. Broderick, wife of 12-e island's operator.

Physicians said the woman was suffering from fever, difficult breathing and muscle cramps and her husband flashed a message to Halifax asking medical advice.

Dr. J. E. Maclellan diagnosed the condition as acute influenza and outlined a course of treatment.

Again the Sable Island wireless stuttered. Mrs. Broderick was worse and further instructions were required.

The doctor responded immediately and while awaiting another message, prepared a plane to take off with Dr. John Rankine if the patient's condition did not improve.

But the wireless brought another message. Mrs. Broderick's temperature had fallen and her condition was much improved.

President Praises The Canadian Press

Toronto, Nov. 4 (CP)—In presidential address to the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Directors of The Canadian Press today, W. B. Preston of the Brantford Expositor praised the news coverage of the Co-operative Newsgathering and distributing agency's activities during the recent hectic months.

"We have three Provincial elections and a Federal election, and a year in Europe with its grave international complications, all occurring within the span of twelve months is an experience almost without precedence and one that would strain the resources of any news-gathering organization," Mr. Preston said. "But The Canadian Press has, I think I can fairly say, measured up to its responsibilities in a manner uniformly satisfactory to its publisher members and performed a service to the Canadian people the nature of which is a credit to every member.

"The daily newspapers of Canada have never appeared to better advantage than during this fourth month and the accurate and impartial character of the news received from the British United Press has been in line with the very finest traditions and methods of journalism and has conferred the highest possible benefit upon readers of that organization.

Referring to The Canadian Press election service, Mr. Preston said: "The Canadian Press revealed itself in this campaign as a medium through the election campaign as the world's outstanding institution and one with which we may be proud to be associated. It gave all parties a fair show and through its dissemination of accurate, absolutely impartial reports of the political addresses of the outstanding leaders helped to encourage the independent thinking, that was undoubtedly a characteristic of the last election."

THE WORLD GOES ON

Men's feeling of security on terra firma soon returns, even if it was momentarily shaken by an earthquake. The world of man moves on at its steady pace today, though the eastern part of the Continent had quivered and rumbled with disturbances beneath the surface. In volcanic countries, hardy dwellers plant their gardens on the slopes of volcanoes, though they know they may sputter forth flame, lava and ashes to cover them. There is no part of the world where earthquakes are not felt at some time or other though it is the rare occurrence that is disastrous. Montana has felt 500 shocks in a short time but only one was severe.

How vividly 'quakes have always impressed people is shown in no less a play than "Romeo and Juliet" where one of the characters, the nurse of Juliet, refers to a 'quake in the latter part of the sixteenth century in England. People remember an earth shock, but fortunately they are rarely called upon to go through a very severe earthquake.

One of the novel features about this last disturbance is that the epicentre is in a rough country, somewhere near Ontario and Quebec boundaries.

Canada had an experience in 1665 when the St. Lawrence area recorded a very severe shock.

Dr. Hodgson, Canadian seismologist, is going into the north country to discover information about this earthquake. Though the country is almost inaccessible in places owing to the roughness of the country it is still within the bounds of civilization and may prove a very fertile source of new data about earthquakes.

Knowledge of the cause of quakes is not extensive, so much is wrapped in mystery as the causes lie underground, where conditions are such that the scientist cannot have an indication in advance as to possibility of tremors.

Even if man could forecast quakes, it is difficult to know if there would be any advantage. It would no doubt cause unrest, but no one could tell just the area that would be affected. Populaces might rush out of large cities where there would be grave danger of falling buildings and fire, and make their way to the countryside for safety but there is doubt whether there would be entire safety there.

Man is going on to inhabit the earth whether it quakes or not. He has been able to control some things, but the elements are largely beyond his control and there is something in human nature which will face the elemental powers of nature without fear.

O WISE YOUNG JUDGE!

Solomon was rivalled in wisdom by a judge in Montclair, N.J., who sentenced three sixteen-year-old high school boys who broke the law by rigging up an old motorcycle and by making it run and who used a 1933 plate which they had changed to read 1935. The boys ran into a car and fled.

Their penalty includes cleaning, greasing and assisting in the repair of cars in the police garage on Saturday afternoons for a year. They must attend classes in automobile mechanics on Monday and Wednesday evening and pay fines of fifty cents each per week for a year.

The Recorder learned that the boys were driven on by an irresistible urge towards things mechanical and so he imposed the penalty which will be constructive in its effect upon the young and will give an outlet for their interest as well as turning them from law infractions.

So the Recorder upholds the dignity of law, which has been flouted by the youths and at the same time he gives the boys a chance to develop according to their inclinations.

One of the boys was already on probation for driving without a licence a car in a crash a year ago.

Truly a Daniel is come to judgment!

NOISE OF PRACTISING

Teachers and students of music have heard this complaint before— that they disturb the neighborhoods in which they reside. Even a renowned singer of "Met" fame has stirred the people of his part of New York by the "noise" of his practices. If the practice of a great artist is not more melodious than the monotony of the amateur students wrestling with the piano or violin or the voice, there is some ground for the complaint. Tibbett's manager says they get free concerts, but free concerts when you do not want them or have not time to listen are no doubt quite annoying. What will the artist do—lower that great voice or move to other fields? Doubtless if he is like the student he will stay where he is and there will be really no solution of the problem. But what about a sound proof room for such practising? Highly paid artists might find enough money to insulate their room so that no free concerts escape by the doors, windows or walls.

"THEY SHALL NOT DIE"

Through lanes and apple orchards brown and bare,
The Frost King takes his way these autumn days:
He chooses out his retinue with care;
No laggard qualifies, no braggart stays.

O'er rustling carpets dun and umber dyed,
He stalks to scorch the hedges with his breath,
Where marigolds are smiling still in pride,
He stops to frown, and leaves the blight of death.

His cohorts set in gaunt and grim array,
The Frost King marches on across the land,
But, why is this with merry men and gay
That follows with a silver wand in hand?

'Tis Winter comes with healing in her wings
To purify with snow and bless with sleep
The ravaged earth, that bruised and withered things,
Revivified, their tryst with Spring may keep.

EARTHQUAKES MAY BE HARNESSED BY TIRED BUSINESS MEN to shake down their furnace fires as the result of a discovery by a well-known Front Street businessman of one good result of the recent 'quake. Before retiring last Thursday night he visited the basement, looked at the furnace, and decided that the fire was dead out. He went to bed—along about one a.m. the 'quake came along and shook things up considerable in that business man's home. In the full of the morning when the family arose the fire in the furnace was found to be burning briskly—as the result of the shake-down by the earthquake—So, Believe it or not, Ripley.

CARNERA, THE MAN MOUNTAIN WHO MADE A FORTUNE IN THE SQUARED RING mainly because of his size and awkwardness—before being knocked out of important ring money by two guys of the punch, Baer and Louis, came back for a brief appearance before ten thousand spectators in New York last Friday night when he poked his elbow into the eye of one Neusel, German alleged fighter, and put that gentleman out of business. Carnera's elbows and feet are more dangerous apparently than his fists —several opponents complained that he planked his big feet on them in a manner which tended to minimize the effect of their punches and add to the power of Carnera's blows.—now he has a trained elbow, packed with dynamite for his opponents. New prize ring rules will have to be devised governing the use of the elbow.

ODD AND INTERESTING EARTHQUAKE STORIES INCLUDE THE CHICKENCOOP ONE where a local farmer, awakened by the 'quake, heard a noise in his chickencoop and rushed out in time to frighten thieves away before they succeeded in running off with a considerable number. As it was they managed to get away with a considerable number. The farmer, aforesaid, while not wishing the chicken thieves any real and lasting harm would not have sorrowed if the 'quake had opened a pit for their erring feet and buried them with their sins away down deep where they would cause no trouble and the righteous would be at peace.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

Mike was going to Dublin for the first time in his life, and his friend Pat was giving him a few hints on what to do and where to go in the big city.

"What do I do when I go to the Zoo?" asked Mike.

"You be careful about the Zoo," advised Pat. "You'll see fine animals if you follow the words 'To the Lions' or 'To the elephants,' but take no notice of the one 'To the exit,' for, begorrah, Mike, it's a fraud, and it's outside. I found myself when I went to look for it."

New Message of Hope For Crippled Children

Belleville Rotary Club Campaign in Behalf of Children—Hon. Dr. Faulkner to Speak

For those who have eyes to see and ears to hear the dawn of, of a new day has arrived—sights and sounds of a new era are more than audible in the land.

The fact that more than two hundred crippled children of Belleville and district who would otherwise have received no medical treatment at all have received the kind and careful medical treatment of the most skilful specialists in the land in the past few years is proof positive that there is a new spirit moving, a spirit of loving-kindness and concern for the health and happiness of others, more especially the children.

Over two hundred crippled children given specialist treatment, most of them completely cured, all of them helped, is a wonderful story of Christian helpfulness and a cheerful acknowledgment by many men that "I am my brother's keeper."

When it is considered that some of the children under treatment have been receiving specialist treatment in the Hospital for Sick Children as long as two years one can imagine the extent of the work and its thoroughness.

MIRACLES OF HEALING

Belleville Rotary Club undertook this work several years ago and the members have given of their time and money freely in extending to as many crippled children as possible the blessings of medical specialist treatment. The work has expanded beyond the limits of the city and the Rotary Club is now entering a very much larger field of action and wish to extend the work to all parts of the district, as well as helping as much as possible the general work in the province.

Belleville has attained widespread fame as leader in this work of rescuing crippled children from the pain and sorrow of a lifetime of hampered and handicapped existence and with a large vista of opportunity opening it is purposed to permit the general public to participate in this wonderful work and share in the blessing which has always attended any help extended to the weak and helpless since the day when the Saviour of mankind told the doubters who is greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven—suffer the children to come unto Me and forbid them not for OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN".

HON. DR. FAULKNER'S MESSAGE

A Bigger and Better Campaign in behalf of the crippled children of this district has been planned and the first shot will be fired in public Monday when Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, will address the members of the Belleville Rotary Club in the Hotel Quinte at noon on the problems directly affecting the crippled child in Ontario and what is being done and can be done to bring sunshine into their lives and start them on the road to complete lives and the highest type of citizenship. Following this inspirational meeting the Rotarians will go into a huddle and arrange to go places and do things. A campaign of education will be conducted so that all may know the extent of the work already effected and the amount of work yet to be done and how best to do it. The plans include the publishing of a special edition of the Ontario Intelligencer by Rotarians which will tell by word and picture the story of the crippled child—the voice of the crippled child crying out for help. Who can refuse that plaintive cry?

ROTARY DAY A SURPRISE

Rotary Day for the Crippled Children is another high spot planned for the campaign and it is expected that this day will be marked for the near future, will long be remembered with pleasure.

Information as to the plans and purposes of the campaign will be published as they develop and there is no doubt that all citizens of this district will be greatly and helpfully interested in the work.

Business and Friendships Improve in Captured Area

The invading Italian soldiers proved a boon to the businessmen and women of the various captured Ethiopian cities. Below is a scene in the market-place of Adowa several days after its capture, as a soldier bargained for two eggs, a rarity taking empty bottles in return. Upper left, an Askari sergeant of the invading Italian forces, finds the belles of this Ethiopian town very interesting during a lull in the Italian advance into the "black empire". He is "introducing" a friend from Italy.

For an army on the march, Upper right, forgetting whatever enmity he might feel for the invader as an opportunity for barter presents itself, an Ethiopian haggles with an Italian soldier over a native product.

EARTHQUAKE ROCKS EASTERN CANADA

Though the most severe earthquake to strike eastern Canada in 20 years fell a little on our shores, others are frightened and another could be more serious. The quake was strong enough to smash seismograph instruments in Ottawa cities. The graph recorded in Toronto was off the scale. A chimney cracked by the shock in Toronto is also shown. A fault in the earth's surface near the St. Lawrence River is believed to have been the starting point. Scientists claim that, owing to the nature of the land in eastern Canada, a serious earthquake is not likely to occur.

THERE'LL BE MORE LIKE THIS!

Here lies Lieut. Morgansti, first Italian officer to fall in the invasion of Ethiopia, to be buried in Ethiopian territory. The grave is near Adowa, where many others now dot the landscape.

ALD. H. HILL TO RUN FOR MAYOR

Served Six Years With Last Five as Chairman of Fire

Definite announcement that he would offer himself to the electors of the City of Belleville as Mayor for the year 1936 was made today by Alderman Harry Hill.

The decision to contest the Mayoralty seat culminates six years continuous service to the city as Alderman, during five of which were spent as Chairman of Fire. His first term in the council was served as Chairman of Industry.

"My platform will be 'progressive economy'," stated Alderman Hill today in announcing his intention.

Alderman Hill, a consistent leader at the polls during the past six elections, is one of the city's better known business men, a resident of Murney Ward, and resident of Belleville for the past twenty-one years. He is a native of this section, having been born in the vicinity of Newburgh.

Lumbering Companies Prepare for Operations

Lumbering business in North Hastings will undergo some activity this season it is indicated by the fact that Stobbell and Son of Bancroft have announced their intention of shipping two cargos on their timber limits in the vicinity of Paudash Lake. Martin Brothers of Bancroft have also been operating on Lake St. Peter, with a second gang, going in at headquarters at Baptiste Lake. D. K. Card is operating a camp a few miles from Lake St. Peter embarking on orders for a western furniture company.

It is understood that several jobbing firms are negotiating for concessions in the northern part of the county, which camps will furnish employment for considerable number of men from the Bancroft district.

PROMINENT MASON IS GIVEN HIGH POSITION

Mr. R. Dargavel, well known in local Masonic circles, where he has been a frequent visitor, former resident of Newburgh and now of Toronto, has been elected president of the Masonic Relief Association of Canada and the United States. The appointment was made at an annual meeting held at Fort Worth, Texas. Mr. Dargavel is Grand Master of the A. F. and A. M. of Ontario.

PERCH PITING WELL

With the filling in of the government dock extension perch have taken up residence at the east side of the rock wall by hundreds. Dozens of fishermen on the fill have been laid off as fill operations are now suspended.

Message Thrown in Bay Found 81 Days After

MacDonald, Point Anne today and delivered to this office. The writing in pencil has been well preserved and is quite legible, although it has become damp when taken from the container. The fore signing the card are Belleville residents.

Lilac Bushes Leaf in Second Spring, Manitoba Maple Gives Vernal Signs

Springlike growth is manifest in certain parts of the city, according to nature lovers. One of the best evidences of growth due to second spring, caused by the unusual weather of the past month was given The Ontario Intelligencer today by Mr. M. Armstrong, of 19 St. Charles Street. She brought in two small branches from a lilac bush and two from a Manitoba maple tree were showing with a healthy green and soft green leaves for all the world like springtime leaves. Those he had cut in his garden, the trees being thirty feet apart.

"While the bush and the tree are not entirely in leaf, many large clusters of both are showing," said Mr. Armstrong. "I have never seen the like of this in my whole life". The leaves are quite far advanced in size.

"When did you first notice them"

"On Friday morning. I also noticed in the flower beds, where the flowers were thought to have been killed by the frost, signs of fresh growth coming from the roots."

Mr. Armstrong thinks all the usual sights of the season are changing.

Police Called in to Quell Disturbance at Trenton Relief Camp

With some 400 workers participating, a general strike was called at the Relief Camp Project No. 28 situated at the Trenton airport on Saturday afternoon, following inability of the paymaster to produce their monthly pay cheques, which are due on the first Saturday of every month.

So riotous did the strikers become that Inspector Fraser Gardiner, accompanied by Traffic Officers Sam Ervine and Bert Delaney, rushed to the scene of the trouble and assisted in quelling the trouble. The workers complained they were left without money to purchase clothes and especially "smokes", their pay for the past having being made on the first Saturday of each month. Airport officials endeavoured to pacify the rioters, but without avail, prior to the arrival of the O.P.P. Subsequently Constable William Goodman at the Airport assured the strikers they would be advanced their tobacco money over the week-end and assured them their pay cheques would be received from Ottawa and turned over to them early Monday of this week.

Following numblings and the disapproval of some workers, however, the strikers were induced to return to their quarters and accept the terms as outlined by Constable Goodman. Quiet prevailed and order were restored with no damage or injuries resulting, although at one time matters looked rather grave, it was reported by eye witnesses. The workers are back at their accustomed posts today, Provincial police announced.

TREK IS ON TO HUNTING GROUNDS

Indications Point to a Large Number Out After Deer

Local hunters, laden with baggage, guns and camping equipment, deserted the city in the field on the opening day of the deer shooting season, which starts tomorrow. Tuesday, November 5, at midnight the city today by motor car and train for the north country.

Indications point to a record number of hunters this year, due to the number of permits that have been issued at the local office and the quantity of ammunition that has been purchased.

Some condemnation of the new clause in the deer hunting regulations this season, which states that no more than two does or fawns may be killed by any hunting party in each party of five hunters, has been voiced at 24 1-2c.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Nov. 4—(CP)— Quiet demand for scattered steels, rails, oils, mines and specialties kept today's stock market generally pointed upward despite profit taking in the last hour of business.

International Nickel; Canadian Pacific and McIntyre were steady to a trifle higher among Dominion stocks. On the curb Lake Shore and Distillers-Corp-Seagrams improved a shade, while Hiram Walker held even. Consolidated Mines were narrow. Canadian funds were unchanged at 99 1-16 cents.

A minimum of fractions to a point or so included U.S. Steel; Bethlehem; American Steel Foundries; American Rolling Mill; Philip Morris; U.S. Smelting; N.Y. Central; Santa Fe and U.S. Gypsum. Allied Chemical dropped 3 and American Can, Western Union, and Case were off 7 each. General Motors, Chrysler and the American Commercial Alcohol were down fractionally along with Columbia Gas, North American and American Telephone.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Nov. 4 (AP) — This stock market turned dull and developed a slightly irregular trend during late trading today.

At the beginning of the final hour shares selling small fractions to around a point higher included Bethlehem Steel, U.S. Steel, Auburn Auto, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Phillips Petroleum, Great Northern, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Consolidated Gas and U.S. Rubber. Among losers of about an equal amount were General Motors, Chrysler, Studebaker, Western Union, Columbia Gas, Kennecott and Anaconda. Sales approximated 1,000,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 4 (CP) — Several stocks from each metal group picked up momentum on the advance and were helping their course on heavy buying on Toronto mining market this afternoon. Pickle Crow and Central Patricia featured the golds, the former advancing 20c to 2.08 and the latter 7 to 24½.

The list had little support from the local mining market, which was merely steady except in the case of silver. The white metal advanced 5-16 of a penny on the news that China was nationalizing the country's stock and would use it as backing for paper money, in response such issues as Castle, Nipissing, Eldorado and Premier advanced 8 to 15 cents each on heavy trading.

Falconbridge came back strong, selling up to 4.90 and Noranda and Ventures were other gainers in the base metals group.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Nov. 4 (CP)—Oils were about the only consistently strong group on the industrial list of Toronto Industrial Exchange this afternoon and these turned over to heavy volume at gains of ¼ for International Petroleum, ⅛ for Imperial and Anglo-Canadian Oil and British American. Spotty strength elsewhere gave the Board a narrow majority of gains over losses by early afternoon.

Distillers' issues were active with loss of ¼ to ⅜ showing for Walker's Common and Distillers-Seagrams. Canada Malting featured the beer stocks with a rise of ½ point, the metals Nickle continued to advance, hitting a new high for the year at 33¾.

Correct Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Rings

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Does the bridegroom purchase both his wedding ring and the bride's or does the bride purchase his ring?

M.

The groom purchases the bride's ring, and the bride purchases the ring that she gives to her groom.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper to address a bride, as well as a groom? If not, what would be the proper thing to say to a bride?

Constant

It is not considered correct to "congratulate" the bride. That word is assigned to offering one's felicitations to the groom. That is, we congratulate the groom on having won such a charming bride. In offering our felicitations to the bride we say, "Best wishes" or "Every good wish for your happiness." If you keep these two appropriate expressions "congratulations" for the groom, and "best wishes" for the bride, and add to them any other friendly comment, you will always be on safe ground. Solicitations will be all the best form.

Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am over the age of age and expect to be introduced to an elderly professional man. I am thoroughly puzzled as to what to say when I meet him

Uncertain

Even though you are such a very young lady, you cannot consider an "elderly" man, he is introduced to you. The introduction would correctly be, "Mr. Worthy, may I present Mr. (or Doctor) Worthy?" Then you smile Adams, Mr. Worthy." To acknowledge the introduction you should say what we always say when we are introduced for the first time, "How do you do?" If he is a doctor, he will say, "I could not resist the temptation to say 'How do you do.' It is the time of one. Then, if after this formality, you wish to say, "It is a very great pleasure to meet you, Doctor Worthy," I'm sure he will be pleased.

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to be married next month and I would like you to tell me what the etiquette would be instead of the engraved invitations which I cannot afford. Please tell me how many invitations should be worded?

I think it is in good taste to express the kindly feeling to all our friends, on this day, to witness the ceremony, is it not? I want to do the right thing with the minimum amount of fuss. Can you suggest wording at three o'clock in the afternoon?

Mother

If the wedding is to be an informal one, you, as hostess, would write the invitations. Like this:

Mrs. Blank Brown

to be married in the Blank Church, on Tuesday, December 5th, at three o'clock and after the ceremony

Love
Love

Love Affectionately,

It is indeed a charming and friendly thing for the relatives and friends of both families to witness the ceremony.

Shipboard Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—My husband and I are going on a short cruise and it is my belief that it is the duty of the ship's friends down to see you off—this is the custom where I come from—is their part. Will you please advise me if this is correct?

2.—We have been seated at a table with other people for the first time to dine together. Should the captain introduce his wife and himself, or is it the proper thing to say to a steward showing you to the table?

Mary Jane

1.—Yes. Since going on a boat off means the scheduling of a good deal of time and only those who seems more mannerly to me to that the suggestion or request-to-come come from the one sailing. It is always proper to ask if you may come, even if we stay only a minute or two. But if we invite a friend to come, and it isn't possible for her or him, this may mean a good deal of explanation.

2.—Table-introduction on board ship are usually self-introductions. The husband makes the introduction of his wife and himself.

Young Man's Questions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—When an escort rings the bell at the door of his girl friend's home, and her father answers the door, should the escort ask, "Is your daughter ready" or refer to her by her first name?

2.—Should he ask if she is in, or ask if she is ready to go out?

3.—If the girl is fickle and is a bit backward, do you think he should the escort ask her to do so, or let the girl decide?

4.—What criticisms could you administer" to this letter?

Dear Sir:

1.—It would seem more natural for the young man to refer to his girl-friend as "Mary". To say "your daughter" is stilted.

2.—He should say, "Good evening, Mrs. Allen. Is Mary in?" or, "Is Mary at home, Mrs. Allen, is Mary at home?" The "ready to go out" question can be determined later.

3.—The well-bred girl doesn't "pick up" with her escort. When she needs assistance in crossing a crowded street or crossing, or using the pavement in icy or otherwise difficult-to-walk-on, then the gallant man offers her his arm. Otherwise they walk independently, as a lady and gentleman. So when a man sees that a girl wishes to walk independently, he should walk along with her. Good manners and breeding, rather than to her "backwardness".

4.—You write such an exception-ally fine interesting letter as far as expression and form go that I wish you would permit me to urge you to get some better paper and envelopes. Leave a margin on all four sides of your handwriting—this will give your letters an artistic appearance, and will help considerably to lose that cramped look. The form of your heading, the salutation, the ending are all right—and I'm glad to see no abbreviations. Why not write it all again, on that nice, dignified paper that you are going to acquire?

Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please let me know if it is correct to introduce a friend to another young lady, or is it more correct to say, "May I introduce you to my friend?"

We should definitely lean to the side of not making introductions when the meeting is so casual as this. Such introductions usually are embarrassing, and usually are forced and pointless.

But, on the other hand, I realize that many people feel "hurt" or disregarded when a friend with them makes no effort to know or recognize or make an introduction It's a ridiculous point of view to take, but it is there, nevertheless, and there is always a quandary as to whether or not the friend with whom you are has this point of view. But usually it is wise not greeting to do so other person brief, this introduction needn't be made.

In Europe, where they take introductions far more importantly than we do, an introduction made in a casual meeting of this kind is considered distinctly ill-bred, and one doesn't expect such an introduction. Instead the fact is taken for granted that it won't be made.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on social Manners submitted by readers.)

Flowers for the "Deb"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What kind of present does one give a debutante. If any? I was always under the impression that flowers are the only correct gift.

U. K.

Flowers are the gift usually sent to a debutante, sent on the day of the debut, as that they may be used as a decorative background on that important occasion.

Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give a surprise birthday party for my sister. Will you please tell me just how to word these informal invitations so the invitations to the girls will let them know that they are to bring their escorts, and also the invitations to the boys will let them know that they are to each bring a girl friend?

Sister

Your note might read something like this:

Dear Susan:

I am planning to have a party for Betty, on her birthday, Friday, the tenth of December, and I do hope you will come. And would you like to bring a boy with you? If you will ask him first, and then tell me who is the fortunate boy that you have chosen, and his address, I'll write him too a note of invitation, welcoming him to our party.

Will you plan to arrive about eight o'clock, and rather informally, also, since it is a surprise party, and I'd naturally want to have the guests assemble before Betty comes in.

Do say "yes", for Betty and I wouldn't consider it a party without you!

Affectionately,

(Kind of invitations like a boy would be worded about the same, except that the sentences about "bringing a girl friend" and "your girl".

Then notice that I have suggested that you write a note of invitation to the boy, so that he is invited by guests whom you are inviting. This is the correct thing to do, rather than to have him accept these notes. They would read something like this:

Dear Mr. Thompson:

Miss Jane Smith has told me the happy news that she has invited you to come to our party for my sister, Betty, on the tenth of December, at eight o'clock and I do hope you will accept this invitation, and tell you how delighted we will be to welcome you into our home, and we are looking forward to your coming.

Cordially yours,

Glad to Have Met

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When meeting a young man who expresses his pleasure at having met you, is it correct to answer, "Glad to."

First we say "Thank you" when a person makes this pleasant comment. Then, since the meeting is the unfinished, a little as if we acknowledge that the pleasure is only to be. Then, if other pleasantries are said, I'm sure you would then say, "It is a great pleasure to have met you too", or "Thank you. It is indeed such a joy to talk with you about Chicago (or some topic on which you have had a special chat)."

Catalogue

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Which is correct, to call a catalogue a book or a pamphlet?

Lillie

Either is correct. A book is just which you find more convenient. It is half of the size of a pamphlet, and usually we find a spoon more convenient. If a slice of melon is served, any kind of melon, many people find the fork, or the knife and fork more convenient. In Europe the small knife and fork, the fruit knife and fork, are always placed at every place setting, and many times this is the service we find here.

Weddings

RUPERT—HUFFMAN

A quiet but pretty wedding took place in Bloomfield United Church, November 2nd, at the Cannilton Parsonage, when Greta Mildred, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. S. Huffman, Corbyville, became the bride of Mr. Harold Rupert, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rupert, Belleville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. R. Merrick in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride was lovely, gowned in a floor length Canterbury Chetney velvet and silver accessories and carried a bouquet of pink roses and bridesmaid, Miss Hilda Hoss, was becomingly attired in a floor length gown of metallic trimmings and blue shoes.

The groom was supported by Mr. Roy Huffman, brother of the bride.

A number of friends gathered in the village to witness the marriage of the popular couple and to shower them with confetti.

After congratulations and best wishes were extended, the happy couple left for a trip to Millington, Michigan and other points, the bride travelling in a smart blue tailored accessories. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Thurlow.

WELSH—ELLIOTT

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Elliott, Bloomfield, when her daughter, Miss Hazel Irene, daughter of Mrs. Elliott and the late Mr. Mrs. Elliott, became the bride of William Earl Welsh, Picton, son of the late Mr. Mrs. Edward Welsh of Moira. Mr. Ralph Hamilton, Picton, who officiated at the marriage of the bride's parents, performed the ceremony last night. The bride made a sketch of evergreen from which hung a wedding bell and pink and white streamers.

As wedding music was played by Miss Elsie Hamilton. The bride entered the room with her father who gave her in marriage. She was a lovely gown of Burgundy Lorraine velvet dress and matching hat with plumes and carried white chrysanthemums and fern.

Miss Mildred Elliott, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a pretty gown of cerise with gold-brown velvet trimmings, and silver turban. Her bouquet was of yellow chrysanthemums.

Mr. Tom Searles of West Huntingdon was groomsman. During the signing of the register, the bride's sister, Mrs. Arthur Emerson and cousin, Miss Myrtle Wannamaker sang very sweetly 'I Love You Truly' accompanied by the bride's cousin, Miss Letha Wannamaker.

A reception was held after the ceremony to which one hundred guests had been invited and were present from Picton, Belleville, Hamilton, Kingston, Belleville and Stirling. Interesting and sawgreen with gold and white flowers made a beautiful background for the gathering. Mrs. Welsh, mother of the groom, was attired in blue crepe and received the guests with the bride and groom. Later Mr. and Mrs. Welsh left on a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and other points, the bride travelling in a smart blue tailored accessories with matching turban. Upon their return they will reside at Moira.

Dominating Parent Menaces Child's Confidence, Mood

By LISA GRENELLE

It was almost true that the Widow Cartwright's children had succumbed to so little. They had good blood in their veins from both sides, being young ones, and every advantage, too, that money could buy except a marketable woman. Even her enemies had to admit that she was capable history and hard-working.

But Louise, the oldest daughter, had suffered for nothing man and lived off mother. And the boys were no better. One of them got into jail for the dope, disappeared—like the second girl, Evelyn. And the youngest boy, Bob, couldn't hold a stick to anything. He lived off his mother, too, most of the time, and the widow worked for the whole family. She always had. None of the children did anything or made a decision without consulting her.

It wasn't that Mrs. Cartwright demanded it. She wasn't one of those bossy, tyrannical women who must control everything. But she didn't know her mind, always had. She could make decisions, and make them appear entirely, in the hopes or freeing themselves, and of developing their individual, independent desires.

She is the almost irrefutable tragedy when a parent from whatever cause—drink, idleness, himself to

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

Shall She Take the Risk?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have had lunch in the same place for ever so long, and feel that I have earned the right to ask favors. Now I know he is going to invite me out, and I'd like to go with him. Would I be taking an awful risk if I just went to the movies with him? Or is that too much acquaintance too uncertain to trust?

Flossie.

As you've been having lunch in the same place for ever so long, and it seems harmless enough to accept an invitation to the movies, I don't see how anybody who is acquainted with this young man, who has been lunching in the same place, could object.

Until you know a little more about him; better not go out in long motor rides, or accept invitations that are risky.

"TOO OLD ENOUGH"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old, but so short that I do not look any more. A boy of 21 has asked me to go out with him. I have been invited several times before, but my mother and father wouldn't hear of it, and never give any real reason.

Finally I put the question to them, and they said I was too young; that I'd have plenty of time when I was old enough. Do you think height should have anything to do with the accepting an invitation from a boy?

Anxious Girl.

This is the first time I've ever heard of height being considered as a factor in dating. But if the young man is desirable, I cannot see any objection to your going out with him. As I've said so often in this column, it seems a pity that parents cannot seem to encourage their daughters to invite their young men friends to the house, so that they can look them over.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I wonder if you can help me solve my problem. I am a young widow and very lonely. I know of a very fine man who is a widower and would very much like to meet him. Would it be polite to write and ask him to call on me? I have been told that he would also like to meet me but it seems rather difficult to arrange. I never way of meeting unless I invite him to my home. If so, how should I word the invitation. Trusting that you can help me in this matter.

Lonely.

I am afraid your plan of asking him to call is going to be quite out of the question. You must be introduced by mutual friends who could ask the two of you to their home. Surely if the man is interested in you he could find some means of meeting you for it is not difficult for you to take the initiative in the matter.

To Puzzled who has written me a lengthy letter asking advice about the casual attitude of a friend, I agree that if he cared to "come back" he would show it in a more definite manner. Puzzled, you see, made the sad mistake of overrating his friendship with another girl, called and made many evenings unpleasant for her friend, who finally and naturally drifted over to the more agreeable girl. Lately he has been bringing "Puzzled" home from parties but never asks for a definite appointment. I advise "Puzzled" shows herself to be a gracious companion not asking when he intends to call but will be well return. But over eagerness on her part may spoil things at present.

Which is the better policy to swallow your pride or to eat out your heart or to cherish, to nurse your self-esteem? You know you're right, and that he or she, as the case may be, is in the wrong—and you'd rather die than give an inch.

Well, that's the way hundreds of people — hundreds of them — have written to me regretting in tears and heartbreaking words that they had ever let their pride get in the way.

From California comes the news of a husband who had an eleventh-hour vision, and with it the wisdom to ask forgiveness to that far seeing gentleman.

It seems that Virgil Winslow, who had been married to Sarah, his wife for a good many years, was on the witness stand in Los Angeles, having an attempt to obtain a divorce.

She was domineering . . . His every movement seemed to irk her, his every word to irritate her. Then in response to demands from army and navy officials.

The plebiscite reversed the vote in April, 1924, when the population approved the Republican form of government and decreed the change of the nation's name from the "Kingdom of Hellas" to "the Hellenic State."

Thursday a delegation will sail aboard a Greek warship to present the official request for King George to return.

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright, 1933,

Sometimes there is a desire to choose something extravagant, something different. For such a wish, there is a taupe of black velvet, forward-jutting and trimmed in back with a full ruff of ostrich feathers. There are matching gloves of black velvet with cog feather trim.

NO CHANCE of tickets or passes disappearing in the future with a large travelling handbag. A nice model, in natural pigskin, open and big inside, is shown instead of two. It has a side fastener with a full length pocket.

OUR OLD FRIEND, black-and-white, is more in demand than ever this Autumn. A coat from all black wool makes has white sorrache braid trimming applied on bodice and sleeves, and a deep cuff of white velveteen. The skirt has 3 inverted pleats.

VERY SURPRISING are the new furs dyed in all sorts of hues. Among the imports just arrived is a meager cost of purplish brown breed. The moleskin lining is dyed purple and green in alternate bands. This is worn over a slim skirt of purplish brown fabric.

CUT TO DINNER and feeling very nice wearing a new dinner dress that is a compromise between a tailored afternoon and tailored shirtwaist frock. The dress is of white satin crepe, the gray jacket of Ascot and girdle in violet-colored velvet.

The bodice and sleeves have tiny self-ruchings to soften the shirtwaist effect.

EVERYTHING GOES when it comes to color this Autumn. So we don't quite know what to color card. A coat frock, of light gray flannel, has three gray plaids made on slim lines, but with a skirt that flares widely towards the bottom. It is worn with a narrow band of gray krimmer fur.

VOTE FOR RECALL OF GREEK KING

Nationwide Poll Give Huge Majority For Monarchy Return

Athens, Nov. 4 (AP)—The Greek people voted overwhelmingly for the recall of former King George to the throne, it was announced officially today with nation-wide results from yesterday's plebiscite of 1,491,992 for the monarchy to 32,464 for maintenance of the Republic.

The foreign minister communicated the results to the former monarch, now in London, and announced a delegation was proceeding to London.

As the counting proceeded crowds of celebrants paraded columns in the streets and cafes of many cities and towns.

There waiting for a message from George in London where news of the results had been broadcast Premier Panayis Tsaldaris, George's Regent who took over the government on October 10, and Archbishop Damaskinos.

On London, the Greek Monarch declined to make any statement for a walk in the city and called at the home of Lord and Duchess of Kent. M. Petralias, Royalist leader, said: "It will only be a matter of days before the arrangements to return to the throne."

The final vote, the Greek population nullified the action of their king when he stepped down from the throne in favor of a republic. In response to demands from army and navy officials.

The plebiscite reversed the vote in April, 1924, when the population approved the Republican form of government and decreed the change of the nation's name from the "Kingdom of Hellas" to "the Hellenic State."

Thursday a delegation will sail aboard a Greek warship to present the official request for King George to return.

The service station will be a one-storey brick building modern in every respect.

On Hallowe'en, the children of Tweed had a most enjoyable evening in the village and arrayed as ghosts, goblins, witches and whatnot, congregated about the streets in merry chants and others to "shell out". The Tweed Intermediates will probably take in last year's teams.

TWO SACRIFICED BY TIME BOMBS

Milwaukee's Eight Day Reign of Terror at an End

Milwaukee, Nov. 4 (AP) — Two men, while innocent bystanders of a nine-year-old girl, were sacrificed in Milwaukee's eight-day reign of bomb terror, which the authorities declared was at an end today.

Police Lieutenant Henry Hugh Frank Rutkowski, 21, was blown to pieces while inserting a bomb with what the police said was a time fuse in a theatre.

The blast also killed Patricia Mlynarski and inflicted serious injuries on her mother and brother. Ten others were hurt less dangerously.

Chief of Police Laubenheimer declared the bombs were the actions of low type of individual with a warped, criminal mind," motivated by a desire for publicity.

Detectives searched the debris to determine whether Rutkowski had set 19, missing companion of Rutkowski, also was a theatre.

$75,000 Damage

Rutkowski's police record began June 21, 1921. It ended yesterday with a terrific explosion on the second floor of the Avalon theatre, seven miles away. Property damage was estimated at $75,000.

The first of the series of blasts which challenged a metropolitan police force and bank branches and two police stations, took place Oct. 26.

Bernard Helmlinger, who lives two doors from the fatal blast, in a statement to the police said that Thursday night when the police stations were bombed, a large crowd car pulled into the garage with three "young fellows" in it.

Helmlinger said the "positive" Rutkowski made the simple bombs and Mlynarski was while designing an improved device.

Doughty Queens' Team Beaten In Epic Struggle With Varsity But Still Have Playoff Chance

Score is 18-15 And at One Time Queens Was in Front

TIGERS WIN

Provide Upset by Taking Undefeated Argos by 21-6

By ELMER DULMAGE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The immediate future of University of Toronto's sensational blue-clad young men and the fate of Hamilton Tigers, rugged fighters who refuse to be footed out of the picture, holds the attention of the Canadian football world today. The questions are what the Varsity team will do and whether the Tigers will be heard from again.

By defeating a great Queen's team 18-15 before an almost hysterical crowd of 12,000 or more in Varsity Stadium, Toronto, Saturday, Warren Stevens' Toronto Collegians assured themselves of finishing atop the Intercollegiate standing. They will chart their own future.

Twice beaten by Toronto Argonauts and on the verge of being eliminated from the Interprovincial race, the Tigers made a smashing last ditch stand to trounce the previously unbeaten scullers 21-6. A delighted throng of 8,000 saw this reversal of form in Hamilton.

Should Queen's win next Saturday from McGill, the tricolor squad will qualify to play-off with Toronto for the College title. Should they lose, McGill would finish second, but would not have the right to play-off because they were twice beaten by the Blues. Queen's right would be based on a tie they played in Kingston with the Indians.

Varsity May Decline

This was the strange play-off system devised by the athletic boards of McGill, Queen's and Western, and which has not been approved by Toronto. It was said today the agreement was a loophole whereby which Toronto can evade a play-off merely by winning from Queen's.

The greatest football gathering since defrocation days watched the dramatic Toronto struggle with the three forward-pass touchdowns, the battle between the two wingbines and his brilliant feats of ball-carrying.

The blue moved up and down and up again as the tide changed. They moved up in the first half as Hamish Marks threw two forward passes, that brought two touchdowns. In the first was a 56-yard throw to Joe Connally, who scooted another 15 to cross the line. The second was a bullet shot down centre to Jack Wright, all by himself, for a 25-yard play. Bob Webber went over two plays later.

They were particularly startling assaults because they struck at the weakest spots in the line after they were throwing back Varsity from the front trenches just to the rear. Harry Sonshine, Abe Zvoskin, Ed Barnabe and the others had been going to town with reckless-ness on the ground and Johnny Munro was gaining steadily with his punts.

Both touchdowns were converted and Queen's trailed 12-3 before there was a considerable counter-drive. Lloyd Percy played field kicks and scored two points instead of six, which was a significant fact to the fans and players.

Queens Out In Front

The counter-drive netted two Queen's touchdowns and a single, sending the tricolor out in front early in the third stanza. Charlie Peck threw a pass to Munro for the first, Johnny making a one-handed catch as he steamed over the last ten yards of the route.

Munro and fleet Johnny Edwards used a reverse play in running back a punt for the second. Munro took the pass and galloped 40 yards down the field, where they bottled him up, he passed to Archie Kirkland, who advanced another 10 to the three-yard line. Curly Krug knifed through on the first play.

Then Cam Gray coolly defeated the tricolor with expert kicking, helped by Queen's errors and a succession of penalties. He kicked a field goal from placed kick in the third period to the score and a single to send Varsity ahead. In the fourth he added two more singles and the warriors from Kingston had no reply.

They may re-enact the spectacle, these old rivals, but the impression Toronto's campus today was that the blues might better be given a chance to meet the Canadian title McGill, however, can straighten the College tangle by winning from Queen's and finishing in second place. The Redmen have twice been beaten by Varsity. Honors are ineligible to take part in a playoff.

Welsh and Ferrare Star

Huck Welch and Johnny Ferraro, riding behind a wingline that stopped the charging Argos cold, made the spotlight. Hamilton, which scored 30 of his team's 21 points with two touchdowns, two field goals and as singles. One touchdown was on a forward pass from Ferraro, the other on a lateral from Will Patterson.

The first defeat of the year for Argos after six straight wins was costly. It meant the Scullers must win their last two scheduled games both against Ottawa Roughriders.

The Tigers, a single game behind, play two games with Montreal wheelers.

While Winnipeg and Calgary Brooks qualified for the Western Senior Final, three other eastern tussles had little bearing on Canadian title hearings. Sarnia Imperials easily defeated Hamilton Cubs 49-0 in a warm-up for the O.R.F.U. play-offs with Toronto Balmy Beach.

Ottawa upset Montreal for the Wheelers' seventh straight defeat, 18-3 and, in the Intercollegiate circuit, Bill Storen's Western Mustangs finally producing a wild forward, defeated Queen's 6-1. The defeat was disastrous for the Redmen.

Winnipeg's mighty power Regina Roughriders was 13-4, while Calgary downed Vancouver Meralomas, British Columbia champions, 14-0.

FIGHTING IRISH BACK IN POWER

Notre Dame May Receive Invitation For Rose Bowl Game

South Bend, Nov. 4.—(AP)—For the first time in five years the fighting "Irish" of Notre Dame are back in football power, so much so they can look forward today with some confidence to the prospect of an unbeaten season and a possible bid to the Rose Bowl game.

No major upset happens during the rest of the season, however, Notre Dame's followers will undoubtedly not have the right to play-off because they were twice beaten by the Blues. Queen's right would be based on a tie they played in Kingston with the Indians.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

Dusk was falling when she walked down the dingy street to her boarding house, the boarding house she would leave after one more day, one more night, and she halted, surprised at a familiar car parked at the curve. A familiar profile turned inquiringly toward her as she approached rapidly.

Ted! Ted Hoyt, here at that impossible place! Ted.... waiting for her!

"Judy," he said, leaping out of the roadster in one agile bound. "Judy, what on earth are you doing, living in such a.... dive?"

Judy stared at him blankly, unaware that he held her numb fingers tightly in both palmed hands.

Chapter 26

MICHAEL'S RETURN

"Tommy Jennefer told me," Ted hurried on, his voice husky, blurred with compassion. "The office gang were talking of doing something to help. You've got to let me help, let us help you out of this, Judy. It ... it isn't safe. It isn't even sanitary!"

Judy gently disengaged her fingers from his firm grip. And suddenly conscious that they stood in a city street, lined with houses, curious onlookers. Ted opened the car door and helped Judy in.

"I've got to talk to you, Judy," he began. "For weeks, months now, you've been harassed, worried frantic over things. I ... We could all see it."

"You mustn't worry over my troubles, Ted," Judy objected faintly. "Things will work out right. That is, they will if nothing more happens. I ... to wreck things. Everybody has to have some adversity. It ... it must be," and she flashed him a quiet smile, and his face sobered, until in a blinding flash of revelation the truth discovered the truth. He loved her. Well, Ted loved her. He had, undoubtedly for ages!

"I'm going back to my old rooms tomorrow, Ted," she hurried on, panic-stricken over her amazing discovery. "I can manage that much nicely."

"Going back ... to Mrs. Parker's!" he said slowly. "Alone, Judy?"

"Only until Michael leaves the hospital," she countered firmly.

"Why do you ask that, Ted? What makes you think I'd be going back ... alone?"

"Nothing," he denied gruffly. "Only ... well, there's Mrs. Mallory, Judy. And things get around, you know. Allison Maher is living on luxurious alimony, and she has a reputation for getting what she goes after."

"She seems to have overlooked the fact that Michael is married," Judy defended her husband in slow, halting words, born from a fresh, green wound in her heart. "He married me!"

"Yes," Ted agreed heavily, "but money lends glamor to things. And Michael ... seems to be drawn to that sort of glamor."

The very truth of his words, congealed in a wall of ice, around Judy's heart, and she could think of nothing to say for a moment ... nothing that could banish the aching fear that had him dormant, watchfully waiting such a moment, for many weeks. Doctrine him that Michael did truly love her, in spite of all the things he seemed to be pulling up, like hungry, angry seas, to batter down their happiness, undermine their love.

"What the company wants to do, Judy," he continued gravely, earnestly, "is advance you to a position where you are financially independent. The present arrangement is the limit of your progress. But we're opening a new department in the Maryland branch, and we'd like you to take charge of it. At a very satisfactory increase in salary. And an office of your own."

"Ted--" Judy was foolishly certain she was going to cry from sheer gratitude, and her throat felt thick and tight, and her eyes smarted. She was grateful for the deepening curtain of dusk concealing her agitation from him. It ... it was the most wonderful thing that had been offered, the most wonderful because I can't take it. This ... this is Michael's home. He'd never forgive me.

Ted was silent a long moment thinking. He could never tell her, now, that he had meant her to go alone to the new office, build up over again, and build toward something secure, something dignified with pride and honor, and certain, pure success. The sort of security she had known before her marriage.

"Well" he temporized bluntly, the job is open any time you want it, Judy. Just let us know. You could fill the bill. Make it a good one. We hoped it would make you happy."

The thought has made me happy. Two-fold spirit, were it in my powerless to accept it. I can never thank you enough."

Judy got out of the car, and went quickly up the shabby steps, and the door, the dingy door, opened with fresh impetus, and Judy snapped back to reality. She was unable to endure the sharp contrast. Tomorrow--tomorrow she'd be out of this. Tomorrow she'd be back at Mrs. Parker's, in surroundings she could bear. Could even fashion into a semblance of home, in time.

At noon, the next day, when she called Dr. Herrick, during her lunch hour, a new milestone reared its head, and Judy went back to work, forgetting completely to eat anything luncheon, under the unexpected surprise.

"If everything continues to go as well as it has," he told Judy cheerfully, "we're going to let your husband go home Friday, Mrs. Swayne! And as Judy was silent in sheer confusion: "We know how difficult this separation has been for you, and he'll be just as well off at home if you have someone stay with him a week or so to see he doesn't try to move about."

Michael ... coming home. That meant he'd have to know. It meant he'd learn about everything.

The minutes crept around the clock dial, and Judy had never known time to fly so swiftly as when if everything were reversed, now. Before, when she had been in an agony of mind over Michael's illness, time had crept by on heedless, endless moments that seemed hours. And now--now that she was simply terrified over his certain reaction to her efforts to stem the rushing torrent of debts, the fatal hour raced toward her as of gleefully bent on her destruction.

Perhaps he'll get used to it," she tried to bolster up her waver-ing courage. "Perhaps after he's had time to think things through he'll understand it's for the best. After all, he simply can't worry about debts and installments now, when it's so important for him to get well without any worries."

She found out from Dr. Herrick the things he could have to eat, and reckless considered her own check on everything she dared buy, to make him happy. Flowers, a carton of cigarettes, a floor-length chair she rented for a month. A table Mrs. Parker lent her, for him to use--for cards, remembering it had been his paramount need before. And a taxi to take him home in.

Ted Hoyt's offer to drive Michael home, and save his taxi fare, had to be declined.

"He'd never understand", she explained wistfully, "and I'm sure I suppose, than I'd like it if Allison Maher brought him home in her limousine!"

"Right!" Ted agreed, but Judy had a fleeting impression he did not at all think it right. That he secretly thought it quite childish, only he was too courteous, too considerate, to say so. "Glad to do anything I can, Judy. Just let me know."

From the first, things got off to a bad start. The taxi-man was late, and Michael fumed with impatience. He noticed she was not wearing the fur coat, and asked her if she had forgotten it was something of a celebration to be coming home from the hospital-factory, after shaking hands with the long-faced accident with the scythe.

"Or maybe this isn't a celebration, Judy?" Michael countered.

"I was so excited I forgot, Michael," she explained desperately. There's been so much happening. I couldn't think."

"Anything bothering you, Judy?" he asked quickly, aware of her tense, drawn anxiety. "If any of those things have been bothering you for money, I'll make 'em regret it!" He seemed to have forgotten he had no money, no income, with which to combat a commercial world.

"No," she tried to reassure him. "not much, Michael, but I'm glad that I'm ... I'm so glad I could cry, now you're coming home with me!"

She was glad. So happy it seemed incredible that the stark, grim ghost of fear could exist there, in the shadows, reaching a bony finger toward her happiness.

"That man must be drunk or crazy," Michael growled, as he looked out and noticed they were not going uptown toward Mill's old rooms. "Or is it a new way to run that, meter up to five dollars, cruising every side street on the map?"

He reached for the speaking-tube, and Judy shivered.

"He's all right, Michael," she said through stiff, cold lips. "I told him where to go." Michael said no more, because Miss Calkins rode in front with the driver, to help Judy get him settled.

Judy dared not look at Michael's face when they stopped before her old rooms. She dared not speak to the nurse got out, and with the driver began helping Michael up the stairs, in the little apartment that had been her home so long before.

They were alone, finally, and the taxi had rattled off, taking Miss Calkins in all her warm, professional cheerfulness back to Mercy Hospital. Judy could pretend no longer. She could not even pretend sheepishly to herself, that Dr. Herrick had advised so well that Dr. Herrick had said he could have a very little of.

"All right, Judy ... let's have it. What's wrong?" Michael's voice was hard, metallic with something a thousand times worse than anger. With outraged trust. Judy could not speak. And Judy wanted to scream in wild terror, to throw herself into his arms, and implore him to help her, and forgive her everything.

"You didn't waste much time in getting your own way, did you?" Michael went on ruthlessly, savagely. "You couldn't wait to see me shut up in that hell-hole, before you began stripping my home ... the only home I ever had, Judy, of everything I loved. Did you get a good rebate on them, Judy?" His eyes flicked her like lead, and Judy went back to work, leaded whiplashes, as he flung each thing! That's why you didn't wear the coat--you took it back! And the ring, too, I suppose! Why didn't you see what sort of a refund you could get on the wedding ring, too, and the bridges?"

Judy could not speak. She was stricken helpless and mute, like a helpless bird impinged before a ruthless tormentor, and Michael's mouth twisted to a thin, bitter line of contempt, as he flung back his head, and measured her coldly, furiously, with blazing eyes.

"The joke's on me, Judy! A good joke! I was so crazy to get out of that beastly hospital. Crazy to get home again! Home! Home to this ... dump!"

Michael's Course of Action

Chapter 26

"Michael," Judy implored him desperately, "you'll make yourself ill! Please let all this wait until later on. Until you're better." Judy ran out of words, before the blazing look of outraged contempt there in his face.

"Ill!" he laughter bitterly. "What could make me any more ill than to find out my wife has dismantled my home, stripped it of everything that made life worth living for me! You wouldn't understand that, Judy. Oh, no! The only thing you can understand is money. Money hoarded, jealously scrimped together, and hidden away in a bank somewhere! You never knew the real meaning of money, Judy. You were always too afraid to spend it! Instead of treating money your servant, you made yourself the slave of money. It was your only god. You put it above me, above your own happiness! That dollar sign is a flaming word, Judy, and it rules your life!"

"Please, Michael," Judy whispered, horrified at the tirade he flung at her, terrified lest he work himself into such a rage he'd be ill again. "Please let this go now. You can say it all. And more, too. But wait until you're strong enough! You'll only make yourself worse now!"

"And that," Michael bit off viciously, "might cost you some more money, Judy, mightn't it?" He turned away, determined to keep from antagonizing him into further tempers.

"Well, don't worry," he flung at her viciously, "I won't cost you much more, Judy! I'll get out and leave you to your noble purpose of hoarding every dime until it's a ten dollar bill!"

"Your ... your dinner, Michael," Judy said thickly, huskily, hoping it would detract his mind from the wildly exaggerated injuries. "Dr. Herrick said you could have a glass of all the things you love."

"I'm not hungry!" he said coldly, grimly.

Judy stared at him worriedly. If he didn't eat, he couldn't very well gain back his health.

"Very well," she said surprisingly. "I'll go downstairs and call Miss Calkins back. You need a nurse, if you can't eat, Michael."

He glared at her.

"This is your apartment, Judith," he said icily, "and you can do as you please! But I'm not hungry! I should think that would please your economical soul!"

"Michael," she gasped sharply, "you're ill, now. Not yourself. But you might try to remember I've feelings, too!"

He said nothing. Lapsed into a wooden silence, and after a while, Judy put the food away, her own appetite ruined by his temperamental outburst. Perhaps in the morning, he'd be more reasonable. Perhaps he was just tired from the trip home. It was because he was ill. His nerves were jittery and raw from so much suffering.

She had had two hours off from the office, to bring Michael home, get his dinner, and fix him up. The two hours, excepting the half hour spent in going to the hospital to get him, had been spent in wasted, useless silence. A silence heavy, enervating, in its dragged, accusing gloom.

As she came near the stranger, with outstretched arms, Zora smiled. "Who are you?" asked Zora, "and what are you doing here alone in the jungle?" Le shook her head and replied in a language that Zora did not understand.

Zora Drinov was an accomplished linguist but she was not familiar with the language of the strange stranger, whose beautiful face and figure but added to the mystery of her presence. Zora was presented to pique the curiosity of the Russian girl.

"The Arabs addressed her in their tongue and Wamala in the dialect of his tribe, but all to no avail. Then Zora put an arm about her and led her toward her tent; and there, by means of signs, Le of Opar indicated that she would bathe.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Forbidden Heaven"

Charlotte Henry and Charles Farrell Co-star in Love Picture of The Year

Do you remember the little "Alice in Wonderland" girl who so delighted the nation a few years ago after winning a national contest to play the part? Well, Charlotte Henry is now teamed with Charles Farrell in the love picture of the year "Forbidden Heaven". Charlie says it is the best picture he has ever worked in....which should make it soo high. This should be a winning team for Charlotte is a love of a girl and Charles is a chief opponent of tender love making.....which gets all the girls in a dither.

Laughter mingles with tears throughout the unfolding of this beautiful love story at the Capitol Theatre. "Forbidden Heaven" is a simple tale yet one which will hold the members of its audience enchralled. It is a story of self sacrifice and devotion. In its main plot, it tells of a penniless young cafe dancer who is willing to step aside so that the man she loves may pursue his chosen career, and make a success of his life without any hindrance.

Charles Farrell has the leading role and Miss Henry's portrayal establishes her as a permanent star in screen firmament. The gripping counter plot is provided by those two old lovable people Berry Mercer and Fred Walton who also provide the major part of the comedy. The fine array of shorts and comedies complete a splendid programme for the audience of the Capitol Theatre, and of course the ladies are not forgetting that Monday and Tuesday nights are dinnerware nights.

AT THE BELLE

"O'Shaughnessy's Boy" Is Top Entertainment with Berry, Cooper Outstanding

At last, a circus picture that is all circus. It is "O'Shaughnessy's Boy" which opened to three capacity audiences at the Belle on Saturday.

For the first time, the spirit of the circus with all its thrills excitement and color has been brought to the screen. It is superb entertainment for every age.

Comedy, pathos, spectacle and a dramatically powerful story are deftly blended into a picture that wins new honors for its co-stars... Wallace Berry and Jackie Cooper.

Sergeant "The Champ"

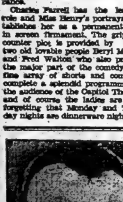
The picture is a fitting successor to "The Champ" and "Treasure Island", which so firmly established Berry and Cooper as one of the screen's greatest partnerships. Not only is it a fitting successor, but it surpasses both in the eloquence of its human heart interest story and the brilliance of its circus setting.

Richard Dolewith, who scored so heavily with "Clive of India" and more recently with "Les Miserables" directed the picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.



His subtle touch and power of direction is evidenced throughout the picture, which gives Berry every opportunity to reach new dramatic heights as "Windy", a swaggering, easy-going animal trainer. Jackie, too, has one of his finest roles as "Stubby", Berry's son in the picture, and both give performances that will long stand as standards of excellence.

The animal scenes are the most spectacular ever seen on the screen, particularly those of Berry wrestling with a huge Bengal tiger. It is a thriller, as are the sequences showing Berry breaking in a dangerous tiger-elephant act, which has never before been accomplished, on or off the screen.

Colorful Background

In no picture has the circus been filmed so completely. Circus men have put their stamp of approval on the picture as it is depicted under the Big Top and behind the scenes. It is complete from elephants to peanuts.

While the picture is Berry and Cooper from start to finish, a splendid cast supports the co-stars. A new face is presented in Leona Maricle, who was brought from the Broadway stage to make her debut as Berry's wife, Dora. She turns in an excellent performance. So did Sidney MacFarland, who plays "Stubby" as a child; Sarah Haden as Martha, Dora's spiteful sister; Henry Stephenson, as Valkenburg; Willard Robertson as the circus boss and others. A fusing of hilarity comedy and newsreel precede the feature. The entire programme will be repeated tonight, and Tuesday Matinee and evening.

Injury-Riddled Sarnians Farther Weakened When Malloy Break Leg

ALEX HAYA

Wrecked by an injury scourge which started with their earliest training practices and pursued them through an exhibition tour and the regular season, Sarnia Imperials, defending Canadian football champions, saw the chances of retaining the title lessened again when "Boob" Malloy broke his leg. Malloy, regular snap-back and one of the greatest defensive players in the game, slipped on a cafeteria floor, breaking the leg bone between knee and ankle and putting him out of the game for this year. At one time or another most of the outstanding Imperial players, including Norman Perry, have been on the sidelines with injuries. Alex Haiye, veteran quarterback, is another who has suffered heavily. He is still out of the lineup. Facing Hamilton Cubs, Sarnia could field only 18 of their 36 players.

"BOOB" MALLOY

PHEASANT HUNTER KILLED BY SHOT

W. M. Woods, Accidentally Shot And Dies in Hospital

Napanee, Nov. 4 — The two-day open season for the pheasant shooting claimed one life in the Lennox-Prince Edward district when William M. Woods, South Fredericksburg township farmer, died early Sunday morning in Kingston General Hospital as a result of shock.

Woods was accompanying John Hayes, Napanee Hydro lineman, on Saturday afternoon in search of a game cock pheasant that had just flown from Woods' farmyard to a nearby marsh. Hayes passed the bird in its hiding, but Woods, following about twelve feet behind, also got a shot at it as it rose to the skies by. Hayes turned quickly and his gun accidentally discharged just as he was about to shoulder it. The shot grazed Woods' hips.

He walked to his house nearby and Dr. D.R. Hall was called to dress the wound. The injured man requested that he be taken to a hospital. His death a few hours after admission was attributed to a weak heart. Hayes a hunter of 40 years, is unable to account for the premature firing of the rifle. Coroner Dr. Hall has decided an inquest unnecessary.

Woods was 57 years old and came to Canada from England 20 years ago. His wife and two sons at home survive. He was a member of Orion Lodge, No. 9, A.F. and A.M., Napanee, and will be buried under Masonic auspices Tuesday.

By The Canadian Press

Motor accidents continued over the week-end to exact their quota of human lives in Ontario, three deaths Sunday bringing to 12 the outbreak of fatalities, which began last Thursday.

Says Sanctions Are Iniquitous And For The Bankers

Detroit, Nov. 4 (CP)—Father Charles Coughlin foresees the United States being drawn into war "by agreeing either directly or indirectly to the iniquitous sanctions devised by the League of Nations" in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

Opening his winter broadcasting series yesterday, the Detroit priest said he had "real reason" to suspect that Washington "secretly, though unofficially, has condoned the sanctions of Great Britain.

The formal entrance of the United States into the next war might be postponed to 1937 but he warned "We are preparing once more to become the catspaws for saving the International bankers of the British Empire."

Father Coughlin reiterated that his National Union for Social Justice has no desire to establish a third political party. However, the records of Senators and representatives were being compiled and he promised to campaign against "rubber stamp" Congressmen "who have lost sight of their duty as representatives of the American people."

At another point he declared it is the business of Congress and not of the President to keep the country

Five Dollar Insurance Policy Proves Fortunate Investment

Prize Car Won at Recent Kiwanis Carnival Wrecked on Way Home

LUCK HOLDS

Mr. Oscar Person, obscure farmer of the sparse regions of Percy Glen, Northumberland, sits and ponders over the vagaries of Lady Luck which presented him with a new automobile as the result of a lucky ticket held during the recent Kiwanis Karnival in this city, smashed it up in transit from Belleville to his western home, and then presented him with a payment in full for all damage done, all as the result of a one week's insurance policy carried on the machine before it left here.

Mr. Person, a five dollar one, covers the entire loss of the wrecked prize car.

Unable to journey to Belleville himself to claim the new prize when he had been advised of his winning, Mr. Person was delighted to have way friend who arrived in Belleville, presented the winning ticket stub and his identification. The new car was handed over by Mr. George Lee, recent chairman of the Karnival.

"That's a long way out to Patsy Glen. Don't you think you had better insure the car before you leave?" questioned Mr. Lee.

The policy was secured from Mr. Howard Frost later on and the trip began. Out in Mihimucka an accident occurred, the cause of which has not been determined as yet. The car was completely wrecked while the driver, fortunately, escaped serious injury.

WE MIGHT HAVE HAD 'EM!

Residents in Eastern Canada—and even those in Alberta—can appreciate the feelings of the people of Helena, Montana, where, after a series of 500 earthquakes, the town is about ready to fall apart completely. Much of the damage has already been destroyed by the shakes, which took place in 1935 alone.

Most of the townspeople have moved away to safer quarters. Above is shown TOP, a home destroyed. BELOW, Helena high school in ruins.

Gold in Thurlow Township Believed Indicated by Drill

Farms Along Fourth Concession, Four Miles North of Belleville Scene of Mining Explorations—Drilling on Arthur Vermilyea's Farm Reveals, it is States, Visible Gold—No Surface Indications Owing to Overburden And Limestone—Reactions by Machine

For many years the centre townships of Hastings County have been the scene of numerous attempts by various parties to mine gold to a greater or lesser degree. As a rule the operations have been small and not consistent enough to call for the equipment of a large plant, and even quarters of a mile square in the search for the continuous milling plant on any one property and provide for the continuous operation of the same. South Hastings has never figured in the mining picture all for most of the surface indications of gold have been of mineral showings. However, it has remained for a Toronto physician, Dr. E. M. Carefoot, to make the initial discovery of gold-bearing ore in South Hastings and a very short distance from Belleville.

Rumors have been going around lately that oil had been discovered in the Thurlow farms near Rosa's Corners so that several large mining companies were prospecting for gold in the same territory and over towards Latta as well. However, the true fact of the matter is a much more romantic one. A little bird of almost having accomplished the impossible. To find true perspective it is necessary to go back a ways so that the story may follow through in logical order.

Electrical Machine Used

Dr. Carefoot for the greater part of his professional life practised medicine in Regina later on establishing a cancer clinic which is operated with considerable success. While on a trip to Germany a few years ago, he obtained an electrical machine which he used in his work of cancer treatment. One of the doctor's hobbies was the study of geology and metallurgy and it occurred to him one time that the theory of the operation of the electrical machine should prove useful to him in locating ore bodies some distance under ground.

Reacts to Test

To prove out this theory he journeyed to different mining districts and put it to the test. It proceeded in a surprising way, in fact so well that he was able to define ore bodies that no one ever suspected and also to outline their occurrence and tell with some degree of accuracy the depth below the surface and what was the chief constituent of the mineral bearing rock. These experiments were conducted over a period of years and it was within the past year the physician-geologist had sufficient faith in his work to proceed with the work he had in mind.

'Divine' Works on Highway

In 1934 he retired from active practice and moved to Toronto where he now resides. Last summer he was motoring north from Belleville along the Foxboro Highway. He had his electrical "diviner" along with him. In the vicinity of the concession of Thurlow, he noted that the machine indicated

"So, there is no chance of my changing my mind," the Premier said. "I have decided in early August to my party or the people of this province and certainly not to myself. There is no need for anyone to be alarmed but I simply must heed these warnings and advice I have been receiving."

RAIN WELCOME IN RURAL PARTS

Will Assist Ploughing And Will Help to Fill Wells

and Ease Feeding Certificate must attend a provisional course.

Rain fell throughout the night and in an intermittent drizzle over the city and countryside today, filling wells and cisterns which had been dry for weeks and saturating dried ground that had been almost impossible to plow in some sections.

The one half inch of rain that had been received up to noon today was looked upon was an unmitigated blessing by agriculturists and city gardeners alike.

For weeks many rural residents have been forced to carry water for stock and household purposes, but the steady saturating today was in storing water levels in dry wells.

Fall plowing will not suffer from the rainfall, it was unhesitatingly declared today by agricultural officials.

HIGHER STANDARD IN SIGNAL CORPS

Very Attractive Program Arranged For Section of Argylls

More rigid requirements and a consistent standard for the maintenance and program of the Signalling Section of the Argyll and Sutherland of this city has been effected, following new regulations which have been drawn up governing that unit.

Henceforth higher standards for members are necessary, and at the same time a much more attractive program for every member has been arranged.

The new program includes one night a week at the Belleville Public bowling, through the non-training period, from Nov. 1st. to March 31st. under canvas for the signal corps only, in North Hastings at the close of the training season in 1936. There will be some time in June or July.

The program is an enlargement of the regular regimental program of sports, and the regimental camp.

The "signals camp" will be confined to practical signals work in the field, but at the same time sufficient leisure will be given to make the camp a real holiday.

The new standard for members has resulted in a limited number of vacancies. The new standard will call for men between the ages of 18 and 25. They must have had at least one year of high school education. They must be physically fit and have normal eyesight and hearing. Those who are not already members of the militia and have the certificate must attend a provisional course.

The provisional school is to be held during the winter months on two nights a week under the tutorship of a Royal Canadian Corps of Signals instructor. Those successful in getting certificates also receive an additional cash bonus.

In addition a new classification of members pays an additional bonus.

On Thursday evening, Lieut. H. R. Frink will be at the Armouries for the purpose of joining the new corps and members who wish to make application. This will be conducted between the hours of seven-thirty and nine-thirty o'clock. All work at present members of the corps and those who hold the necessary certificate, should also be present.

Rotary Campaign for Crippled Children Opened By Hon. Dr. Faulkner

Commends The Benevolent Work on Behalf of The Crippled Children

BELLEVILLE IN LEAD

Sum of $80,000 Was Spent by Service Clubs Last Year

Belleville Rotary Club extended a whole-hearted and enthusiastic welcome to a distinguished Honorary Member of the Club Monday in the person of Hon. Dr. J. A. (Bert) Faulkner, who opened the Rotary campaign in behalf of crippled children with a stirring address which generated much additional enthusiasm among the members for the cause and was a happy augury of success for the campaign just beginning.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner was introduced by J. A. McFee, who said that he presented Bert Faulkner, an Honorary member of the Club, and an introduction was entirely unnecessary. The speaker of the day was a native son of Hastings whose abilities had been recognized and requisitioned for a wider sphere of usefulness, in the endeavor to create better health conditions for all the citizens of the province, young and old. As Minister of Health Hon. Dr. Faulkner had a message for Canadians, particularly apt at this time.

A musical welcome led by Sandy Burrows and Leo Biggs and the entire assembly completed the good fellowship of the club to the genial Member for Hasting West in the Legislature.

Minister a Member

Expressing his pleasure at being able to meet with so many of his old friends and fellow members of the Belleville Rotary Club, Dr. Faulkner voiced his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him in honorary membership in the club, and his appreciation of the splendid work which the Belleville Rotary Club had done, especially in regard to the care and cure of crippled children. Attending over the Provincial Department of Health, the speaker said he had exceptional opportunities of learning the extent and benefit of the work undertaken by the Rotary Clubs for crippled children. In fact the Belleville Rotary Club has blazed a path of leadership in this work which was the admiration of all service clubs in the province. Crippled children in Belleville and district have cause to remember with gladness of heart the Belleville Rotary Club members who under the leadership of Charles J. Symons, chairman of the Crippled Children's Committee have made such splendid record in the treatment, care and cure of crippled children.

The entire membership meeting as a unit had made this record possible. Much work had been done but there was still much to do in the field of effort was growing ever greater, overflowing as the city of Belleville into the counties and the municipal districts beyond. He felt the Belleville Rotary Club giving new impetus to the work throughout the province.

First Shot Fired

Glad of the privilege of firing the first shot in this campaign for crippled children Dr. Faulkner said that it would be his pleasure and privilege to assist in every possible way.

Rotary had been subject to criticism, like all other organizations, but the motives of those active in the work were questioned. Rotary had not but he had found that the spirit of "Service Above Self, and He Profits Most Who Serves Best" was daily and truly an active living force in the hearts and hearts of Rotarians, and the personal equation is quite lost sight of. Rotary and all it stands for will endure as long as human charity endures and the grand old flag flies. Rotary we are a part of the order, continues to wave.

Ontario's public hospitals were monuments of mercy to the Christ-like character of the people of this province, said Dr. Faulkner, primarily as coming under the jurisdiction of his department.

"Take Up Your Bed And Walk"

"Take up your bed and walk," said the Master to the man afflicted with the palsy, who had to be let down with ropes from the roof, and great was the crowd about the Great Healer, as described in the Gospel of Luke 2, 3—and the same work was being carried on by Rotarians and no more worthy cause or men had been said of a surety

Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Provincial Minister of Health who addressed Belleville Rotarians on opening campaign for Crippled Children.

"take up thy bed and walk" and gladness was brought into their lives because they were able to laugh and sing and run and play like other children, and not condemned to a lifetime of sadness and uselessness by physical handicaps.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner described the splendid work of the crippled children in the province leading to the organization of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, on which the Belleville Rotary Club is represented by Chas. J. Symons. The Belleville Rotary Club has always been among the best in the work and has a record of good works which not even the large city clubs can surpass.

Great And Growing Work

Last year the sum of $40,000 was spent on crippled children work in Ontario by service clubs, and the provincial government has spent $100,000 since 1919 in the same work.

Belleville has always been noted for its good works, its solid character—it is a healthy growing community not a mushroom growth and could be depended upon to aid the crippled children were it the limit. The same can be said for the entire district.

Dr. J. A. Faulkner said he was glad to join with the members of Belleville Rotary Club in this work did work, and hoped that the work would get such an impetus here that the splendid spirit of Belleville would cover the province with helpful results.

A Humble Citizen

There are many things distasteful in this life, said the Minister of Health, things beyond the control of the individual member of parliament, but he was glad to say he want to live the life of a politician, but would be proud to serve in the ranks in all worthy movements such as this as an humble citizen. He was for the Rotary campaign in behalf of crippled children all the money it deserved.

Rotary appreciation for the inspiring and helpful address of Hon. Dr. Faulkner was ably expressed by Rotarian Harry Fill, a member who has the distinction of having never missed a Rotary meeting in over ten years.

GIRLS' ADVENTURE RELATED POLICE

For Human Needs Give All You Can

The world looks very black indeed
To those who stand in human need;
When bare walls echo back the cry
Of hungry children standing by.

Life is a tragedy to those Whose daily fight permits no close;
Appreciation of the fine
Enriching values that entwine.

The lives of those who greet the sun
With knowledge of work to be done,
And human feeling ascends a new height
When united giving clears poverty's blight.

Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner C. A. Cameron M. P.-Elect Heard at Liberal Meeting

Ormonde Butler Accepts Presidency of City Organization

ELECTIONS HELD

Strength of Liberal Party in The County is Extolled

At one of the most enthusiastic meetings on record which brought together also the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health for Ontario and Mr. Chas. Cameron, M. P. for South Hastings as principal speakers of the evening, annual election of officers for the men's and women's organizations of the Belleville Liberal Club was completed in the local club rooms last evening.

Following the retirement of past president Edward McQuaid, through his resignation from office, Mr. Ormonde Butler, former secretary of the men's club was the choice for president, during the coming year. He will be assisted by Mr. Thomas Mason, 1st vice president; Samuel Kirsch, 2nd vice president; Clayton Prentice, secretary; Fred Powell, treasurer; E. Bone, assistant secretary and auditors D. McDonald and Fred Temple.

Miss Anne Hurley, by popular vote, was elected to the office of President, for the women's organization and will be assisted by Mrs. Lena Bone, 1st vice president; Mrs. Mary Sharpe, 2nd vice president; Miss Jessie Carscallen secretary and Mrs. A. E. Powell treasurer.

Nominations for the president of the men's organization named Ormonde Butler, Alex Fleming, Thomas Mason, Sam Kirsch and P. C. MacLaurin, both of the latter withdrew. For the vice president Mr. Alex. Fred Temple and Jack Fitzgerald, both of whom withdrew. For 2nd vice president, Sam Kirsch. For secretary, F. Temple, Clayton Prentice, Harry Sharpe, J. Fitzgerald and Miss Matthews. For treasurer Frank Powell, Fred Temple, Harry Sharpe, Bernard Sagher and Maurice Cahill, both of whom withdrew. For assistant secretary, Pat Rush, who withdrew and Daniel McDonald and E. Bone. For auditors, Dan McDonald and Fred Temple.

Liberals Never Show Solid

In opening the meeting, chairman Edward McQuaid in a brief address referred to the contrast between the attendance he faced and the slim meetings ordinarily attended but a year or so ago. Liberals, he declared were never more solid, and was unity and strength being shown to a greater degree than that witnessed in Hastings County at the present time. He introduced as chairman Dr. Faulkner as "the man who had done the impossible; who had turned the old historic riding of Tory West Hastings into a Liberal stronghold; and had won a seat in the Legislature against great odds."

Dr. Faulkner, in receiving the acclaim of his enthusiastic supporters, pointed out that everywhere he is being made possible through close co-operation of all members of the Belleville Club. He was seizing the opportunity, he declared, to make some sounding of the trust, that had been reposed in him through his election to the provincial government.

"Before you chose me to represent you I made it distinct at the time, that everything that would be done must come through the executive of the organization. The voice of the people had the first rights, and the rights of the people were put to the front. Local issues have I agreed with the decisions of the executive, but the majority have always ruled. I have attempted to carry out that promise I made them."

Liberalism, declared the honored speaker, did not stand for politics. If any party depended upon politics for their existence, then its life would be short lived. Campaigns should submit to the will of the electors then when the elections are over, there should be peace and happiness and the desire to forget and dig in and help.

Interest Always Relentless

"My interest has been and always will be Belleville. But when the Hon. Mr. Hepburn asked me to assume that important post of Minister of Health, I took on the responsibility. If I am not at the beck and call of you all, you know I am serving all the people of the Province of Ontario and not one party. If you want me to represent one section or one creed, then I ask you to get another man to represent you. Be patient I hope always to be of some service to even the humblest individual. Be charitable to all," urged Dr. Faulkner.

Hastings County has not been overlooked so far by the Legislature, he was declared by the speaker, but even though considerable work had been provided for local men some difficulties still existed, he was told.

"You elected me by a strong majority; you proved then, that you were condemning the previous government, which was overloaded with superannuations and expenses. We took hold and attempted to reduce these. We have cut staffs in the head offices as well as curtailing expenses elsewhere all through the province. We are carrying out that policy which was the wishes of this and other constituencies as expressed at the last election."

Turning to the local club, Dr. Faulkner asked his audience to realize, that the organization to be just exactly what the Liberals of Belleville make it. "It will grow and thrive and depend only upon the support each member gives. If you stay home and complain, then you are not the ones who are responsible for its failure." One way in which the club could be made more interesting to all was a regular series of educational programmes, which could be held at stated intervals for all members, he declared.

He suggest, that each month one meeting be held, which would be devoted to something educational. We might be able to arrange a prominent speaker to address us during that evening who could talk along social work, delve into historical subjects or even lecture on a lesson on economics. We must become more practical, develop the habit of thinking and learning so that we may be of more use to ourselves and our country. We should identify ourselves with every good cause; we should try to build up the welfare of our city or municipality; we must have various activities and the door open to everyone."

Pausing briefly and speaking as impressively as he was able, Dr. Faulkner turned briefly to menace of mixing politics with municipal affairs.

Vote For City

"Never," he impressed, "make the mistake of introducing politics into civic affairs of your city. I say this from the bottom of my heart. When you do that, you commit a suicidal act. Select your councillors and mayors, who stand for the good of the city. Forget party affiliations and vote only as the good of your city dictates."

Citing the Trenton-Sidney road and the new road through the centre of Hastings County as two examples, the Hon. Dr. Faulkner declared them to have been roads which had been neglected and paved only with promises by the previous administration. Here again, he maintained, politics had not entered into any of the work connected with them. They could not be allotted on a political basis, and this policy has been carried out and will be carried out in West Hastings as long as I myself am here. As long as I serve I will serve everyone, regardless of party, creed or anything else," he pledged.

Again the speaker reminded, that the tuberculosis sanitorium which had been promised Belleville, had not been forgotten. Before long two sanitaria will be constructed in Eastern Ontario, one in this city and one in Cornwall. It will be here when property qualified professionals are able to be appointed. The inability so far has been to provide the right type of men for this work at the salaries which the government at present is able to pay. A personal request has been made to the Prime Minister, who has given complete endorsation of the scheme, Dr. Faulkner declared.

Criticism of his stand on the 5-hour day caused by public institutions had been made, continued the speaker, but it was pointed out by him, that it was not feasible to apply this to all callings. "I'd like to see a doctor, who must work under the 8-hour day law, or a farm hand, who worked only 8 hours a day. The men and women who work in public institutions receive good pay and are satisfied. If they receive worked only 8 hours per day the cost of maintenance of the various public institutions would be stupendous. There is not an institution in Ontario at the present time, whose policy will be anything but a bill of expense, even after having the various municipalities absorb $8,000,000 per year to maintain."

Premier is Praised

Premier Hepburn was referred to by Dr. Faulkner as "the man who puts the laws on the statute books, which were seen that they were carried out." In his particular reference to the closing up of nineteen hotels, Premier Hepburn declared to have been in league with the big brewing institutions.

"In conclusion the Minister of Health spent considerable time asking for the continued confidence reposed in him and declared that when he failed to merit this he would gladly resign and return to his private practice.

Mr. F. C. MacLaurin declared the Liberals of Hastings County to be riding on a wave of popularity and prosperity at the present time, but indicated that a responsibility now rested on the shoulders of every Liberal to keep abreast of the times and thoroughly cover closer unity and co-operation. "It is more important that we be up and active during such at present than it was even before the election," he declared.

"We must organize, educate and learn so that we will not be caught napping. The Conservatives believed they were caught napping, and now they find more and more at our public meetings by them than before the election. They are making up for it now. Keep Liberalism before the people and there will be no Conservative representative," stated Mr. MacLaurin.

Mr. A. R. Collins, wittily covered several points of the local organization but seriously reminded that the recent Liberal victory could not be looked upon as solely a Liberal win. Conservatives all through the Dominion had assisted in the upheaval; all Conservatives who now fit to disassociate themselves from the party they had followed for years, simply because they knew, that a change was needed," he declared.

In his valedictory address, and following a brief expression of appreciation voiced by Walter Turner for the work, that had been so well performed, while he was in office as president, Mr. Ed. McQuaid, pervident voiced his gratification at being associated with such a splendid body of workers. "I have never held a position where there has been so much hard work and pleasure combined. When I look back, however, the hard work is forgotten in the satisfaction of knowing that I tried to do my best, which pleasure has been accomplished with-out the help of every officer and many more. Every one, every committeeman and woman has made this possible. I thank you all for your confidence because it belongs to all," declared the past president.

New Member Heard

Mr. Chas. Cameron, M. P. for South Hastings in a brief address told of his recent visit to Ottawa and the impressions that had been given him merely by the sight of the Parliament Buildings. He now had a right to know how hard at work. "I have never seen a more determined body of men now than those who are putting those policies for which you have fought", he added.

"Now you have King as King-maker, a Minister of Agriculture who is a Gardiner and you have a Minister of Finance who sends the Premier a telegram of congratulations the better combination could you ask for."

Mr. Tummon, declared Mr. Cameron, was busy at the present time analyzing his defeat, but there was one thing he had not taken into account in his statement that the railway towns and the airport had done much to defeat him, and that was the fact that the Liberals had the "right-hinged" machine ever seen in South Hastings.

"The picture has changed in this riding as greatly during the past two or three years, that one hardly knows the old county," added Mr. Cameron in expressing his appreciation for the continued assistance, that has been given during and prior to the campaign.

"I take no personal credit for the victory here, and I can only urge now, that as we have become friends, let us stay that way, and hope that the future will involve other great undertakings of a like nature. Let us forget the east and west ridings and remember only that we're from Hastings (applause) and intend to continue as such."

In reiterating his pledge, that he would do anything he could on behalf of every supporter, Mr. Cameron asked only for patience and the chance to work out future plans together.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Mahee of Ochawa is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thrasher.

Rawdon folk were rudely awakened early Friday morning when the tremors of an earthquake rocked the beds in which several were sleeping.

Doors and windows rattled, dishes and pictures shook and several hardcon folk were greatly disturbed until they realized what might be the cause of all the jar. No doubt the superstitious folk saw some omen in these happenings. Early Friday morning the radio brought immediate news of the disaster in Montana, which affected the telephone lines and other wires over 200 miles. Truly we are thankful that Rawdon was not hit by the quake.

MIRAGE OF GRANDEUR

Dictators develop the faculty of saying things which "strike". Mussolini has this as his late utterances indicate. He has said some sensational things, such as his promise that sanctions mean war, not immediately but later, in which Italy will battle those she knows are her foes, that Italy will not forget and so on. These are dramatic sayings which have a powerful effect upon the mind of the Italian people. It may be that absolute rule liberates the mind of the dictator from the ordinary restrictions, and imposing pictures of grandeur, and words of grandiloquence and magniloquence take the place of the ordinary language of politics or commerce.

"Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed that he is grown so great?" a question put in the mouth of some of the conspirators against the first Roman dictator Julius Caesar, has been applied to Mussolini by a writer in the New York Times. He advises Duce to be more cautious according to the standard of Machiavelli, the cold prophesier, like the fishermen they never forget the BIG one that got away.

"THE MOST DELICATE PERFUMES KEPT CONSTANTLY ON HAND" reads the advertisement of a local barber (Tonsorial Artist) in a small newspaper called "The Free Press' published in Belleville Wednesday, September 22, 1880, Vol. LV, No. 92, bearing the boast that it was printed every Wednesday and Saturday morning. The aforesaid Barber also announced that he was the BIG one in the city for an easy shave. The adv. does not give any direction where to find the Best or worst place in the city for an UNEASY shave. McCullough and Co., acknowledged being proprietors of The Free Press and asked the sum of seventy-five cents for a years subscription.

THE VERY ODD MCINTYRE, otherwise O. O. McIntyre, journalist, who originated in Gallipolis, Ohio, but escaped as soon as he was able to walk and talk, whose pen pictures of New York City life appear daily in many newspapers, certainly does an interesting bit of boosting for the big city every day. Like others on the Big Time of newspaperdom he gets considerable mail from readers. Occasionally he scores a prize, like the following which popped up in his daily mail recently:

"Dear sir: On a downtown street corner yesterday I heard what you would class as a soap box orator say: "Unless you are a millionaire in this country, you haven't got a Chinaman's chance. Boys not born to wealth are headed for capitalistic serfdom or prison."

"Being, as I am, a coal miner, I suppose I should have agreed and shouted my praise. But such was not my reaction and why I thought of you I don't really know, but I did.

"We coal miners do work hard, of course, and are paid I presume all we are worth as just ordinary producers of a common commodity. We do not get far financially because we are uneducated and have no right to expect more than the average uneducated person.

"Now: I have three sons, I have endeavored in my clumsy sort of way to teach them that what they get out of this life is what they put into it. Likely we have to put in more than we actually get. I am about to reap a result that would cheer most millionaires.

"I have a son, the eldest, who has worked hard and conscientiously to obtain for himself an education. While in High School he worked after hours for money to take him to college, only to lose it in a bank failure. But he would not quit. Finally, on graduation from High School he got a one year scholarship in the University of Chicago.

"He went there, took a part time job and stuck for three years, often hungry and in need of warm clothing. Finally he had to return home. We were all broke but he got a job and worked a year. Then went back for more. He was graduated from the law school of that University on June 12, 1935, and why should I be so proud?

"Sir, he is my flesh and blood, a courageous, God-fearing, clean-living American boy and I know he will never work in a coal mine or do other back-breaking toil. He sailed on the S. S. Washington Sept. 25 to England where he will attend Oxford as a Rhodes scholar.

"So, who hasn't a chance?"

WIDE FIELD

Fred: "I hear you got a job. What sort of a job is it?"

Frank: "I'm doing research work."

Fred: "That's great! What are you investigating?"

Frank: "Oh, nothing in particular. I just go around and ask about anything that strikes my fancy."

Twinkling lights, a misty valley,
Silver moonlight on the bay,
Thoughts and fancies wound me valley,
Memories of yesterday.

Silent hills, the sea's deep drumming,
Fragrant scents of broom and heath,
Skylarks' song, the wild bees' humming,
How I loved the dear Dunbeath.

Carefree song, and joyous laughter,
O the blythesome friends I knew,
Sometime in the dim hereafter
Will my dearest wish come true.

Once again I see Knockally,
See Balcladich He beheath,

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and ma and pa pop, Well, it seems the critical question of the hour is still ever present. I mean what shall I order for dinner? she said.

Why don't you purchase me for a change? pop said. When I come home this evening let my tired and weary self rest on something substantial unexpected, he said, and ma said, My goodness that's more like a hindrants than a help. I mean it certainly is a sketchy suggestion.

Not at all. I'd call it very definite, I all ready have potatoes and onions, pop said, and ma said, how Willyum, dont take like a last straw. What's surprising about liver and onions is this house, especially at this moment when we had liver and onions only 2 days ago she said.

That would be just the surprising angle, because after just having it the day before yesterday it never dreem you'd have it again so soon, pop said, and ma said, how redicklious, pop said, implying a rite now.

O well, then let's just stick to the ordinary routine, give me something I'm used to, liver and onions for dinners, pop said and ma said, Now Willyum you mite as well banish the ideer from your fertiher thawts because it's quite out of the question.

Of course if it, I realise that, but I was only making it such a bit surprise, that was my original intention, pop said, and ma said, Now we're rite back where we started.

I guess it's what's known as a serious circle pop said. O well just pick something at random, how about liver and onions, pop said.

I'll have a nice shoulder of veel with some nice green peas and potatoes with a little gravy, she said. Do you think, Willyum? ma said, and pop said, I'll eat it if everybody elts does.

Now that's better. I dont like to choose the menu all alone, after all Willyum, you are a help, ma said, and pop said, Just call on me any time I'll use my experience and natural ingenuity is at your service.

And he folded up his paper and left for his office.

PREMIER KING TO VISIT ROOSEVELT AT WHITE HOUSE

Trade Negotiations Will Likely be Subject to Conversations

DAFOE DECLINES POST

Offered Post as Canadian Minister to United States

OTTAWA, Nov. 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King leaves for Washington tomorrow and will start off a southern vacation with a visit to President Roosevelt at the White House.

While trade negotiations with the United States are expected to be resumed shortly, Mr. King declined to say whether he would discuss this question with Mr. Roosevelt. He described his visit to Washington as similar to that which formed Prime Minister Bennett made in 1933.

Mr. King said he felt the need of a rest after the long election campaign and the arduous task of forming a Cabinet and dealing with the questions which required the immediate attention of the new government.

Leaving Ottawa tomorrow afternoon he will arrive in Washington Thursday and Friday he will go to the White House. He made no announcement as to where he will spend the rest of the holiday but he will likely be away from Ottawa for about two weeks.

Guest of White House

When he planned his vacation Mr. King said he notified Norman Armour, United States Minister to Canada, of his desire to call on the President of the United States. Mr. Armour had since then conveyed an invitation from the President to be his guest at the White House.

Hon. Dr. W. Dafoe, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, had declined the post of Canadian Minister to the United States, Mr. King said he was still hopeful Mr. Dafoe would change his mind and go to Washington, even if he could remain only a short time.

Mr. Dafoe's wide knowledge of trade matters would be of great assistance in the trade negotiations now pending. The western editor, Mr. King said, would be of strength to any Government and he would have liked to have had Mr. Dafoe in the Cabinet.

Groundwork Prepared

Washington, Nov. 5 (CP)—Capital circles took it for granted today that trade matters and the possible St. Lawrence seaway will be subjects of conversation when Premier

" TREED"

Hunters who take their dogs along to the boundaries of Jasper National Park in Alberta, are sure this picture was taken, may be rewarded by bringing home some bear cubs. This dog certainly has his bears "up a tree."

Mackenzie King comes to Washington later this week to be the guest of President Roosevelt.

When Mr. King stops off here Thursday on his way south for a holiday, he will find the groundwork for trade talks already prepared.

Three Canadian Government experts arrived Sunday and conversations have already been held at the State Department.

Trade between the neighboring countries remains far below the pre-depression level. From 1929 to 1933 it tobogganed to one-quarter the volume of the former year. United States exports dropped from $848,000,000 to $211,000,000 in 1933, while Canadian sales to this country fell from $603,000,000 to $185,000,00.

Now it is climbing again. For the first two-thirds of the current year Canada has bought approximately $218,000,000 in goods, while sending $117,000,000 back to the United States.

Negotiations seeking a reciprocal trade agreement were started during the recently overturned regime of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. There were many difficulties in the way. For instance rumors the tariff on Canadian potatoes might be lowered aroused a vigorous campaign in New England, particularly Maine. Secretary of State Hull denied the rumour.

Leading Exports

Leading United States exports to Canada are in the following groups: chemicals, coal, crude petroleum and gasoline chemicals and allied products, iron and steel products, automobile parts, fresh fruits, raw cotton, books and printed matter, electrical apparatus. Other exports consist of newsprint, wood and wood-pulp, fish, precious metals, chemicals and allied products, nickel, copper, furs and asbestos.

President Roosevelt is believed anxious to submit the St. Lawrence Treaty to the Senate again this year but said to desire certain changes in the draft so it may be more acceptable to the Senate, which once rejected it."

HERDS AT SPRING KILLED BY BOMBS

Ethiopians Claim Women And Children Also Slain

By James A. Mills
Copyright, 1935, By the Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Nov. 4.—The Ethiopian government announced today 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows were killed during an attack by Italian airplanes Saturday on Gorrahei.

The casualties were said to have occurred while the herds of cattle were being watered at a spring.

Gorrahei is the site of a military post and important springs but as all men were at the front, the official communique said, bombs dropped by the attacking aerial squadron fell only on the women, children and cows.

The air raid was described as the most serious yet suffered by the Ethiopians, involving greater casualties than previous assaults on Adowa and other cities.

Government officials said they still lacked any first hand knowledge of a new Italian offensive on the northern front.

OIL, COAL, STEEL DENIED TO ITALY

By The Canadian Press

While Italian Troops poured out of Hamsien on the advance towards Makale today, the League of Nations sub-committee on economic sanctions approved in principle the Ethiopian proposal to embargo petroleum, coal, iron and steel be added to the list of exports denied to Italy by member nations.

Element of Chance Removed Says Cadi

Sarnia, Nov. 4 (CP)—In a written judgment issued today Magistrate Woodruff acquitted Jack Harris and F. P. Marshall, both of Sarnia, of charges of operating a common gaming house.

Operation of church boards in shops managed by the two men formed the basis of the charges. The Magistrate held if a player had sufficient mathematical skill to appreciate the setup of a "magic square" and used the keyline correctly there was no element of chance.

The charges were considered a test of the legality of the type of punchboard concerned.

Miscellaneous Shower For Enjoyable Affair

A miscellaneous shower in honor of Mr. Melvin Morris McConnell and Miss Mildred Angela Delmard, both of Petites Edvard Ordinary, was held in the Liberal Clubrooms on Saturday evening attended by thirty-five of their intimate friends and relatives. The early part of the evening was spent in playing cards and dancing, while at the midnight hour a delightful buffet lunch was served.

As the prospective bride and groom entered the spacious hall, they were met by the assembled guests and escorted to a platform, especially decorated for the occasion. A mock bridal ceremony was performed, little Miss Aileen Mason and Loretta Slade being participants. Later the couple carried to the centre of the floor a huge basket adorned with streamers. Although taken by surprise, Mr. McConnell on behalf of himself and Miss Delmard thanked all for their kindness and invited all to visit them in their new home. They will be married on Wednesday. Miss Grace Leonard acted as pianist for the dancing.

Green tea drinkers will find a sheer delight in the exquisite flavour of Salada Japan tea. Try a package.

Aberhart Denies He Prays Daily On Steps of Alberta Legislature

Edmonton, Nov. 4 (CP)—People of Perth, Australia, have heard Premier Aberhart fears riots here and is offering up prayers daily on the steps of the legislative building, according to a cablegram which the Premier has just received from "down under."

The Premier hastily wired denial.

The query which the Premier received was signed by "Butler, Douglas Movement," it follows:

"Press publish here you fear riots. Say you pray on steps of government buildings daily. You refused to consult Douglas. Threatin dismissal of typists who use lipstick. Interest here warrants reply. Good wishes."

"Press entirely misinformed. Our people are peaceful. Have no knowledge of riots. Foolish report regarding prayers on government building steps. Also, lipstick dismissals ridiculous."

War at a Glance

Gibraltar, Nov. 4 (AP) — The battleship Ramillies sailed today today from England to replace her sister ship, the Resolution, in the Mediterranean fleet.

Jerusalem, Nov. 4 (C.P.-Falcor Agency)—Palestine today adopted drastic sanctions against Italy equivalent to a complete cessation of trade relations between the two countries.

The order provides for immediate enforcement of an embargo on all raw materials and imposes severe restrictions on exports to Italy.

Provision is also made for a boycott of Italian imports to be instituted at some future date. In addition the severance of financial relations between Palestine and Italy is also contemplated, including the prohibition of all commercial activity.

Geneva, Nov. 4 (AP) — Robert Haas, French director of the League of Nations transit section, died today, indirectly a victim, physicians said, of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Haas succumbed to heart disease precipitated by overwork during the League's consideration of the war question. He was in charge of the League wireless service which daily transmitted to the world all the decisions of the league.

Geneva, Nov. 4 (APA) — The League of Nations found itself embarrassed today by its own sanctions against Italy.

It was to move into its new building November 11, but the interior decorations, not completed, were to have been made of Italian marble.

Under the terms of the "Buy-Nothing-from-Italy" embargo, the League cannot buy its marble from Italy.

Marble contracts totalling $50,000 are to be placed in other countries.

Rome, Nov. 4 (C.P.-Havas) — Mussolini's African war today had the backing of another important Italian statesman.

Mgr. Jeremich, Capitular Bishop of Venice, wrote to communicants of the Venetian district urging them to conform to the government's plans and to prepare to bear sacrifices.

He expressed the hope "that Catholic associations will be among the first to give this noble example and to aid the clergy."

Rome, Nov. 4 (C.P.-Havas) — Newspapers here today reported Father Chiavegna of Turin was stoned by angry natives in Ethiopia. Father Somaliland, but escaped without serious injury. A protest was lodged with French authorities by the Italian consul, the papers said.

Adigrat, Nov. 4 — (C.P.-Havas) — One aspect of the war overlooked by the Italian general staff, Emperor Haile Selassie said the League of Nations, to say nothing of the opposing armies, was discussed here today by Col. Filippo Marinetti, 63 year old founder of Futurism.

Per Col. Marinetti, General de Bono's conduct of the East African campaign, is a veritable triumph for the principles of Futurist esthetis.

"The glorious elements of color and terrain, the building of roads and the march to the attack and—the colonel adds—the retreat of the enemy—are in perfect accord with the system of lines and angles through which the Futurists look upon his universe.

REMANDED SIXTH TIME

Perth, Ont., Nov. 4—(CP)— Four persons charged with perjury as a result of evidence they gave two months ago at an inquest into the death of William Muldoon, 50-year-old Smith's Falls locomotive engineer, were remanded today for the sixth time.

The tour, Milburn Baker and his wife, Mrs. John Gleeson and John Miller, appeared before Judge F. W. Wilson and were remanded on renewal of $5,000 bail each after Crown Attorney W. W. Pollock mentioned a new inquest had been ordered into Muldoon's death.

Emperor Celebrates Coronation Anniversary

Addis Ababa, Nov. 4.—Emperor Haile Selassie entered the sixth year of his reign today, supremely confident of victory over the Italian invaders.

"Thus far the Italians have encountered only scattered detachments of our troops who have shown traditional bravery," he told this correspondent after celebrating today the fifth anniversary of his coronation.

17TH ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED TODAY

Mussolini Promises Italy Victory as in Year 1918

(By Charles H. Guptill, Copyright, 1935, By The Associated Press)

Rome, Nov. 4 —Premier Mussolini promised Italy another victory today as the kingdom celebrated the 17th anniversary of its triumphant armistice with Austria-Hungary.

While Fascism's army carried its standards forward on both the Northern and Southern fronts in Ethiopia, Il Duce gave his pledge to thousands of his countrymen who thronged the piazza venezia before his office.

"This is a great day for the nation," Il Duce shouted. "Once again Italy will have as her prize victory."

The Fascist throng surged through police lines in its enthusiasm. Cries of "Duce, Duce," rose from throats hoarsened by continual cheering and shouting.

"The Italian army 17 years ago won victory, not only for itself but for everybody," Mussolini told the crowd.

"Today the nation is engaged in another battle. But the Italian people are invincible, united and irrevocably determined. Once again Italy will have as her prize, victory".

VATICAN MAY SEEK SOLUTION

Germany And Russia Are Said To Be Wooing France

(By Charles Foltz, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Nov. 4 (AP)—Premier Laval rested today in his native Auvergne while officials admitted the possibility of the Vatican's seeking a solution of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict during "the period of waiting" before the British elections, Nov. 14.

The Vatican, it was said in diplomatic circles, is unable to employ pressure as a temporal power, but is sounding out interested capitals.

"The Vatican may find the solution if Mussolini is willing," one official said.

Germany and Soviet Russia are reported to be wooing France for the future while she serves as a buffer between Italy and Britain in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

France has abandoned its fear she will be attacked by Germany over Alsace-Lorraine, it is said, as the German peril lies on the frontiers of her Allies, Slovakia, described as in close relationship with Russia through Prague, would not sit by while Germany took the Ukraine, officials said.

75 MILLION LOAN IS OPENED TODAY

Oversubscription Expected by Bank of Canada Officials

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—Indications at noon were that the $75,000,000 Dominion Government loan, opened today, would be substantially oversubscribed, Bank of Canada officials stated. Books were opened for subscriptions at nine this morning and officials said both the four and five year maturities were proving popular.

The short term bonds will bear interest coupons at two per cent and the long term at three per cent and they will be priced to yield respectively 2.15 and 3.26 per cent. The proceeds of the loan will be used for general purposes.

No date has been fixed for the closing of subscription books and this will be decided by Finance Minister Dunning.

KING GEORGE II ELATED BY VOTE

Former Queen Elizabeth Prefers to Remain Farmerette

London, Nov. 4 (AP)—George II of Greece, elated at the plebiscite which restored him as King, held an "informal court" at his London hotel today.

He declared, "I am delighted that my people want me to return to them."

Messages of congratulation poured into his hotel.

One of his assistants stated, "His Majesty's plans are still unsettled."

Bucharest, Rumania, Nov. 4 (AP) — Rumanian diplomatic circles here today indicated she is not interested in returning to the Greek throne, despite the sweeping victory of the Monarchists in yesterday's Greek plebiscite.

Divorced from George II, expected to be restored to the throne as the result of the Monarchist victory, is apparently has no regrets and prefers to remain a farmerette in Rumania instead of again becoming queen of Greece.

In distributing tobacco to the retail trade, every manufacturer finds it necessary to use the jobber. Even with 127 full-time salesmen in its employ, the Imperial Tobacco Company is unable to call upon the average retailer oftener than once in five weeks. Yet thousands of retailers, because they prefer to buy in small quantities and often, have to be seen and given delivery two or three times a week.

That is where the jobber comes in. Carrying the lines of all tobacco manufacturers, confining himself to a limited territory, covering it thoroughly and frequently, and assuming full responsibility for delivery and collections, the jobber renders a service that for efficiency and economy cannot be equalled.

Because the jobber is a proven necessity, the Imperial Tobacco Company feels itself under an obligation to give him its full support in the maintenance of conditions and practices that ensure him a reasonable profit.

That support is given in two ways. First, the Company protects the jobber against excessive competition in his own particular territory. A certain amount of competition is always desirable, to stimulate sales effort and to ensure thorough coverage. But once competition in any given territory has reached a point where it serves such ends, the Company endeavors to maintain it in this healthful condition.

In addition, the Company makes it known to all its jobbers that it expects each and everyone of them not only to refrain from price-cutting himself, but to discourage price-cutting by his retail customers. The Company is just as anxious to protect its jobbers against unfair competition as it is to protect them against excessive competition.

Tobacco jobbers are organized into associations on a territorial basis. Each association has its own committee for determining codes of practice and for disciplining members who offend.

Jobbers play so important a part in the distribution of tobacco, and play it so well, that the Imperial Tobacco Company is always glad to do everything in its power to conserve and promote their best interests.

3 EARTH SHOCKS RECORDED TODAY

None of Them Emanated From Eastern Canada is Report

Toronto, Nov. 4 (CP)—William G. Carroll, seismologist of the Dominion Meteorological Bureau, stated four slight earth tremors were recorded here during the night and early today but none of them emanate from Eastern Canada.

All of the shocks were slight, Mr. Carroll said, adding they had the appearance of earthquakes that had been previously recorded as emanating from Montana. The first recording was made at about 11 p.m. last night while three tremors were indicated today at approximately 5 a.m., 9.02 a.m. and 9.15 a.m.

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—The Dominion Observatory today reported its seismograph had recorded three slight earth shocks last night and this morning, none of which were connected with last Friday's severe earthquake that was felt throughout the eastern half of North America.

Mr. Doxsee, assistant seismologist, said the character of the records indicated the tremors might be after-shocks of the Helena, Mont., quake which rocked parts of Western Canada last week.

Remembrance Day is A Statutory Holiday

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (CP)—Remembrance Day, November 11, is a statutory holiday throughout Canada but there is no Dominion law which calls for the compulsory closing of factories and stores. General public recognition, though, usually is given to all holidays prescribed by Dominion statute.

A ruling of the Secretary of State Department states:

Chapter four of the Acts of Parliament of Canada, 1931, provides that throughout Canada in each and every year November 11 shall be a holiday and shall be kept and observed as such under the name of "Remembrance Day". Remembrance Day is therefore a statutory holiday the same as Sunday, Christmas Day, New Year's Day or Labor Day. Under the Statutes of the Dominion and of the Provinces, Sunday is the only day which is compulsorily observed by the closing of factories and stores. Nevertheless, throughout Canada general public recognition is usually given to all holidays, which are prescribed by the Statutes of Canada.

Mothers Aided by Guide to Better Control of Colds

Practical Plan is Helping Families Everywhere to Have Fewer, Milder, and Shorter Colds.

SIMPLE AND EASY TO FOLLOW

Already, thousands of Canadian mothers are benefiting by following the Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds—proving for themselves that it is a practical home guide to fewer and shorter colds.

The commonsense, medically sound Plan requires the 30 years' experience of Vicks chemists in studying colds. It has been tested in extensive clinical trials under physician—further proved in every Vicks home throughout the country.

Briefly, are the three simple steps in Vicks Plan:

1. To Help Build Resistance to Colds.

Live normally—avoid excesses. Eat simple food and keep elimination regular. Drink plenty of water. Take some exercise daily—outdoors preferably. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

2. To Help Prevent Many Colds at the first warning nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze, use Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops in each nostril. Va-tro-nol is a time tested product for the nose and upper throat—where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in their early stages.

3. To Help End a Cold Sooner if a cold has developed, or strikes without warning, rub throat and chest (avoiding sensitive skin) with Vicks Vaporub. Vaporub acts two ways at once: (1) By absorption through the skin, like a poultice or plaster; (2) By stimulating and penetrating medicated vapors, direct to inflamed air-passages. Thus, like a combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm, soothes irritation, helps break up congestion.

What Vicks Plan can do for you and your family, can be proved only by trying it. Directions for following the Plan come in each package of Vicks Va-tro-nol and Vicks Vaporub.

110 YEARS OF AGE

Britain's Oldest Woman Still Enjoys Her Tea

Believed to be the oldest woman in Britain, Mrs. Elizabeth Merrifield celebrated her 110th birthday in Aylsham, Norfolk, yesterday. She being hostess at a tea-party.

Born at Trowse Newton, and with a few white bonnet, she cut her birthday cake that had been specially made for the occasion, and entertained some of her friends.

In spite of her age, Mrs. Merrifield is still mentally and physically very active, and her voice is surprisingly strong. She eats three hearty meals a day, and enjoys a pint of tea with great enjoyment.

Mrs. Merrifield's father was so small that for a week after her birth they could put all the baby clothes on her. She loves to recall her father's fame as a boxer. Her uncles bet £100 that they could put her into a quart pot.

"They tried," she gleefully said, "and they got me in."

Born at Trotting Common, ten years after Waterloo, Mrs. Merrifit remembers the Crimean War, the Corn Law riots, and the Coronation of Queen Victoria. She has been married twice, and her second husband died in 1906.

She worked in a laundry until she was 85.

Fewer wolves, however, are being reported in Hastings County, it is stated by Mr. James Haggerty, County Treasurer. Up to the present over pelts have been received this year than for years past.

Winds that lull between the advance gale which registered 86 miles an hour at Miami, and the hurricane proper howling 87 miles an hour, gave residents an opportunity to inspect damage and repair electric homes secure, thus reducing the hazard.

The dead were: Ruth Levy, 13, crushed by a falling beam; Herman Levy, 15, brother of Ruth, died of heart attack while placing shutters on the family home; Frederick Hill, 39, real estate broker, also victim of a falling beam; and Ernest Mitchell, 26, fled sailor aboard the steamship which reputedly struck by a flying ventilator.

Relief workers evacuated the Florida Keys in the first organized expedition of the Labor Day tragedy that left 400 dead. Estimates have killed 400 persons but the area exceeds 1,000.

Chairman M. R. Harrison of the disaster relief committee and directors of the Miami Herald agreed damage in the greater Miami area, exclusive of public utilities, would approximate $1,000,000. Farmers estimated the loss in citrus and other crops at more than $500,000.

Police took extra precautions to prevent looting in the negro areas were closed and streets and thirty were cleared of sightseers.

RED WINGS HAVE ROBUST TEAM FOR N. H. L. SEASON

Acquisition of Four Players Will Add Scoring Punch

TWO DEFENCES

Adams Has Two Lines of Proven Ability to Start

Detroit, Nov. 5—(CP)—Jack Adams was almost satisfied but not quite, last spring, when his streamlined Detroit Red Wings made a spirited finish at the end of a National Hockey League season, that had been disastrous. The boss of the Wings believed he had a great team, albeit he had got it too late for the 1934-35 campaign.

But Adams pondered in the off-season and now he has come up with additional reinforcements. The sensational fly Howe and Husky Sentry Benoit, both acquired from St. Louis late last season, Adams, and a log of other people, expect Howe to become one of the season's leading performers.

The team's newest additions are Hec Kilrea, purchased from Toronto Maple Leafs; Marty Barry, star centre, obtained from Boston Bruins for Cooney Weiland and young Pep Kelly, who made his professional debut with ill-fated St. Louis club last season.

It's a good team seen though it hasn't shown to advantage in preseason games. In fact this early failure prompted Adams last night to promote Lorne Duncan from the International League Olympics, replacing Johnny Sheppard. Adams had high hopes for Pettinger, who was ill during most of last year.

With the likes of John Ross Roach removed by his outright release, Detroit's defence, on paper, has lost but nonpromises and is performing his duties with all the aplomb of a veteran. The Detroit youth's work during the training season has caused even his teammates to praise the young puckstopper.

Two Defences

There are two defences. One is made up of captain Doug Young and bouncing Bucko MacDonald, one-time lacrosse star. On the other Bible Goodfellow teams with Howe. Goodfellow shuffled back and forth between centre and defence last season, has been stationed permanently on the line but Adams feels he is expected to regain his old-time form.

With the crafty Weiland missing, Herbie Lewis and Larry Aurie will play wide from the centre ice forward string. Critics here believe it will score its share of goals but Lewis-Weiland-Aurie division marked up.

On the second line are Howe, Bible Wiseman and Johnny Sorrell, all exceptionally good. It was one of the most effective scoring trios in the league at the end of last season and the brilliant Howe is expected to lead it to new heights in this campaign.

The only problematical part of the roster is the third line. Here Ed Bagnall, a robust, hard-checking centre, who has never made good in three N.H.L. tries; and Kilrea and Kelly. There is no guesswork concerning the individual abilities of Kilrea and Kelly, but the potency of the dynamic trio, as a unit, remains to be seen. Dropsie Maxie Kaminsky and Doug Young are expected to make the second defence pair.

Jack Portz, the ban sport more than $60,000 to add goals to their Red Wing machine, and if it isn't good enough there is no suggestion he won't put out more. Detroit wants a hockey title to add to its baseball triumph.

SARNIA AGREE TO PLAY-OFF

Will Meet Balmy Beach at Hamilton in Sudden Death Game

Sarnia, Nov. 5.—S. B. Scott, business manager of the Sarnia Imperials said yesterday that a sudden-death game in Sarnia between the Canadian champions and Balmy Beach for the O.R.F.U., title was put out of the question. Canadian Rugby Union rules call for all union winners to be determined by the second week in November.

Hamilton Cubs and Balmy Beach will play the last scheduled game next Saturday in Hamilton. If the two-point lead of Sarnia after first and second teams is held, a winner would not be declared until Nov. 23.

TOMMY COOK, midget little centre-ice star of Chicago Blackhawks hockey team, is shown in a safe-handling drill during practice with the Blackhawk squad. When Goalie Chabot was injured recently, Cook filled in behind the nets with pipes and turned in a creditable performance. But forward ice work is his forte, and Cook is as fine a stickhandler as there is in the league. Note the brilliant uniforms which will adorn the Blackhawk squad this season.

MAGEDOMAS PLAY WITH OTTAWA SRS

Senior 'B' Champions in League With Emeralds, Lasalle, Rideaus

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—(CP)—Brockville Magedomas, Ontario Hockey Association Senior "B" champions last year, will perform in the Ottawa Senior City League big season, Cecil Dunnan, Secretary of the local circuit, had announced. Ottawa teams in the League are Emeralds, Lasalle, Rideaus, Royal Canadian Air Force and New Edinburg Canoe Club.

Duncan said nothing further was definite regarding the proposed interlocking schedule which would have included Carleton Place, Smiths Falls and Perth as well as Brockville. There is still a chance these clubs will enter the interlocking schedule but in order to complete details of the approaching schedule local officials decided to admit Magedomas and go ahead with plans. The Ottawa Senior group, if Carleton Place, Smiths Falls and Perth decide they want to enter the circuit, other place will be made. In other years these teams have operated in League in the Ottawa Valley.

CONTEMPTIBLE TRICK

Fort William, Nov. 5.—The activities of the Port William Rowing Club will be badly crippled next summer. During the week-end gangsters entered the club's storeroom, slashing fourteen shells with a knife. Seven singles, five eights and a four were slashed in scores of places. No insurance was carried.

THE TERRIBLE TURK

The man of handsome strength who meets Walter Parnell, St. Catharines mat villain, in the semi-final bout of Thursday night's wrestling show at the Belleville Arena. Hassan gave exhibitions of his superb strength in a local ring recently when he broke iron chains with his hands and tore decks of cards in two. Hassan then used his super-human strength to win wrestling bout over Jack Pearl and was guided in ring ring-side scuffle to result in warrant a bout with the pugnacious Parnell. The main bout of the evening brings together Joe Katelmach and Chief Lynx in a finished bout, two out of three falls. There is no time limit to this bout, a winner must be declared regardless as to how long the contestants wrestle.

Four Broken Arms Haven't Halted West's Eddie James

By BOB PRIESTLY

You just can't keep Dim Eddie James down.

Three times without number two, three or four opponents have hit him together and crashed him to earth, and Eddie has been the first up on his feet.

Now the footballer has taken tough tackles and got to his feet again, sometimes have been slowed up, but not Eddie. Not even four broken arms can stop this man who has committed more eight column headlines on the pages of Western Canada's sport sheets in his day than any other rugby player. He's broken both arms twice and all but one bone have been the target for fate.

In 1922, when Eddie was playing for Regina Roughriders, he broke a small bone in his wrist playing against Calgary Tigers in the finals for the western title. Two years later Eddie journeyed to Hamilton with the Riders to play the Bengals from the mountain for the Dominion championship. He crashed a couple of times on that ice-hard field, and it was just a couple of times too many for the unprotected limited bone. It meant splints again for Eddie.

Bad Break in Winnipeg.

Three years later Eddie was back in his home town and performed for St. John's of Winnipeg. During the early part of the western semi-final, again in Regina, Eddie got a difficult pass to handle. He managed to get his finger tips on the ball, broke loose and bounced along the ground only a rugby ball can.

He gore after it and shot his left hand out to smother the elusive oval and was in the act of tucking it away to safety when Johnny Garlick, ace Regina lineman, lunged across the arm. The bone snapped just above the wrist.

Anxious times followed. Broken hearted, Eddie refused to leave the side-lines until after the game. He sat there with big tears cascading down his cheeks as he watched from the appointment as from pain, and watched his team defeated.

Nearly Lost Arm.

Inflammation set in and the straight break spelled much pain. For a time it looked as if Eddie would lose his arm, but after almost a year in a cast and another six months in a long grueling process took effect and he had the use of it again. The doctor, however, wasn't satisfied with it. The bone was still in a weakened state.

But the summer of 1934 found Eddie back home again. He went out on the prairie and pitched hay and the strength came back. At the start of training camp he was back to Winnipeg eager to be with Winnipeg. But the club executive was afraid to allow him to play. Finally, after weeks of pleading, the executive gave one Ab doctor says and leather brace was made and Eddie put on the pads and cleats again.

He played in three games and was showing much of his old time form. Again the crowd cheered his jarring, dynamite like plunges. In the second game of the third game he advanced the ball on a series of bucks to within the shadow of Manitoba Varsity's goal posts and was sent through again with only keep to go for a touchdown. As he suddenly swung out of the writhing pile-up and clipped Eddie's feet from under him and down he went with the bad arm underneath.

Crash Again.

None thought of anything serious when Eddie's team-mates and opponents came gathered around him. It was only when the crowd exclaimed "His arm!" The break was enough to withstand the shock.

This time the original doctor washed his hands but another was found who took him in charge. A few days later Eddie was on the operating table undergoing a double operation. A piece of bone was taken from the shin and grafted on to the break and now the doctor says the arm is stronger than ever it was.

Now he's back wearing the blue and gold of the Winnipegs in their 1935 drive for the Earl Grey trophy, playing just as good football as he ever did.

Judged by the years he has played football Eddie might be termed old, but he's not. He played junior in Winnipeg in 1927. The next year he played in Regina and played with Regina Pats when they won the Dominion Junior title in St. Thomas.

The Saturday previous he played with Roughriders in Hamilton, after which decision had been granted by the C.R.U. and was acclaimed by eastern sports writers. The way he came he was over age and so played with Riders as a regular.

There are still a few good years of good football in him yet.

SPECIAL TRAIN CARRIES GAELS

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Nov. 5.—(AP)—St. Mary's is coming across the country in style to meet Northwestern and they have their own special train of 12 cars—one is equipped as a gym, another has a public address system, too, and whenever Coach Elmer Layden wants to talk to the boys a pep talk, the 130 fans accompanying the team can tune in.

Last year Madigan took the team back from New York through Chicago and this year he's trying a different route—if you want to see the Gaels you'll have to go to Evanston to football at 58, Mary's for three years.

Always a great defensive team, St. Mary's is pressing offense this season—Madigan has a lot of trick formations to shoot at Fordham—and Coach Frank Leahy has a star in the backfield and for two backs to shift to the flanks—and all those 12 carriers are available all the time.

In Hockey Training Camps

(By the Canadian Press)

Happy-Go-Lucky Lorne Duguid, of the Toronto Maple Leafs, knows and always shifted back because he didn't take his work seriously when he earned himself a second chance at playing for Detroit Red Wings. He will be in the limelight when the international League season against New York Rangers opens.

Duguid won his fourth chance at the big time when he was given a spin in training games against Red Wings. He was a standout in games when the International League team defeated the Major League All Stars and Jack Adams decided he rates another crack at it.

Adams is lucky to have Olympics under his eye where he can compare their work to Red Wings' and their players to those of teams.

Duguid will wear a Red Wing sweater tonight in the third game of the City Series and Gordon Fenwick, another player he takes on a line with ace Kilrea and Pete Kelly, probably will drop to the third defence outfit.

The Detroit Manager considers the City Series excellent conditioning and chance for his players. Three-game exhibition games are rounding things out for the Wings, who have played last night in games at Winnipeg, Toronto, Hamilton and Halifax.

Rangers got the only decision over another major league team, winning 3 from Montreal Maroons by running in three goals in the final period. Maroons didn't score in any game, had a lone advantage, when Earl Robinson beat Dave Kerr.

Montreal Canadiens held Boston Bruins to a 1-1 draw but Boston took a bad beating from injuries. Irvin Couture, Canadiens' defence star, came out of it with a broken collar bone while Pete Palangio suffered a knee injury. Both may be out of the game for weeks.

Boston's new line of Red Beatty, Cooney Weilans and Dit Clapper, Jr., showed plenty of promise, scoring three goals. Beatty was a Weilland assistant last season and showed plenty of splendid defensive hockey. Shore got two assists.

Paul Haynes played brilliantly for the Habitants and beat Tiny Thompson with a backhander. Alex Larochelle and Aurel Joliat snipped in the Canadiens' counters. Haynes was an effective playmaker and Fred Haynes all three of his goals.

Carl Voss stood out at Hamilton for New York Americans defeating Rochester of the International League 4-2 in hard-fought game. Voss had two American goals and Harry Harris and Tommy Anderson the others.

Though there was nothing at stake Toronto fans got plenty of thrills in the Leafs' overtime victory over Springfield Indians. The Leafs' Syl Apps scored the winning goal from Eddie Powers' Whites. They won a penalty goal awarded the Whites when Rab Hollett threw his stick after Jack Shill was through the defense.

Charlie Conacher tied the score for the Whites in the last minutes of the third period on a pass from Bob Gracie. Conacher's goal was the first one on their way out of the rink when Buzz Boll won it for the Blues two seconds from the final gong.

Some seasons back Belleville and Barrie, or was it Owen Sound, collegiates played a sudden death football game, and the winner got the junior O.S.S.A. championship. Both squads lost money on the game, causing Junior O.S.S.A. play-offs to be discontinued henceforth. This year, however, group winners are closer together. Belleville juniors apparently being considerably ahead of Quinte group, while Oshawa looks like assured winners in the Lake Shore loop. With interscholastic football on the upward trend locally there should be no reason why the play-off series should not be resumed this year. The winner of the Oshawa-B.C.I. series could then tackle Quinte District's highly touted Peterboro Collegiate juniors, and a good time would be had by all. The Oshawa and Peterboro scribes are not a bit reluctant in the matter of publicity and their respective sheets are over their sport pages, but being a little more reserved, we'll wait until the local kids have vanquished both, before tooting our own horn.

In regard to the senior section of the O.S.S.A., however, there seemed to be some uncertainty as to what procedure will follow in the Lake Shore group. At present Peterboro C. I. is playing an inter-locking schedule with Lindsay, Cobourg, Port Hope et al. It seems Stevensville is leading their particular group, or something along these lines, with Peterboro leading their section. If these two winners have to tangle before meeting Coach Slack's Ajaxs, well the boys may not be out of the trenches before Christmas turkey time. At any rate such ideal weather conditions seem to vogue there is little to worry about. Peterboro C.I. scored totally one hundred points to Lindsay's 0 in their last game, but also patted us on the back by saying we were the best team they had met all season. Now the Peterboro gang has to face all kith and kin in Lindsay on Thanksgiving Day

by

Janet Doran

Judy wished passionately, that she had had just fifteen more minutes this morning at least. That way, she would at least know that he had had his dinner, and was properly cared for.

When darkness finally mantled the room, Judy stirred from her chair by the window, grasped that Michael could see the hands she now dared give way to.

"Michael, isn't there something I can do for you, something I can get you?"

Thanks, no!" It was a cold, icy rebuff, and Judy winced.

"You've been up a long time. You should be in bed, resting."

He stirred angrily, and would have managed the business of moving from the easy chair to the bed, if Judy hadn't jumped worriedly to help him.

"This isn't going to help you any, Michael," she protested, as he tried to get out of his robe without her aid. "You're being rather childish!"

"It's rather late to think of my happiness and health now, isn't it, Judy? I rather thought you had it pretty well figured out."

Judy did not answer. Know it useless to argue with him in this mood. Her hands shook as she kept losing her grip on things. Blankets, sheet, pillows, and she went to get a fresh carafe of water and a glass, and spilled some of that on the little night table. She remembered the smile Dr. Caithia had told her to leave by his bed all the time, and got that.

He must be hungry. He hadn't eaten since noon. And he had been on a strenuous round of calls.

"Couldn't you eat some ice cream, Michael, or I could get you an egg?" she pleaded wistfully, and Michael laughed harshly.

"Spend some of that precious money on more cream, Judy? You make me laugh!" Judy bit her lip and remained silent. He was ill, upset, nervous. He'd be sorry tomorrow. Horribly sorry. He'd want to make it all up, then. He always did. And now he was ill, and she mustn't notice what he said.

In the morning Mrs. Parker had agreed to stay with him until Judy could locate a girl to come in by the hour, during her office hours. It was only a half day, and she'd be back at noon.

In the morning Michael kept his face turned coldly, unforgivingly toward the wall, and Judy sighed out, more troubled and upset than she had ever been in her life before. She had never seen Michael in this mood before. It was terrible. He had raged and raved his temper to extinction, and then come sullenly, penitent back to her gentleness.

She could not guess that the door had scarcely closed on her, when Michael summoned Mrs. Parker and gave her explicit instructions.

"Call this number," he said curtly, "and tell whoever answers that Michael Swayne wants to see them at once, at this address. He sure you give the right address.

Mrs. Parker fastened to carry out his orders completely mystified. "It's probably some old friend," she decided finally, "maybe he's planning to get up a surprise for Judy. It's like him, he's always been that daffy over her."

Her decision was slightly damped when the voice answering the number he had given her, turned out to be the most beautiful, the most exquisitely musical sound she had ever heard.

"What?" Allison Mahar said sharply. "Where? I thought he was still in the hospital!"

"Oh, my no." Mrs. Parker explained, "he's been home since yesterday afternoon! And he said for you to come here at once, Miss."

"Maybe he's sicker than she suspected doubtfully, suspicion rearing its ugly head over the cheering trust in Judy's husband.

Michael coldly ordered Mrs. Parker out, scandalizing her utterly, when Allison appeared, a nearly hysterical young person of overwrought, ailing loveliness and anxiety.

"Look the door, Allison!" She did so. "Now, open that luggage and take everything out that belongs to me. Tell me what I want, and the plaguin case is mine, pack them into that."

When everything was finally packed, he sighed.

"How can you help me down to your car, Allison? I'll need my stick.... my leg hasn't got very strong yet." He had written a terse note sealed it, left it on the dresser for Judy, and not once had his eyes relented or his mouth lost the grim twist of anger.

Allison's long eyes were narrowed to triumphant slits, as she closed the door of the luxurious town car, and turned to Michael.

"Now, Mike?" she asked softly.

"I'm hungry, Allison," he said, sighing wearily, "I haven't eaten since yesterday."

"You poor darling," Allison was softly indignant, outraged, the very idea of letting him go without food that long. Mike, and you trying to gain back your health!" Michael did not answer. His eyes were fixed in somber, unseeing fascination on the traffic whipping past them, as they sped toward Allison's apartment.

Judy turned from surveying the empty, dismantled room, to face Mrs. Parker, puffing up the stairs behind her.

"Where, Mrs. Parker? Where to?" Her voice rose higher, broke. "Why?"

CHAPTER 17.

JUDY'S SEARCH

Judy sat down heavily, on the bed and her cold fingers closed about the letter, and blood thundered in her ears, and for a long moment no thought came, nothing but blank chaos, shot through and through with an agony of nameless fear.

This..... this was what she had always feared. Every moment, even when things went smoothly, beautifully, she had feared that Michael would leave her. That sometime his anger would go beyond words, beyond smiles and silence.

Her eyes were so stricken, her face so pale, as Mrs. Parker stared at that Mrs. Parker's heart came up in her throat, as she hurried over to place motherly arms about the girl.

"Now, dearie," she crooned maternally, "don't you go borrowing more trouble by fretting. Things are never so bad they can't be helped. There's always a way out."

"No," Judy whispered, not daring to open her letter to see what Michael had written, "no, Mrs. Parker, there won't be any way out of this. He..... he went with a woman, didn't he? A beautiful blonde woman who looked like a society girl?"

Mrs. Parker nodded, her eyes round with astonishment. So that was the sort of husband Michael Swayne turned out to be! She might have known! She always had said that the men charming, and kindable and sweet they were, the frightlier they were!

"And a big town car..... a black limousine?"

"Yes..... you know about her, then?" Mrs. Parker gasped.

"Yes," Judy nodded blankly, wearily, "I..... know..... about..... her! When did she come? How did she know where he was?"

Mrs. Parker would have given a year of her life space to be able to say, honestly, that she didn't know. That the woman must have found out from the hospital.

"He..... he had me call her number, Judy," she confessed unhappily, "and I didn't know. Didn't dream.... If I'd dreamed she wasn't his sister, or maybe sister-in-law, I'd never have done the errand for him!"

"Don't feel badly, Mrs. Parker," Judy tried to console the little woman, but her voice was such a stricken, little whisper of woe, that it only added fresh grief to her landlady's warm, stout heart. "I..... I guess I should have been sure it coming long ago. I guess..... I'm not the type Michael should have married. I..... seem to do things all wrong, according to his standards. I..... keep making such silly, dumb mistakes, blunders, that..... that his patience snaps."

She winked back the tears and stared at her hands. Saw the letter, and tore it open, trying desperately to keep her fingers from shaking so wildly.

"Judy" the absence of any endearment was a freak, blow to her sore, troubled heart, "Judy:

"I'll get in touch with you as soon as I'm self-supporting again. Under the circumstances, I can't very well accept any more of your gratuities, knowing as I do, your inborn attitude on financial matters."

It was signed boldly, without compromise, "Michael Swayne."

After a long time, Judy looked up, and discovered she was alone. Mrs. Parker had tiptoed out, and she hadn't heard, she had been so lost in her problem.

The hall was deserted, and Judy was wistfully grateful, as she crept down the stairs, and picked up the telephone on the little table by the door. She gave Allison Mahar's number and waited a long time for it to answer.

"Yes?" the cool, silvery voice startled Judy, and she swallowed, forgetting completely what she had planned to say.

"Mrs. Mahar?" she faltered. A faint little pause fell.

"This is Allison Mahar," the beautiful voice corrected the use of a title Allison found uncomfortable, slightly distasteful in the scale of existence.

"This is Judith Swayne, Mrs. Mahar. May I speak with Michael, please?"

This time there was no delicate pause of indecision. The words came in a rush, rapid, forceful, and quite pungent with meaning.

"Michael doesn't want to talk to you, and I don't blame him, either! She paused, and added significantly, "I'm sure you understand. Sleep is almost as important as food, you know, Mrs. Swayne. And I'm afraid you didn't get either, since he left the hospital!"

Judy felt the world rise to a shout in her brain, but she made no reply, did not say, "It was all his fault, Allison Mahar! I begged him to call! He was angry! He was furious with me, because I tried to balance our budget so we could live and he fair to people we owed just debts to!"

"Have you asked Dr. Herrick about this?" Judy faltered, after a long moment during which Allison's voice rolled triumph and depths of despair and hopelessness, a strange calmness of defeat settled on her, and she stopped trying to fight, desperately, through the fog, toward happiness. She wanted, every day, and came home to the little flat, to eat her lonely supper, and try to invent endless things to occupy her, until time to go to bed. To sleep, in spite of the cruel nightmares that left her tired, wan and listless afterward. Nightmares in which she pleaded and argued with Michael, begging him to forgive her, to try to understand. To take her back into his heart.

Days, she went, daily, to Dr. Herrick, asking him of news of Michael, and if he knew, if he realized the walking nightmare she lived in, he kept his thoughts to himself.

Paydays, she went the rounds. Something to Bill Cummings, back to Dr. Herrick, more to the tailor and the cleaners.

"Look here, Mrs. Swayne, I ought not let you do this," Bill Cummings remonstrated with her, one night, with unaccustomed surprise, his great purple shadows so wounded eyes, the tired droop to her soft mouth, the thin, pinched look to her face, "after all, that was old Mike's job, you know! I'd rather wait until he can pay it!" He didn't add "if you don't look as if you'd caught up with a square meal for weeks!"

"How's Michael?" he temporized lamely, as she flashed him a wan smile, and didn't say anything to his offer to help.

"He's doing well." Judy repeated Dr. Herrick's information of that morning, when that Bill wouldn't guess it was a relayed bulletin, "thank you."

"I'm dropping in on him!" Bill decided suddenly, "I want to talk to him. If..... lots of things old Mike and I have in common!" he added hastily, at the swift panic on Judy's tired face.

"He may forget," she decided against telling Bill, "and if he should forget to drop in on Michael he won't have to know..... about things." She did not realize that she was defending Michael, protecting him even subconsciously, from the possible criticism, censure of his friends.

"Oh, Mrs. Swayne!" Bill talked her, as she opened the door, "I almost forgot! Where are you and Mike staying, now?"

Judy felt the arms widening between them; she had a childish notion she would have to shout to make Bill hear. It surely couldn't be her voice giving that address to him. Not that soft, sad, tired little voice. Giving Jim Allison Mahar's address!

She turned and walked across town to her rooms, unaware of the warm heat of early spring sunshine on her back, a ruddy, lavish sun, even as it sank to rest in the west.

A trifle light of head, her, and Judy walked. An open car flashed out of traffic, the canvas top down, a patrician, beautiful blonde girl at the wheel. And beside her, laughing down at her indulgently, amusedly, his dark head bare to the mid afternoon sun, Michael! Michael, and Allison Mahar.

Judy stumbled blindly and would have fallen, if someone behind her hadn't reached strong, firm hands to grab her by the shoulders.

Martyr Garage Man Goes To Jail for Customers

For selling gasoline after the 8 o'clock curfew, closing deadline set by a newly passed city ordinance, Ernest Brockett, proprietor of a Bloor street garage, yesterday went to jail for two days.

Contending he is the victim of "pure hock-shop" selling thrust policy to meet political men hurrying out of the city at night on necessary errands, Brockett took the two days as a "martyr" rather than pay the $25 and costs imposed by a police magistrate.

Edmonday remains the victim of city council's whims in passing the by-law. Two days after passage it knocked brought to a standstill by a council, council ended its blitz-16 term. With the city council absent for the middle of November, the city faces a night's gas shortage until the new council meets and wipes out the by-law.

Wrathy urban motorists who have been forced to slaughter gallons cars on city streets or pay 25 per cent to thieves, and city business men lose a good day, though, and everybody liked him, according to his letters I got. Anyhow, we're not much pleased with the result. A few of us would go back even if we did get a chance, for more than a visit."

HALIFAX TEAM BADLY SHOT

May Not Represent Canada at The Olympics

Halifax, Nov. 5 (CP)—Weakened by the loss of two crack wingmen and their coach, Halifax Wolverines today were in danger of losing their chance to represent Canada in the Olympics.

After a week end of conferences, Manager Jack Conn promised to make an announcement tonight regarding "the fate of the Allan Cup holders."

There were "many loose ends to clean up" before a statement could be made, he said last night after Owen Lennon, who patrolled the left line for the Wolves in the championship series this year, left for London, Ont., to join Toronto in the International League.

In filming the protracted trail, Lennon followed the right wing winger from Sydney, who left earlier in the season to take the uniform of Detroit Olympics.

"Red" Horner went with Ontario to take charge of Sudbury Wolves.

Havana, Nov. 5.—The St. Louis Cardinals will play four exhibition games in Havana from March 5 to 8, Julio Blanco Herrera, wealthy horse-racing and sportsman, announced today.

Herrera, the "Jacob Ruppert of Havana," began negotiations with the Cardinals after they gathered the most votes in an island-wide poll of fans to determine which of the 16 major league clubs the Cubans were most desirous of seeing in action.

Among the prominent contenders were the New York Yankees, Chicago Cubs and the world champion Detroit Tigers.

LITTLE INTEREST IN GREEK CHANGE

Political Situation Too Remote to Stir Ripple Here

The Greek people have voted overwhelmingly for the recall of former King George to the throne, but in Belleville seen a ripple of excitement is stirred among the Greek residents over the event. Greeson, it was believed by the majority of those questioned, is too far, too remote to bother much over whether a King or a dictator rules.

"Me, I guess I'll never go back. Canada is good enough for me. Why should I worr; over what he do," commented George Callepis, restaurant employee, who took brief time out from the business of serving meat chick stobs to answer the interrogator. "My people, my friends, tell me it's all the same anyway. They have to work just the same, no?"

Nicholas Plotinos, whose more than twenty years' residence in the United States and Canada has given him the true western savoir faire, dismissed such a mere matter as the King being returned to the throne with a shrug.

"Probably it's all the same to the people of Greece no matter who is elected over them. Greeks, however, like the pomp and color of royalty and they indicated that when they returned King George with such a vote. This fellow General Kondylis was a strong trade by the reluctance of farmers and small town citizens to visit the larger centres of the gasoline shortage, trusted gangsmen Longboat Flea a prince during his confinement.

Dusk and broke down doors, cigarettes and other behind-the-bars luxuries were provided.

Cameraman Brockett, fresh out of jail, barred newspapers to take flashlight pictures when he again sold gasoline after the 8 p.m. closing by-law. He swears that he may spend a good part of the next few weeks in jail, but no motorist in need of gas will leave Scotty's garage with an empty tank.

The net result for Brockett has been that his 40-car capacity garage, never rushed for business before, is now in jail, is being used as a cash in for storage and repairs, as greatest motorists go on a crusading line to give him back business.

the possibility of gold. Immediately, he started his investigations that led him across several farm properties which convinced him that there was sufficient gold ore present to warrant diamond drilling.

Visible Gold in Core

After considerable negotiations, it is stated Dr. Carsfoot obtained options on some farms purchased one and others went in with royalty clauses should the plan work out successfully. Late in October, a diamond drill crew was brought here from Toronto and drilled the first hole 350 feet deep on Arthur Vermilyea's farm. At a depth of 200 feet, red and white quarts was struck and the balance of the core it is stated, showed plenty of visible gold along its entire length. There is not the slightest sign or surface indication of this quartz there being seventeen feet of overburden followed by nearly two hundred feet of limestone. The drill core is now being assayed and a second hole is to be sprinted about two hundred feet from the first.

Over 1,000 Feet Indicated

The electrical machine indicates oil well over a thousand feet. Needless well over a thousand feet. Needless to say the farmers whose properties are involved in the investigation are living in the highest hopes and confidently look forward to this district with the sponsor every success in his efforts to prove up gold in an area that has until this time showed not the slightest indication of containing mineral bearing rock.

The farmers who are keenly interested in the outcome of the work that is being carried out on the properties are Clarence and Arthur Vermilyea, Milton Ross and Geo. Devereaux the latter being a brother of Harry Meerman of this city.

Herd of 25 Cattle Driven 25 Miles Along Highway

Twenty-five rugged shorthorn steers will bellow and low their way through the streets of the city late this afternoon on the last lap of a twenty-five mile trip by hoof from Napanee. The overland drive along the main highway will be one of the first that has been conducted in this district for such a distance, it was stated by a well known leading butcher today.

The cattle, purchased by Mr. I. Nightingale of Massanaga from Mr. Clare Russell, Napanee, commenced the long trek from near the latter's early this morning and are expected to arrive in Belleville late this afternoon. They are being taken to the farm of the new owner near Massanaga where they will be wintered and fattened for beef.

A detail of helpers will assist Mr. Nightingale in keeping the drive orderly along the main roads.

BLACK BEARS ALIENTY FOUND IN FRONTENAC

Presence of a number of black bears in the northern section of Frontenac has been reported by numbers of deer hunters from their annual trek into the backwoods. About 10 miles north of here, home of Colin A. Campbell, Liberal member-elect for Frontenac, four bears were shot in the last three days. Duncan Macgregor shot a bear weighing 400 pounds near Long Lake while Milton and John Spencer were chased by a huge bear and her two cubs.

They had an exciting time before they killed the trio.

GIRL MURDERED, ANOTHER MISSING FEW CLUES LEFT

Toronto And Provincial Police Hunt Murderer of Ruth Taylor

NECKTIE AS CLUE?

Fears Doris Newman May Have Met Similar Fate

Toronto, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Toronto police offered a $2,000 reward today for information leading to the capture of the mental degenerate who beat Ruth Taylor, 20-year-old stenographer, to death Monday night and criminally assaulted her, leaving her battered body in the ravine of a ravine in the East end of the city. The Evening Telegram offered $1,000 reward for apprehension of the assailant of the girl whose body was found yesterday.

Doris Newman, 19, domestic at Government House here, was reported to be in Montreal with Kay Miller, a girl friend. She had been missing since last Thursday and news she was in Montreal relieved fears Miss Newman had met a similar fate to Miss Taylor.

Angle Cleared Up

One angle of the Taylor case was cleared up today when police contacted a telephone call from a man in Kitchener. Miss Taylor had spoken of a friend named Bill. It was this man who telephoned from Kitchener today to say he had been there Monday night when Miss Taylor was assaulted on a lonely street here as she trudged home in a driving rain.

Kitchener police told the local force they had definitely established the man's alibi. Police remained on the entire night of Monday, eliminating Sidney James W. Kathleen A. ... said today he had received a letter from his son in Montreal stating she and Doris Newman were together.

Letter From Missing Girl

"We had a letter from Kay on Saturday," he said. "She said she was in Montreal, but gave no address. She said she would write later and we are expecting another letter any day. Her mother is not anxious about her.

"That is not the first time my daughter has gone away and she always comes back safely. I do not think she seem to be able to hold a job. She has no relatives in Montreal."

Detectives working on the Taylor case said they had found a blue black notebook crammed with addresses and names near the spot where the girl's body was found. They said they hoped to obtain a clue from the book.

Another possible clue was seen in an attack on Vera Hamilton in the same part of the city on the night of October 6. On that night, home from the Miss Bloodsworth was attacked by a young man of 30 or 40 dragged into a vacant lot. She said when her screams frightened the man

Chief Coroner Crawford said today Miss Taylor's skull had been fractured by a heavy blow on the front of her head. Examination of the body found the girl had been dead yesterday with clothing disarranged had revealed evidence of criminal assault, he said.

Several Clues Followed

Detectives said they were following several clues in pursuit of the man who attacked Miss Taylor. They were checking the origin and ownership of a monogrammed handkerchief. A close check was also being made on cleaning establishments throughout the city in the possibility the murderer had attempted to have the bloodstains removed from his clothing.

The father of the missing Newman girl told detectives she had visited her home last Thursday, her day off, and had then left for a dance hall with the intention of returning to her quarters at Government House afterwards. Her father said she seemed in good spirits and asked him to call on her at Government House Friday night.

Fails to Appear

He was notified by telephone his daughter had failed to report for work. Mr. Newman said the girl would have to pass a dimly-lighted street on her way home from the dance to Chorley Park.

Police ticker tapes carried a full description of the girl today and all officers were watching for traces of her.

Mrs. Newman said she had received a letter on hotel stationery purporting to have come from her daughter, but it was a worthless scra... which gave no clue always (Continued on page seven)

PARENTS GIVEN RIGHT

Mexico City, Nov. 6.—(AP) —Silvano Barba Gonzales, Secretary of the Interior stated in an open letter to Roman Catholics today the Government considered unjustified the recent arguments by the Catholic Episcopate for restoration of the right of the church to hold property and to impart religious education.

Barba Gonzales made this declaration in the name of President Cardenas in reply to the Catholic Episcopate's recent appeal for modification of the Mexican laws requiring religious worship and social education.

'Taste Buds' on Tongue, in Cheeks, Even in Tonsils Declares Doctor

Chicago, Nov. 5.—(AP)—That childhood memory of how castor oil was explained today by science.

The explanation cleared junior of the old, old charge he was "having tantrums" when he cried for lollipops.

It said freed Grandma of being termed "just funny" when she nibbled at kisses at her meals.

"Taste Buds"—not bumps nor Grandma—were to blame. Prof. Leslie B. Alez, Northwestern University Anatomist, said in commenting on his action of the tongue and location in the Anatomical Record.

The location of buds is due to the fact the "Buds" which carry the sense of taste from the mouth to the brain, must extend from the nerve system decrease in number with age, the professor explained.

Mumsy's taste for sour pickles probably could be accounted for by existence of "Buds" not only on the tongue but on his cheeks and sometimes even his tonsils, Professor Alez said.

W. S. MACDIARMID WIDELY MOURNED

News of Death of Former Journalist And Writer Shock to Citizens

News of the sudden death of Walter Scott Macdiarmid at his home in Los Angeles, California, came in a letter today from his son Bruce to Mr. Hoss McGinnis, a lifelong friend of Mr. Macdiarmid. Though his death occurred a week ago Sunday this was the first intimation which had reached Belleville of the tragedy. His son states that his death was so sudden and unexpected as well as his illness, that it was a shock from which they were only beginning to recover. The funeral was held a week ago yesterday.

Death was due to hardening of the arteries, Bruce writes, and he had retired in seeming normal health at night and was found at six o'clock in the morning with a feeling of illness. He got up, dressed and sat down the room for a few minutes when he suddenly toppled over. He was dead before his father who had gone to the kitchen to bring him a glass of water could return to him. He apparently suffered no particular pain.

He was buried on a gently sloping hill in beautiful Forest Lawn Cemetery, at his back the rugged mountains of the Sierra Madre Mountains, facing him a few miles westward the Pacific crosts its ageless song. I like to compare his final resting place to that of Robert Louis Stevenson on the island of Samoa. Mother is in the parlor, home from the sea and the hunter home from the hill," said his son.

In another piece in the letter the son says, "Although he wrote glowingly of Belleville, because I read between the lines, I always knew that his heart was ever near the Bay of Quinte in the Belleville he loved as well."

Born in Belleville a little over sixty years ago, Mr. Macdiarmid was associated with The Daily Ontario and Weekly Chronicle for many years. It was there he developed his inimitable style of cleverness and sense of humor to the highest (Continued on page two)

MUNITION TRAIN BLOWN TO PIECES

Italian Bombs Kill 500 of Escort And Hamper Black Army

Rome, Nov. 5 (CP) — Italian planes today bombed and destroyed a munition caravan enroute from British Somaliland to Harar, killing 500 men of the caravan's escort, according to reports reaching here.

The caravan was loaded with hundreds of tons of arms, ammunition and petroleum.

In addition to destroying the caravan and annihilating most of its guard, the report added, the air bombers systematically bombed every bridge and gulley along the line of the caravan's march.

Reports published in the Popolo di Roma today state this Italian air exploit will seriously and perhaps even vitally affect the forces of Ras Nasibu for whom the munitions shipment was destined.

It is said after news of this disaster which represented the first real large scale action from the air since the outbreak of hostilities the Ethiopian concentrations in Harar and Jijiga began planning to leave in the belief those two points had become too vulnerable.

Ras Nasibu is reported to have approached the French consul at Dirdawa, French military town, for permission to bring his troops into that city. The French consul, it is said, advised against such a move, pointing out Dirdawa is regarded as a neutral international railway centre on the Addis Ababa-Djibouti line.

REPORT ATTEMPT ON NEGUS' LIFE

Caravan Brings Rumor of Finding of Bomb

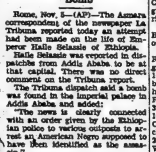
Rome, Nov. 5—(AP)—The Asmara correspondent of the newspaper La Tribuna reported today an attempt had been made on the life of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

Haile Selassie was reported in dispatches from Addis Ababa to be in that capital. There was no direct comment on the Tribuna report.

The Tribuna dispatch said a bomb was found in the imperial palace in Addis Ababa, and added:

"The news is clearly connected with an order given by the Ethiopian police to various outposts to arrest an American negro supposed to have been identified as the assassin."



The report was stated to have been received at Asmara by caravan from the border and also from Djibouti.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 5—(AP)— Winter tempered its attack on quake-stricken Helena today but the earth continued to tremble beneath the wrecked city's feet.

Every half-hour three or four seconds in duration kept Helena on edge last night and early today and were felt distinctly at Butte, Livingston and Great Falls.

STOP THAT COLD in a hurry!

TAKE Grove's BROMO QUININE

It's not a sign of weakness or of willpower to let a cold run its course. Don't neglect a cold in any way at all. Even a slight cold can take hold quickly and dangerously. That's why the safe thing to do when you catch cold is to resort to fast relief. Take Grove's Bromo Quinine at the very first sign of trouble.

Grove's Bromo Quinine does the four necessary things to attack and break up a cold at the source of the trouble—

1. It opens the bowels gently but effectively.
2. It combats the cold germs and fever in the system.
3. It relieves the headache and "grippy" feeling.
4. It tones up the system and helps Nature restore healthful conditions.

This is the kind of treatment a cold requires. Keeping bed handy at all times for the prompt use and treatment of colds. At the first sign of a chill or sneeze, get Grove's.

Every druggist has Grove's — but make sure you get the Grove's Bromo Quinine when you purchase.

New Madoc Residents Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Whitmarsh, newly arrived residents of Madoc were honored by their pal Pythian Sisters in Actinolite with a surprise party on Wednesday evening with beautiful bridge lamp and a leather chair as gifts. The following address was read by Mrs. M. Price and the presentations were made by Mrs. W. Keeler and Mrs. T. Kleinsteiber.

Dear friends—

It was with sincere regret that we learned of your impending departure from our midst. We know this was not of your choosing and had it not been for the closing of the railway and your transfer to another position, we might have had you among us for many years.

We shall miss you all from our village. You have been good neighbors and friends to many of us. You have always been ready to help along every church and community work. Your time and talents have been freely given and your departure will leave a gap that will not easily be filled. We realize that our loss will be some other community's gain and we know that you will make good friends and be helpful in some other church and place.

Our earnest hope is that where ever you go, success will be your portion. You take with you the good wishes of all of us and we deserve to take that assurance. We express our hearty appreciation of all that you have meant to us our community during the many years that you have lived among us.

It is with pleasure that we present to you this lamp and this club bag as tokens of our regard and our hope that they will often remind you of good times spent among us.

Signed on behalf of your friends, Mrs. W. Keller, Mrs. Theo. Kleinsteiber, Mrs. T. Kleinsteiber.

'Be Your Age' is Really Meant When You Seek Driving Permit

Artful Dodging Alleged Against Some Female Applicants

WHY AGE NEEDED

"Be your age"—may be a still serviceable but slightly shop-worn snappy comeback among the young generation of the present time, but at the local office of the tester of car licensees in this district, the expression has literal meaning, even if it at times is not followed to the letter.

For, be it known, many of those who apply at the office for the necessary permit to drive the family car absolutely refuse to heed this admonition, but may be classed chiefly among the feminine sex who apply for their first driving permit.

Even the fact that a penalty of from one hundred dollars and costs to a person who makes a false statement of fact in application for license does not deter the occasional feminine applicant from digressing slightly when the age line of the permit is reached. Many who apply simply fill in the lines with the age which seems to come handiest to the imagination, be it five or ten years younger than the actual age has happened in the case of at least one feminine applicant.

Of conscience, but not an efficient or legal dodge, it is explained.

Now and again a new applicant will call at the office and ask for age, whereupon the officer will tactfully suggest "you shall I put in this spot?" and if there is any objection says firmly "all applicants must be examined fully before I can issue the permit, madam, and money refunded will not ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our esteem.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour into your bowels about a pint of liquid bile daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sick and miserable. Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get them. See if they don't make all the difference in the world to you. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. ## WORTHY OF HIGHEST PRAISE

Belleville Kiwanis Club can look back with justifiable pride upon the success of its year which has just come to an end. The past twelvemonth has been the most eventful year in its history in interest in the club membership and in undertakings of a philanthropic character. Reports, presented at the weekly luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel, were proof that local Kiwanians are living up to the high ideals of the organization and are achieving those very aims and objects for which such a club exists.

The recent carnival in the arena is an instance of the loyalty of the club members and of their indefatigable efforts and shrewd business perception. To Alderman Frank Domenico, chairman of the carnival, Clifford Barragar, president of the club, and George Lee, campaign manager, the three who built up the carnival machinery which carried through to a most satisfactory conclusion, must go the major praise for the successful outcome, rich in satisfaction and financial returns which the club will use for its charitable work along the lines of Y.O.N. service, playgrounds entertainment, work of all descriptions, sports encouragement and many other purposes. They received wholehearted support from the committees and the individual members. The efficient organization they set in motion to carry through the carnival began work on August 1st with a staff of eight girls who have been busy ever since and wound up with the great October carnival fete. Their undertaking gave jobs to twenty-five unemployed men for two weeks before the grand carnival. What their expenditures in postage, and in other expenses may easily be realized. So the Kiwanians through their enthusiasm and zeal for the work that falls within their province not only brought prizes to many, but contributed to the expansion of business and the help of industry. Success exceeded expectation. So great has it been that the executive has received many requests from far and near for information as to the methods utilized.

The club went out and brought to Belleville Belleville of its finest type.

The Club's reputation has been high but it has risen through its latest achievement. Fifteen thousand persons attended the three nights of the carnival and 4000 children from the schools took advantage of the free program one afternoon.

In putting over this great effort, the three Kiwanian officials with the committees have accomplished what is worthy of emulation. It is a proud record which will not soon be forgotten.

The Kiwanians their every effort. From all sides have come encomiums on the manner in which the contests for the seven thousand dollars worth of prizes were managed.

Belleville Kiwanians know the pulse of the community. They realize the local needs and work to satisfy these needs.

Week reports of such activities continued to be read to the members, Kiwanians rightly felt a glow of satisfaction in having made the year 1935 outstanding to Kiwanian effort.

GEOGRAPHY ROMANTIC

The schoolboy who wishes that geography were dropped out of his studies has a long way to go. Even if he attends the university he will find geography taught there. At least Toronto University has founded a chair to that subject.

Geography is hard for the youngster but it is full of romance once he gets by the initial stage. It opens up the world which may travel but which is accessible through its study.

Never was there a time when the subject deserved study more than today. With a rush the nations of the world are coming up and the outlandish places become known to fame. The more desolate the spot the more the appeal will centre on that until it yields its secret of interest. As for the present interest in Ethiopia, it is a safe venture to say that only a few had a faint idea where Ethiopia was until the war clouds began to hover o'er the country.

Geography has a depth of interest like history. It is history in the present. It covers more than history. It really can be made to take in the subject of the life of mankind wherever he dwells. With exploration going on apace geography is not only related to the present but to the past which archeology explores. It has relation to the science of biology and botany as well as to anthropology.

The boy who does not like his geography lesson does not of course realize its value. It is an inexhaustible subject. Its implications face one from the cradle to the grave. Even a child can tell where the orange came from and some one would have to know a little geography to answer.

What a poor idea as to where the epicentre of the recent earthquake was must be held by the man or the boy who does not know something about Ontario or Quebec boundary. In fact his knowledge in that regard must be less than that of a child who has never been taught at home and has not yet started to school.

THE PAINTER

You climb a steep and creaking stair
Where smells of grease and smoke
Lie on the dull and stagnant air.
You climb and cough and choke.

Still up and up until at last
An attic door you face,
With that grim barrier safely passed
You gain the sacred place.

So bleak, so bare it well might seem
Your quest is all in vain;
This room, can it house glory's dream
Yet scarce keep out the rain?

The painter stands with spotted smock,
Tossed hair and absent eye;
But at all these the splendors mock
That on his palette lie.

The splendors that will blossom soon
In wave and sky and field
Will give a sheen and creaking stair
And genius stands revealed.

FIVE HUNDRED CHILDREN OF BELLEVILLE AND VICINITY have had specialist medical treatment because of the interest taken in their welfare by Belleville Rotarians. These included crippled children and children needing tonsil and adenoid treatments. These children have been started on the way to better citizenship and happiness brought into their lives with better health. Rotarians have largely financed this work from their own pockets, although it is a work in which the whole community would gladly share. Now a much more ambitious campaign is on in behalf of the crippled children of the entire district and those privileged to help will certainly not lack the rich blessing which comes to those who help "those of whom the Master said: OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF GOD. Rotarians are planning to publish a Rotary edition of this newspaper in which the work will be graphically described—also there will be a Rotary Day which promises pleasing surprises.

WHY POETS STARVE

When the English tongue we speak,
Why is "break" not rhymed with "freak"?
Will you tell me why sea's true,
We say "sew," but likewise "few,"
And the maker of verse
Cannot cap his "horse" with "worse"?
"Beard" sounds not the same as "heard";
"Cord" is different from "word";
"Cow" is cow, but "low" is low;
"Shoe" is never rhymed with "foe."
Think of "dose" and "rose" and "lose,"
And of "goose" and yet of "choose,"
Think of "comb" and "tomb" and "bomb,"
"Doll" and "roll" and "home" and "some,"
And since "pay" is rhymed with "say,"
Why not "paid" with "said," I pray?

THE ART OF GETTING ALONG

A WISE MAN HAS WRITTEN DOWN THE FOLLOWING MAXIMS which might well be termed a prescription for happiness:

Sooner or later, a man if he is wise, discovers that business life is a mixture of good days and bad, victory and defeat, give and take.

He learns that it doesn't pay to be a sensitive soul—that he should let some things go over his head like water off a duck's back.

He learns that he who loses his temper usually loses.

He learns that all men have burnt toast for breakfast now and then and that he shouldn't take the other fellow's grouch too seriously.

He learns that carrying a chip on his shoulder is the easiest way to get into a fight.

He learns that the quickest way to be come unpopular is to carry tales and gossip about others.

He learns that it doesn't matter so much who gets the credit so long as the business shows a profit.

He learns that buck passing always turns out to be a boomerang, and that it never pays.

He comes to realize that the business could run along perfectly well without him.

He learns that most of the other fellows are as ambitious as he is, that they have brains that are as good or better, and that hard work and not cleverness is the secret of success.

KIWANIS CLUB WINDS UP YEAR OF FINE EFFORT

Encouraging Reports Are Presented at Annual Meeting

Annual financial reports, the election of officers and the closing of the fiscal year's business constituted the work of the local Kiwanis Club at their weekly meeting yesterday. Reports regarding the progress of their annual Karnival and draw was also made, all showing the club enjoyed its most successful year from every viewpoint. An increase in membership as well as a substantial bank balance were all shown by Secretary George Griffin in his financial reports.

The election of officers for the ensuing year saw the following elected to positions of Kiwanis direction for the ensuing term. Albert Boynton, Gordon Bray, Frank Domenico, Herb Bon, Geo. Forbes, Joe Imiah, Ed Logan, "Mac" McLaurin, Jack McIntosh and Geo. Griffin. From the above elected board of directors the 1936 president of Belleville Kiwanis will subsequently be chosen and installed into office. Immediately upon the announcement of the newly elected board of directors, however Cliff Barragar requested a joint meeting of the 1935 and '36 boards to convene in the near future for the late plans for the club's future activities.

The report of Kiwanian Chester Smith, in relationship to the club's recent Karnival, was a brief, proved most satisfactory in all phases. It was announced that 15,000 paid admissions attended the Karnival at the Arena, including 4000 children, who were entertained the year before at the Regalia. The 1935 Kiwanis Karnival proved the most successful venture ever attempted by the local club and also the most profits in the matter of finances. Reports from the various games and wheels, that operated during the Karnival, also showed a decided increase over previous years. Following Kiwanian Smith's report it was suggested that the Arena be used as the home for future Karnivals to be staged by the club in other years.

As the successful candidates for election to the board of directors were announced each newly elected director personally thanked the club members for the honors bestowed upon him, and assured them of offering efforts towards the uplift of the club. Kiwanian Frank Forbes urged that something should be done to centralize a mammoth Hallowe'en party sponsored by the united efforts of all local service clubs. "Its behind the service clubs hold a monster public Hallowe'en party," Kiwanian Forbes pointed out the local Y's Men's Club were attempting to stage a party along those lines, but doubtlessly a concerted effort made by all service clubs would be more successful, besides reducing to a minimum the destruction of local property now concerned.

Kiwanian Rev. William McIlory of Toronto, gave a short talk on the value of the interest of municipal advancement through Kiwanis. President Cliff Barragar terminated the meeting by reminding all members of the inter-club meeting to be held in Kingston next Tuesday evening. It is intended that plans to organize an all-Kiwanis district league shall be completed there.

Montreal, Nov. 6 (CP)—A mysterious telephone call from her 11-year-old daughter, demanding $2,000 ransom has been received Tuesday by Mrs. W. Bell, mother of Miss Eileen Kernan, Montreal high school student snatched from the street, she said, by an unknown man and bundled into a motor car beside her companion, Jean Watters.

Mrs. Kernan said she answered the telephone when she was told the girl said "in the Savoy Hotel" but was unable to tell her exactly where the hotel was located. Somebody else then spoke to her over the other end.

DOMINION LOAN SOON TAKEN UP

Three Hours After Opening Loan is Doubly Oversubscribed

Ottawa, Nov. 6 (CP)—Setting a new record for low cost government financing in Canada, the Dominion Government's $75,000,000 bond issue was quickly absorbed by investors. Three hours after the subscription books were opened the issue was oversubscribed more than twice.

Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, said it was "one of the most successful loan flotations in the Dominion's history". It was the first major financial operation of the King Government.

Mr. Dunning said the prices obtained 99.43 for the short-term two per cent. bonds and 98.75 for the long term three per cent. bonds represented a lower cost to the government than in the case of any previous loan of comparative maturity. The yield on the short term is 2.15 per cent and on the long term 3.08 per cent.

"A remarkable expression of confidence in their country by Canadians," said Mr. Dunning. "Nothing could generate world confidence in Canada's future to the same extent as the eagerness of Canadians to demonstrate their own confidence".

"I'm still going to jail," said the court, "until he shows up with the tickets."

"I don't mind," she replied, "it's so cold outside."

Stirling and District

On the evening of October 26th a large and happy group of neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Mitchell for a surprise party and shower given in honor of Miss Nelle Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kent of Stirling, who is soon to become the bride of Mr. Walter Savage of Stirling. Nearly fifty guests gathered for the very delightful affair. The guest of honor was the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts. The early part of the evening was spent in lively community singing of old familiar airs and various kinds of card games. Later the happy couple were seated in a prominent place and an address in verse was read by Miss Phyllis Mitchell.

The address was signed on behalf of friends and neighbors by Phyllis Mitchell, Mrs. J. Mitchell, Mrs. Albert Hammond, Mrs. James Montgomery.

After a fitting response to the address was made by the honored couple a splendid lunch was served by several of the ladies present and a happy social period was brought to a close as the hour grew late. Displayed in a vast array were the many lovely gifts including cooking utensils, cutlery, leather goods and pieces of furniture.

Hallow'en Masquerade.

The banquet hall of the Stirling Community Building was filled with happy children and gay older folks who gathered to enjoy the very successful Hallow'en party given by the ladies of the Stirling Women's Institute. Gaily colored costumes of every type added to the sparkling color of the decorated hall. Tiny little old men and women scuffled about and the young men and women were children again on this night of nights in the hearts of all children. Ghosts, hobos, sailors, soldiers, pirates and beautiful ladies all had their part in the picturesque promenade of the costumed figures around the hall in the procession for the prizes for the best dressed guests in the later hours of the evening.

The very fine and carefully arranged program was opened by a chorus "O Canada" by the public school chorus under the direction of Miss Jane Moffat. Recitations were given by Shirley Montgomery, Enna Munro, Margaret Wilson, Nora Rogers and Dorothy Montgomery. These talented youngsters delighted all their friends with their excellent performances. Other numbers on the interesting program were as follows: Piano solo, Dorothy Ellis; chorus by Miss Moffat's pupils; a step dance by Findlay Scrimshaw; vocal selection by Douglas Richardson; clog dance by Jimmie Wright; reading by Miss Ernest Munro; instrumental duet by Mrs. H. Lovelond and Mr. Ray Williams; a duet by Misses Nora Rogers and Shapley; violin solo by Reg. Matheson, accompanied by Mrs. W. Rowland; solo, by Miss Betty Conley, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. W. Rowland.

At the conclusion of the fine program a procession of the costumed guests around the hall created a parade of real interest and laughter. The number of costumed guests was large and the task of judging for the prizes was left to the hands of a very capable staff of judges consisting of Mrs. Ross Wescott, Mrs. Harper Rollins and Mr. R. Tompkins. The competition was very close in most classes and the task of awarding the prizes a very difficult one. After careful deliberation the following groups were selected among the best dressed and awarded prizes for their originality and effort. Boys boy from 4 to 6 years, Gordon Ellis; boy from 6 to 8 years, Beverley Ingram; best boy, 8 to 10 years, Norman Crow; best girl, 6 to 13 years, Betty Jane Rollins, Jimmie Wright and Findlay Scrimshaw each gained prizes for their ability as dancers. A hard time contest was won by Miss Ena and David Duffin. Best comic couple, Mrs. Allan Cranston and Mrs. Allan Cranston; single comic dress, Betty Preston; best comic group prize was taken by a talented group who created a great deal of merriment as they appeared as Quintuplets and their attendants. The quintuplets were Betty Conley, Helen Bailey, Dody Cranston, Shirley Ormiston and Molly Belshaw. The part of Dr. Dafoe was enacted by Mary Pullock, and the very efficient nurses were Joan Dafoe and Margaret Mac. Following the distribution of the prizes lunch was served and later the guests enjoyed an informal dance. These fine Hallowe'en concerts and entertainments are sponsored each year by the Stirling Women's Institute for the purpose of adding joy to the children of the community on this, their very own day. As the years go by the appreciation of the children is shown by the increased attendance at this annual affair.

MRS. BELL CHOSEN W.C.A. PRESIDENT AT ANNUAL MEET

Will Fill Office Pro Tem, Association Decides

REPORTS PRESENTED

With a very representative attendance the fifty-fifth annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association was held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon with Mrs. R. J. Bell presiding in the chair. Reports of the various W.C.A. bodies were presented at the meeting and election of officers took place.

Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, was in charge of the devotional period which preceded the annual business meeting.

The activities of the past year were reviewed by Miss Louise Wallbridge, recording secretary, in her annual report which is as follows:

Recording Secretary's Report

The Women's Christian Association is a civic and undenominational organization and carries on a very important work in the city. It has at heart the interests of the Home for the Aged and the welfare of the poor of the city, and, while it has no power of management of the hospital, it is deeply interested in its welfare also.

This interest is carried out by the sending of four representatives on the Board of Governors of the hospital, Mrs. Arthur Ackerman, Mrs. Stokes, Mr. McGie, Mr. W. J. E. Graham. We know that their duties in this field are many and we wish to express to them our appreciation and thanks. The financial report of the Hospital which is received at each monthly meeting of the Board is very interesting to note that the 50th anniversary of the founding of the hospital was celebrated in June by the graduating of the nurses, with a garden party.

We are greatly indebted to our worthy President, Mrs. Bell and extend her a hearty vote of thanks for her untiring efforts in our organization, she has given a great deal of her time in this work and it would be well to follow her splendid example.

We hereby move a vote of thanks to all the other officers of the Association for their assistance in this work, including the Advisory Board which is invaluable to us for the executive of the meetings. Also to Miss Lynch as chairman of the Nominating Committee who has given a great deal of work due to the present conditions.

The association deeply regrets the passing of Mrs. Brown and Miss Charlotte May, both faithful workers on the Indigent Committee for many years.

Through the generosity of the late Mr. Roy, the Women's Christian Association of the Home received a considerable sum of money, left in his will, this is greatly appreciated.

We feel that the Women's Christian Association is a splendid organization, carrying on a much needed work in the city, and we ask for the prayers of interest and co-operation of all.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

Louise Wallbridge
Recording Secretary

In the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Imlah, the financial statement for October was read by Mrs. R. J. Bell, Mrs. G. A. Morton, corresponding secretary, gave the report of her work during the year.

The president, Mrs. R. J. Bell, in the splendid work being carried out, which it could be extended and urged that we should always to keep in mind the ideals of the women who founded the Association over fifty years ago. Mrs. Bell also expressed appreciation for the co-operation of the officers during her term of office, thanking especially Mrs. W. J. Millet, past president, for her loyal support.

Mrs. T. Mackaid, secretary-treasurer of the General Hospital read the statistical and financial report of the hospital for the preceding year.

Mr. Macleod also spoke of the hope of the Board of Governors to build in the course of a few years a fifty-bed additional wing to the hospital as this will accommodate principally a new boiler house, the total cost is estimated at seven thousand dollars, and it will be some time before the boiler building fund of $65,000 will be sufficiently increased to begin operations.

Home For The Aged

Mrs. J. F. Will, chairman of the Committee in charge of the building report of the Home for the Aged.

In presenting the annual report of the Belleville Home for the Aged for the year of 1939, Mrs. Will paid a tribute to each member of the Board for her splendid help during the past year.

This year the Home has indeed been fortunate in receiving the very generous sum of seventy-five dollars from the estate of the late Janes Roy. The Home is grateful that the estate has not been completed the exact amount of the gift is yet unknown, but it will be in the neighborhood of two thousand dollars I believe.

To all who have been faithful in sending to the Institution articles of clothing and food, we extend our sincere thanks. To the Doctors of the city who have given their time and services in caring for the inmates of the Home, and also to the visiting clergy who have held services each week of the year, we express our gratitude and the appreciation of the Old People.

To the members of the Junior Auxiliary, Chapter I.O.D.E. of the city, who have as in former years contributed generously, giving teacups and cookies twice a month to each inmate we extend our thanks.

To the Girl Guides of the City we express our thanks for the Christmas tree, gifts, and delightful entertainment for the Old People.

During the year we lost by death one inmate, Mr. Morgan, two were discharged for ill behavior and one sent to the Sanitorium for Tuberculosis.

At the present time there are eleven male inmates at the home.

A tremendous amount felt loss to the institution and the board of management in the resignation of Mrs. R. J. Bell, much loved president of the W.C.A. Words fail to express the regret felt by the board at the necessity of this action.

Mrs. Palmer, as matron, with the assistance of her husband Mr. Palmer, is still carrying on efficiently, and those under her charge are happy and appreciate the care given them by her. The board of management extend best wishes to Hank for her making this Home a real one.

Mrs. Will's report is respectfully submitted by

H. M. Purdy
Chairman Board of Management Belleville Home For The Aged.

Mrs. Wills also read the financial report for the Home.

Miss Helena Lynch, convener of the Indigent Committee gave interesting statistics of work during the year. At Christmas time 250 hampers were donated from different organizations and churches, 468 food slips distributed, 106 families received fuel through the Derby bequest, $146.71 in clothes and $68.00 in groceries, 1,000 pounds of 468 1-2 yds of flannelette and 679 yds of cotton were distributed during the year, while $213.27 was used out of the Emergency Fund.

Miss Lynch reported that the Indigent committee, according to wards, carried on investigations, succeeding the former practice of visiting the homes. The Junior neighborhood was advocated by Miss Lynch and agreed with the favor of the members.

We ask you to dedicate its use to the service of our country and to commemorate our membership in so great a fraternity as the British Empire, wherever the occasion may arise, and we trust and pray that you will extend our hope and respect it as a token of our liberty and freedom.

Board Room Gossip

The large amount of money seeking investment which is indicated by the fact that the Dominion Bond issue of $40,000,000 carried on Monday was over-subscribed within three hours, is also Mr. Dunning states: "This is a remarkable expression of confidence in their country on the Canadian. Nothing could generate world confidence in Canada in a future to the same extent as the eagerness by Canadians to demonstrate their own confidence."

It is this confidence that has been finding an outlet in the stock market. The manner in which sentiment has changed is very heartening as it is based on the improving business and is thus based on solid foundation.

"A security market" is in the making, for, according to a Stock Exchange authorities, never have there been fewer odd-lots on the books of brokers, states the Trader in Finance. The financial community has been brought about primarily by the $200 regulations, which restrict the play of speculative interests and harass the market. Insiders are now prohibited from operating in the stock market, and where huge profits are available they are restricted to liquidate because of the huge tax levy involved. Such restrictions are all right, however, represents a double-edged sword, and there is no question but adverse development might find bids so scarce as to produce a sellers' market.

Another factor that has made for the unprecedented small floating supply of stocks has been the heavy absorption of stocks by Europe just before and since the war scare. Then again, investment trusts, especially those which through the years have built up large cash funds, can steadily augment their capital account, have continued to buy. And with undercurrent of inflation, Canadian securities have for weeks been steadily liquidating all hard portfolios and refinancing the bulk of the proceeds in common stock.

London has been a heavy buyer of Brazilian, Canadian and C.P.R. the past few days. It happens quite often that such buying finds its more appreciation on the part of Canadians for their own securities.

Depression in Highway and Crown on Road are Stressed Manslaughter Case In Napanee

Trial of Edward C. O'Brien Likely to Conclude Today

CAR SPEED ESTIMATED

One Witness Sees Children Playing On Side-walk

Napanee, Nov. 6 (Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)—Great importance was stressed as to the existence of a high crown on Dundas Street and a depression in the highway, some feet, westerly from where the accident took place, which resulted in the death of Billy McGrear, and for which death, Edward C. O'Brien of Belleville stands charged with manslaughter.

Practically all the witnesses, resident in Napanee, submitted to cross examination by Charles A. Payne, K.C., who is conducting the defence, that the crown does not to the south curb and a depression, did exist. The evidence at the afternoon session of Tuesday, described in detail the movements of the car and the estimated rate of speed.

Mr. Justice Jeffrey decided that it would be impossible to conclude the case but that he could hear all the evidence possible before adjournment, thereby making it quite solicitous about the health of the court, complaining many times, that its the case drags on, time wore and poorly ventilated. At one stage of the proceedings, Mr. Justice Jeffrey ordered the court cleared and all windows opened, while the court stood adjourned.

Rode in Front Seat

At the afternoon session of the court on Tuesday the first witness called was Mr. Bowers, the other passenger in the car. Mr. Allore who is known as the Belvidere Hotel, in Belleville, stated he knew both O'Brien and Deacon, and that he entered the car in front of the hotel about noon. His evidence corroborated that of Deacon, insofar as the principal items were concerned. He said a couple of Shannonville and having some beer. "I went to make myself understood," said the witness. "I had been drinking heavily the night before and was drinking in the morning. After I left Shannonville I went to sleep and do not remember anything until I was being brought back from Kingston by the officers."

"Was there liquor in the car?" "Yes, I had a bottle in my pocket." "This bottle was produced in court and placed as exhibit.

"Who bought the bottle?"

"O'Brien on my order."

"Did you see O'Brien take a drink at anytime on March 29th?"

"Only at Shannonville."

"When was the bottle taken from you?"

"I don't know."

His Lordship: "You were pretty drunk," and there was laughter in the court.

"Did you have a drink between Belleville and Shannonville?"

"Yes."

"Do you say to your knowledge whether O'Brien had a drink that day and you in your condition?"

"I don't think so."

Told to Slip Down

"Do you know, what happened at Shannonville that you were told?" Mr. Allore went to answer and then hesitated and sternly "slow down."

John McDonald, proprietor of the hotel at Shannonville, stated the car O'Brien in his beverage room on the day of the accident and that he served him with a bottle of beer, which was only partly consumed.

"What was the condition of O'Brien?"

"He was sober as far as I know."

"What was the condition of Allore?"

"When he got up, he appeared not sober."

His Lordship: "You know you are liable when you serve a man when intoxicated" and your answer will be, "I did not know he was drunk until he got up."

To Mr. Payne, the witness stated O'Brien lived at his hotel for a few a year and he had never seen him take a drink.

Attracted by Noise

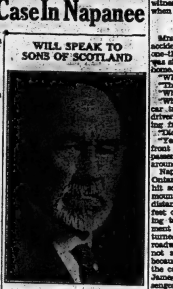
William Shaver, resident on Dundas Street in Napanee, was a witness of the accident. He stated he was standing on his verandah, when a car drove in sight from the west. I turned my back and heard the brakes grind and looking again I saw the car mounting the curb near McGreer's residence, travel along the sidewalk and then back on the highway, where it came to a full stop. I thought the car was going south on Richard Street but later went on east.



"What was the speed of the car?"

I am not an expert but I would say the car was going 40 M.P.H.

"Did you see anyone on south sidewalk?"

"No, but later I saw someone pick up something, which appeared to be a bundle."

"What was a depression in highway on March 29th?"

JOHN A. FERGUSON M.A., M.D.
Grand Chief of Sons of Scotland Ben. Ass., a native Belleville, now of Belleville today, who will address the members of Caunda Nest No. 43 at tonight's meeting in Oddfellows' Hall on Front Street.

WILL SPEAK TO SONS OF SCOTLAND

ROBERT LEWIS
Grand Secretary Sons of Scotland Ben. Ass., who is visiting the district today and will also be one of the principal speakers at tonight's meeting.

"Yes a considerable one and it would give a car a little flip."

"Did it over effect your driving?"

"I knew I was in a depression."

Mr. Shaver, admitted to Mr. Payne that it appeared the brakes were suddenly applied shortly after the depression.

"It is not hard to estimate the speed of the car when it is approaching."

"Yes", said the witness.

Resident Saw Car

William H. Dibb, of Napanee, was not an eye witness but was sitting in the front of his home when he heard tires screeching on the pavement and running out saw the car sliding practically in the intersection of Dundas and Bridge to the east of my home.

"Was it stopped?"

" Not exactly."

"What was the speed of the car?"

"It was rapidly away."

"What did you see?"

"I saw a child playing on the side-walk," straight across with his head to the south. When I reached the scene, his mother was picking him up and she handed him to me and I carried him into the McGreer home.

Dundas Street crowded?

"Yes," and on the south side there is a distinct crown.

"Do you drive a car?"

"Yes," and that there would be no effect driving down the centre nor the right if driving at a moderate speed, but would not have in a slight throw. The witness admitted having noticed depression in the highway and a slight jar would be felt driving through it.

In cross examination, Mr. Dibb admitted, that a person travelling close to the north curb on Dundas street would feel a perceptible jar in driving over the crown of the road.

"You did not see the car and your estimation of speed is only by the sound it made?" asked Mr. Payne.

"That is right."

Car Out of Control

Fred Huffman, at the time of the accident was going to his lunch. He was the next witness and stated in the court he was walking on the south side of Dundas Street, when he noticed a car coming east approximately out of control.

"What was the course?"

"The car ran down the car went up on the boulevard and near the point I noticed three boys on the sidewalk, two were sitting and one lying on the sidewalk."

"Where were the front wheels?"

"On the pavement," said the witness.

"That is the way it appeared to me."

Mrs. Laura MacKenzie corroborated the evidence as to the course of the car given by other witnesses and the witness was sure the automobile turned around and when it came to rest it was on an angle opposite to Dundas street.

"Did you see the occupants?"

"Yes, there were three."

"What was the rate of speed?"

"The acceleration was rapid."

In answer to a question by Mr. Payne, Mrs. MacKenzie said she first saw the car in the middle of the highway. Again Mr. Payne stressed the importance of the hump, and the depression and the witness agreed, there was a hump, when riding in the car.

Gives Time of Accident

Mrs. Arthur Horton, stated the accident happened between one and one-thirty in the afternoon, as she was sitting in the front room of my home.

"What drew your attention?"

"The screeching of brakes."

"What did you see?"

"When I went outside, I saw a car trying to be righted by the driver. The car seemed to be swerving from side to side."

"Did you observe the occupants?"

"Yes, there were three in the front seat and I noticed as if the car turned a complete circle on the roadway before stopping, and I did not see anyone on the boulevard because I dashed my head down like car went up on the curb" said James Deacon of Belleville, a passenger in the car driven by Edward O. O'Brien, also of Belleville, charged with manslaughter when he is appearing before His Lordship Mr. Justice Hoel Jeffrey at Napanee in the county court house, presided by Charles A. Payne, K.C., of Belleville while the Crown Attorney is conducted by A. H. Sills, of Toronto, assisted by Wallace Nesbitt, Crown Attorney of Lennox-Addington.

Considerable time was need at the morning session before Mr. Payne. Mr. Payne challenging nine, while Mr. Silk asked sixteen to stand aside.

Jury Selected

No resident of Napanee was selected on the jury which is composed of D. Fuller, Ernestown; Fred Instand, Fredericksburg, Hugh Campbell, Camden East; Harold Camden, Percy Yeomans, Camden, Roy Bonesteel, Fredericksburg; Ross Hallston, Jr., Fredericksburg, Harold McGee, Adolphustown, George Purcell, Camden East; Harry Hepburn, Ernestown, Frank N. Hann, Fredericksburg, John Wallbridge, Sidney.

W. R. McGregor was the first witness called in stating the age of the child and remarked that the child was in normal health.

Chief Constable Wells of Napanee was the first main witness to be examined in order to answer to a question by the prosecutor, stated he was called to the scene of the accident, measurements and marks, had pictures taken and sketch of the scene prepared, also to scale. The first photograph was a picture of the wide road and also the point at which the automobile went over the curb on the boulevard. It was noticed on the curb a spot of blood was noticed on the curb. Other photographs showed the skid marks were shown more pronounced, they being covered with sand. Other photographs showed shots were also put in as exhibits, showing the course of the car driven by O'Brien in different positions. The position of the car in question, a 1932 Chevrolet sedan was produced, it having been towed to Napanee garage by sergeant Armstrong of the Kingston O.P.P. detachment. Evidence in reference in O'Brien's name was also put in as an exhibit.

Witness marks you found on boulevard and roadway?" asked the Prosecutor.

"First mark on the roadway started four to six feet west of the McGreer driveway."

"How far did it continue eastward?"

"Forty feet with spaces in between. Marks made the distance in width.

"How were the marks made?"

"I believe by a motor vehicle."

Marks on Roadway

The witness then described two other marks on the roadway east of the boulevard, one on the south of the curb, which continued for 39 feet.

"How far was the mark on the boulevard?"

"About four feet."

"How far was the mark on the boulevard from the point on the sidewalk?"

"Fifty-eight, seven inches, in westerly direction."

Depression in Highway

Cross examined by Mr. Payne, it was brought out there was a depression in the roadway, but not at where the car is said to have mounted the curb, approximately nine feet from north to south and eight feet from east to west with the depth in some places more than three inches.

"Was the road in this point?" asked Mr. Payne.

"Yes, a distinct depression been taken out?"

"Yes, about a month ago."

"Did the car raise from the highway after hitting this depression?"

"The car did not rise, but went up a foot and one half between the curbs."

"Is there a hump at intersection of Donald and Dundas Street?"

"Yes."

"Is the hump west of the depression?"

"Yes."

"How far was the curb above the accumulation of snow and ice?"

"About four inches."

Is that accurate?"

"Only an estimate."

Photographs Identified

Mr. W. Stitch, photographer, of Napanee, identified two photos placed in the exhibits as having been taken by himself and reproduced the actual scene of the fatality. His evidence was quite short with no cross examination by Mr. Payne. The defence counsel several times objected to the leading question put by the Crown prosecutor and was upheld in his contention by His Lordship.

Milton Crouch, Kingston, Ontario, land surveyor, testified, that he prepared a plan of the scene of the fatality which was admitted into court. The plan showed the width of the roadway at 28 feet with a boulevard of two feet, four inches and the cement sidewalk is 4 feet, 8 inches.

"How far is the distance from the McGreer residence east to where the spot of blood was seen on the sidewalk?"

Sixty feet three inches", said Mr. Crouch.

"How far from where the car mounted curb to the spot of blood?"

Fifty-eight feet".

What is the total distance from where car mounted curb until it finally reached the highway?"

Seventy-seven feet".

What is the height of the curb?"

Four inches."

His Lordship—"Was there an accumulation of ice and snow near the curb?"

"No sir."

"You are sure? said Mr. Justice Jeffrey.

"Positively", said the witness.

In cross examination, Mr. Crouch told Mr. Payne there were no skid marks on the sidewalk at any point. Considerable time was spent in exactly locating the depression which was situated on the roadway west of the accident.

Cause of Death

Dr. Duffet, of Napanee, described the injuries, which caused death, stating on his arrival at the scene, the boy was dying and was dead in about a minute. The physician in his opinion death was caused by a fracture at the base of the skull, expressing the opinion, that the fracture was caused from the jaw, which was fractured, being him heavily to the pavement.

Mr. Payne spent some time in showing there was no skid marks at the intersection of Donald and Dundas street and that a car travelling at a moderate rate of speed could be thrown to the air. The witness said, that would be the car was travelling at a fast rate of speed.

James Deacon, Belleville, and a passenger in the car alleged to have struck "Billy" McGrear, stated he was sitting in the Belvidere Hotel on 10.30 a.m. on March 29th, and with Mr. Walter Allore, made arrangements to go to Kingston.

"Did you start for Kingston?"

"Yes about 11."

"Did you stop?"

"Yes at McDonald's Hotel, Shannonville where we had a bottle of beer."

"Did all drink?"

"Yes, but only part of a bottle".

"Who was driving?"

"O'Brien."

"Where were you sitting?"

"All three in front seat."

"All three of us were in the front seat with myself in the centre."

"What happened in Napanee?"

"I was some bumps and the car went out of control, for a distance of sixty to seventy feet travelling on the boulevard."

"What was your speed?"

"Not fast because car was out of control. Finally the car stopped close to the intersection on the roadway facing Bridge Street

"Steady there, Judy," Ted Hoyt's at the temples where the light voice was quiet, but it broke slightly, as Judy raised her white, drawn face, and tried to look at him through the blur of tears filming her thick lashes.

"Ted," she said faintly.

"Yes, Judy. I've been following you. I was scared. For weeks you've been slowly going to pieces. I.... I was afraid for you."

"Oh." No emotion. No more hysteria. Not even tears. Simply dead, lifeless defeat.

"Now," Ted said matter-of-factly, "I'm driving you to your rooms, Judy, to pack your luggage, and then I'm driving you down to Maryland. You're going to take over that brunch coffee job I've been offered, and see if you can't get a new grip on yourself."

"Yes," Judy agreed dully; "all right, Ted."

He glanced at her queerly.

"Judy.... Judy!" sharply, in swift alarm. "Judy,.... are you all right?"

She had slumped down in the seat of the roadster, before he could shut the door and get in behind the wheel. She had slumped down in a dead faint.

CHAPTER 28.

SUDYE'S COLLAPSE

Ted's face was haggard and gray as he roared his roadster up to the front door of a private hospital across town, and his hands shook as he yanked open the door, and picked Judy up, and ran, stumbling, staggering, up the steep steps, through the door.

"Get Dr. Rennselaer, quick!" he shouted at astonished nurses, and at the house doctor! Bring some nurses! Hurry, hurry!"

He rushed into the first open door he came to, and laid Judy tenderly down on the bed, and began struggling with the laces to her trim oxfords.

"Let me, Mr. Hoyt," the head-nurse said respectfully, and Ted stepped back, mopping the streaming perspiration from his face.

"Why doesn't that doctor get here?" he fretted. "What's keeping him?"

The head-nurse remembered another occasion when she had seen this same distinguished engineer go through a two-hour Geihsmann while surgeons injected fluid into a collapsed lung, after a grim siege with pneumonia, without making a sound. She knew he had suffered agonies, without complaint. And now he was running a temperature because a girl had fainted!

"When did you hit her, Mr. Hoyt?" she asked briskly. "Have you any idea where she's hurt...., or didn't you car hit her that hard?"

Ted glared at her. He opened his mouth to speak, and Dr. Rennselaer hurried in, sans a hospital coat, still in business clothes.

"Nervous collapse," Ted began explaining to his old friend, "overwork, mental strain. Insufficient food, driven frantic so she forgot to eat, or couldn't."

"Wait in my office, Hoyt, and I'll join you, as soon as I bring her out of this," Dr. Rennselaer surgested.

Ted rebelled, visibly unwilling to leave Judy, in spite of the skill and excellence of the care being expended on her.

An hour later the doctor came in his face grave and quite bereft of the slightly amused sympathy he had cast on his barbier friend, when he had first been summoned so precipitately. He closed the door carefully, and taking off his eyeglasses, tapped them thoughtfully against the tips of his fingers, stretched out rigidly.

"You haven't told me the whole story, Hoyt. You'll have to, if we're going to help her!"

Ted jumped, and his face paled, under the dark, bronze sunburn.

"Is.... is she.... That bad?" he stammered.

"Complete nervous breakdown," Dr. Rennselaer said. "Having, out of her head. Talks all the time to Michael..... I.... Is Judy.... Judge he's her husband?"

Ted nodded. Slowly, in ragged bits, he told the whole story, ending blankly: "And now he's hit her down. Because he never learned how to take life as it came, and make the most of it. He's always reached for stars, and grabbed a fistful of at best good solid satellites."

"Rich woman?" the doctor probed quietly.

Ted nodded grimly. "Country club crowd. Turned his head. She wouldn't marry him..... and lose that allmony.... for worlds!"

"She'll sleep until that bromide wears off," the doctor went on. "After that we've got to do something. Unfortunately, it would be the worst thing to bring him back into the picture. He'd only do the same thing all over again. But.... I've seen a few of these cases, and I'm pretty certain she won't feel better until we do. If.... we can."

"We will!" Ted declared, squaring his broad shoulders as if to pick up a bigger, heavier burden. "We've got to!"

He went out, and tiptoed into the room where Judy lay, white and still under the white counterpane, one thin, blue-veined wrist between the practiced watchful fingers of a graduate nurse. Her lids were purple shadows in her white face, and the soft, coppery curls were tumbled, giving an added look of childish helplessness to her thin, small face.

Sighing, he moved the chair over closer to the bed, and sat down, his graying hair showing almost white to her! Go back with something besides empty promises. You wanted the social register on your front doorstep, and you got bill collectors breaking down your back door. They broke pretty nearly everything else worthwhile in your life, Swayne. Now try to find a little reality to bring her.....instead of installments on love!"

Ted Hoyt hunched his broad shoulders, and stalked back to his car, and Michael stared after him until his car disappeared from sight around the bend in the road. He began walking, slowly, mechanically, unsettingly, away from the girl, of course, and the foursome he seemed to have forgotten completely.

CHAPTER 29.

MICHAEL

People passing the tall, broad-shouldered young man in the beautifully tailored tweeds and the dark hair, barred to warm spring sunshine, stared curiously as their eyes encountered his grim, stricken face, and hastily made way for him, as he stalked by, bound nobody, could guess where. Hour after hour Michael tramped on, and he was unaware of the graceful, pleasant habits he had formed of late. The late, leisurely breakfast, after golf, the pleasant, comfortable luncheon, with some acquaintance Allison had rounded up as a potential client, a bonds or stocks customer. The hours at the office, the new job she had procured for him with a swank brokerage firm that paid strictly commissions, and no drawing account, because each commission was so high, so far above lesser houses.

He was thinking. Thinking as he had never thought before. Ruthlessly stripping every tinsel, glittering particle from his old life, and throwing it out.

Hoyt had been right. All he had ever given Judy was empty pecuniach. Part-time installments on their marriage. Glowing, flashing, quicksilver promises, plans that flew in a rainbow shower in every direction, and disappeared the instant you tried to pin them down with a finger of reality.

March, march, march, tramp, tramp, tramp. The thought slashed through his mind like a relentless army, invisible, but on "location." Keeping time with Michael's feet, carrying him onward, though he was unaware of his direction or destination.

It was late afternoon when weariness finally slowed his pace, and he stared blankly around him at strange, unfamiliar surroundings.

A narrow little street, a building development park, and a big sign, forty feet long, twenty wide, covered with lofty lettering, crashed through his mental confusion.

"Build your own home," the sign screamed. "Let your government finance you. We show you how." There was more—much more. But a figure, tacked into the lower corner of the sign, finally riveted Michael's attention. "Salesman wanted," it said. "Inquire at main office."

He was hungry, tired, but no longer confused, and his feet led him down the little street and into the neat little building, in brisk, determined haste.....

"About that job," he said grimly; "how much salary does it pay?"

"And commissions?" he demanded when the mild little man had named a salary better than half as much again as Judy had made; a salary Michael Swayne..... the Michael Swayne of any moment up to a few hours ago would have scorned with vigorous, insulted arrogance. "Provided I can turn in over a stated amount of business each week?"

"Yes," his potential employer agreed finally, "if you can!"

"Tomorrow morning," Michael promised. "I'll be at work; I want a contract too, in black and white!"

Bruins Will Ice Added Attacking Power To Aid Their Veteran Rearguard Huskies

Eddie Shore

Albert "Babe" Siebert

Still making the road to Troy Thompson's goal a rough one.

With what he terms "a 30 per cent stronger club than a year ago," right wing, Wellaud with his light-Manager Frank Patrick of the Boston Bruins fully expects his team to pay the Stanley Cup loans from Montreal Maroons this season.

"Balanced" was the word stressed by both Patrick and General Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins and Boston Cubs' organizations.

Courage is another great asset of the Bruins. "We have with us this year a dozen or more players who are gifted with far more than the average amount of courage," declared Mr. Patrick. "And the remainder of the squad have their normal share of it." He counts on this factor winning many close games for last year's American section champions. The fighting spirit, aggressiveness and stubborn grit of the Bruins is likely to break up overtime matches in Boston's favor, in his opinion.

1 Wellaud to Back.

A third attribute with Bruins is power. The Boston club is imbued with skating ability and rugged strength. The 1935-36 Bruins are a husky lot.

When they whipped Canadiens in St. John by a two to nil tally as they opened their pre-seasonal maritime tour it was quite apparent the Bruins would wear many an opponent down by a date bearing exhaustion this winter, then capitalize on the other team's weakness in this regard and go on to win. These big chaps with Bruins may appear oversize and lead one to think they will be slow on their skates but they have shown plenty of speed.

Bringing Ralph (Cooney) Weiland back to the club from Detroit after a few seasons' absence is one of the many moves Mr. Ross has made. Pivoting between Red Beattie, left wing, and Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, right wing, Weiland with his light-ning speed will be a tower of strength to these close to 200-pound forwards.

Cowley to Wing.

This scoring will be the number one line of the Bruins, a real power combination that adds deceptive, defensive ability to its offensive might. This combination, now that Beattie has bounced forth as a proven major leaguer, makes Ross dream of his record-scoring Clapper-Weiland-Galnor trio of several seasons ago.

Centered by the excellent forward section results of Jerry Shannon, left wing, and Max Kaminsky, centre man, Patrick is most enthusiastic about the pair this winter. With Charlie Sands in fine fettle and working harmoniously with these two, Bruins have played as fine ends in both amateur and pro company several years. I look for great team work in the N.H.L. from the second line," said Patrick.

He is growing Bill Cowley, according from St. Louis in the general shuffle disposing of the homeless Eagles, for left wing. While normally a centre, Cowley's heavy play along the left boards and alertness behind the other team's blue line have earmarked him as a comfortable star in Patrick's opinion. He flanks Jack Riley, the plink-soaked great ace who switched to Bruins from Montreal Canadiens. On Riley's right is enterprising James (Peggy) O'Neill.

Hard-Hitting Defence.

The master-minds of the Bruins balance of this attacking machine with a stalwart quartet of rear guardsmen and the brilliant net minder, Cecil (Tiny) Thompson.

Eddie Shore, the veteran in service, still retains fire and zeal. He is still the main cog in the Bruin play.

President John D. Chick to guide his colleagues in the discharge of the rules and their different interpretations.

Jack Tompkins, "Moose" Jamieson, Stan Jackson, Clarence Bush, Teddy Oke, Mickey McGuire and Jerry Goodman were expected to attend.

SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

Timmins, Ont., Nov. 6 (CP)—Woon Hong, 43, seriously wounded when slashed last night with an eight-inch knife, allegedly wielded by John Wah, 44-year-old Chinese cook, was in a critical condition today. His alleged assailant is held on a nominal charge.

Allan Cup Holders Wolverines Disband

Halifax, Nov. 6. — Halifax Wolverines, Allan Cup holders, are disbanding and passing up their right to represent Canada in the 1936 Olympic games.

The announcement came last night.

Manager Jack Conn was out of the city and could not be reached for confirmation of the report, but sportsmen active in the club said it failed to hold the team together had failed.

Conn was unable to make satisfactory financial arrangements for starting the Wolves in the Maritime Hockey League, it was said, and to add to his difficulties some of the players could not afford to leave their jobs for the Olympic trip.

And with the Wolves disbanding the M.H.L. is on the rocks, Moncton Hawks, twice winners of the Allan Cup, have broken up and there is little likelihood of the St. John and Charlottetown trying to operate a circuit.

EMPIRE GAMES DOWN UNDER

London, Nov. 6.—(Cable)—At a meeting of the British Empire Games Federation in London today it was unanimously decided to hold the games in 1938 in Australia. They will be held in Sydney in January of that year.

Canada, Australia, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Scotland, South Africa, Wales and Bermuda were represented at the meeting.

N. H. L. SEASON OPENS THURSDAY FOR LONG GRIND

Four Teams Start Season All Playing by Saturday

EIGHT TEAM LOOP

Nearly Every Team in Loop Has Added Playing Strength

(By A. E. Fulford)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A sport depression flicked only lightly in passing, the "fastest game in the world" and the most consistently profitable, opens a major league season tomorrow night that from this distance seems likely to be as prosperous as any.

Trimmed to a more economical eight-team unit, the National Hockey League starts its 19th season in Chicago where New York Americans and Chicago Black Hawks meet in the first of a 192-game schedule that ends about the time March should be going out like a lion.

The swing into the schedule is gradual with the other teams breaking in a short period of a week. There are single games Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday but Montreal Maroons and Boston Bruins don't see their first league service before November 16th.

With so much battling to be done before starters are decided in the two sections, the League championship decided and the championship of the world fought out in still another series, there are no favorites at this stage.

Elimination of St. Louis Eagles, bought out by the League when they failed to make profits, leaves eight teams in two divisions and under the playoff system only one of each has no chance for the world championship, when the schedule ends.

Last season Toronto Leafs, Montreal Maroons, Montreal Canadiens and New York Americans finished in that order in one division and Boston Bruins, Chicago, New York Rangers and Detroit that way in the other.

May Finish in Same Order

No one will be surprised if that happens again but welding of St. Louis players, and new material from the ranks into last season's machines leaves present strength much in doubt.

"Miracle Man" Tommy Gorman, who piloted Maroons to the world title last spring after his Chicago Blac', Hawks had won and previous season, is standing pretty pat on the team that won three straight games from Toronto Leafs, League champions, in the Stanley Cup series.

The notable exception is that the Montrealers won't have Alex Connell, veteran third string goalie, who was given a great deal of the credit for their playoff form. Connell has retired to the position of assistant secretary of Ottawa's fire department.

In his place will be Billy Beveridge, secured in the scramble for St. Louis players. Beveridge is a big measure up to Connell's brilliance is doubtful but it is true he has the added weight of a new responsibility in front of him as he has now.

Another notable disappointment at losing to Maroons didn't bring any general housecleaning in Toronto. He is another standpatter. Sec Hirtes and Harold Cotton were still in the line-up when the season's out otherwise Leafs are unchanged.

Canadiens Different

Canadiens are as different as any club in the League. Newsy Lalonde has passed out of the picture as manager and part owner. Sylvio Mantha, veteran defenceman, is starting his 13th season in the League, is piloting the club from the bench and dressing room honors with Ced Dutton of American fame.

Walter Buswell and Jean Pusie are a brand new defense by themselves but Mantha is starting with Lorne St. Louis to hook up with Mantha and Joe Lamb on defence.

Dutton, who succeeded Joe Simpson as manager, has been on almost overboard in search of new material, dropping two of his most dependable players, Pit Lepine and Georges Rabbit McVeigh. He is placing considerable faith in Lepine's former teammate of Sweeney Schriner. Art Chapman and Aurel Joliat and have bought Harold Cotton from Nels Stewart, formerly of Boston, to complete the front line of the experienced Himes and McVeigh.

Chicago may have to go into their opening game without Lorne Chabot their goalie, and Howie Morenz, centre on their first string line. Both are suffering from training injuries but they keep them out of the game a week.

Counting on Added Players

Jack Adams, Detroit manager, is counting on the strength he added late last season by purchase of Herbie Lewis from the Cubs to bring Detroit fans a winner they can remember from the days of Ty Cobb. He also added Pete Kelly, another Eagle star, Hec Kilrea from Toronto and Marty Barry of Boston, to the Club that finished last in their division last season.

Bill Cook probably will appear as a defenceman when the New York Rangers open at Detroit Sunday night, replacing Harold Starr, out of action with an injury. Lester Patrick will team Glen Brydson with Ron Cook and Frank Boucher on the Rangers' first line.

Boston's chief reliance in new material is on Cooney Weiland who is working with Dit Clapper and Red Beattie in a line that Patrick hopes will give Bruins some at least of the punch possessed in the Clapper-Weiland-Galnor trio that starred for them five years ago.

This week I've gotta confess I was crossed up on a couple games with the Argonauts getting Eadie. They must jest a bit too strong to take right in the Bengals home town as the Western Ontario collegians pullin a fast one by knockin off the McGill laddies. However, I'm still a-battin something over .700 since the season opened with but one turn five outs, my average has come down to fraud. Naicherly I think the game I was watching was the best thing on all. That was the Queens-Varsity argument and I'm tellin you the diffrunce between 109 yards in penalties and 30 yards of the same jest about measures the distance atween them feebalers.

As yuh all know Winnypeg alongs Regina jest as I and they would though at thet they didnt run up any fancy scores. Dopey's herns show I'm a'goin to bet 'em this week.

JIM WILKINS TO WRESTLE HERE

Katelmach And Chief Lynx Will Battle to Finish in Arena

With the assurance of two high class preliminary wrestles the completed card for Thursday night's wrestling card in the Belleville Arena was announced today. A new star, Jim Wilkins, will make his debut he afforded the fans this week when Jim Wilkins, the 180 pound wrestler, will tackle Emil Daly, the 190 pound Adonis of Newburgh, who recently won Belleville some mouths ago with success. Augmented with the latest advertisements local rromoters feel they have a splendid card and guarantee each and every one a real treat.

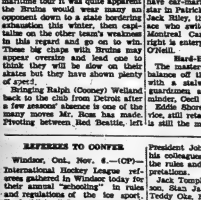
Something new in the annals of local wrestling will be introduced in the main bout of the evening with a return match between Katelmach, Winnipeg and Chief Lynx, the Rama Reserve Indian wrestler. Les Deadlye, referiials and knew exactly how to handle these situations, that ever the case during a playing season. We desire very much whether or not there will ever sufficient could handle, in such a capable and efficient manner, some of the situations that have been so successfully settled by those two men. Whether Les Deadlye or the other fishy referees to stand for office the Belleville district would never be able to retain the remaining official at any price. The local sporting committee concern has two capable and competent executive heads, or officials, in charge of the card and no doubt a good business is afloat each officials is able to handle.

The running of a league, the caliber of the O.H.A., which is the senior body in the province, is equally as responsable a business as any league, consequently we have two outstanding executive heads if there is humanly possible, to retain them?

Yesterday's rain and adverse weather conditions did not stop Belleville's local inter-city intermediate O.R.F.U. squad from holding their daily work-out at the Collegiate Campus. The locals realize they have a tough tournament ahead of them at Lindsay on Saturday, despite the fact the Scugog Big-nibs chalked up a decisive 9 to 4 lacing at the hands of the Peterboro' Crescents last week-end. Coach Kennedy has been driving his locals at top speed in hopes of victory Saturday and then later in the schedule Oshawa Blue Devils will play a home and away two game total.

In regards to the Peterboro' at Lindsay game, however, the Littlock City scribe says the Lindsay executive have decided hard, Ringland taking on all corners in fistic encounters during the dying moments, but he was accommodated in his trouble-making ventures. The Lindsay scribe has the following to say in regard to the tussle, however:

"It was a mighty disgruntled bunch of football players who returned to the dressing room after the game. They felt that they had lost a game on their own fault, not because of being any inferior to their opponents. They just didn't play the kind of team football that they are capable of playing and except for odd glimpses of the ontplay by the Petes, it was a much-needed game for Lindsay and unless Oshawa goes to Oshawa the Lindsay team, like the Belleville and Peterboro and Cobourg squads, is out."



Today the local wrestling promoters announced their preliminary or opening bout for Thursday night's wrestling card and a new face will be seen locally. Jim Wilkins, 180 of Toledo, meets Emil Daly, 190 of Newburgh. Daly appeared in a local ring-mats sprites a la prelim, and proved a crowd-pleaser with his acrobatic and wing ad-libs. He will be Wilkins' first appearance in a local ring, but the latter comes highly recommended from the country to the south. Of course the bout is being staged mainly as the Chief-Lynx-Katelmach scrap, a finished fight, with no time limit to terminate matters at any time. One of the other must be declared a winner in the main attraction, no draws or ties this time, boys. The semi-final battle pends on Walter Parnell as Walter Parnell can always be depended on to stage a battle, but in the Herculean Ali Hassan, the Terrible Turk, Parnell has a super-man's job cut and for himself Thursday night.

Here's one for Joe Cather—

Confirmed Golfer (to player who has just completed operation, but would you mind if I played through? Surgeon—Not at all, my wife has been rushed to the hospital for an operation."

The Brockville Maggodonas, last year senior "B" champions in the O.H.A., are returning to the Ottawa-Hull league in Ontario. The Maggodonas are favouring an interesting schedule with the Ottawa City Hockey League in conjunction with their own circuit. Brockville, Carleton Place, Smiths Falls and Perth, Failing to entice these three clubs into the Ottawa-Hull hockey schedule, however, the Maggodonas have decided upon and an arrangement themselves, thereby completing a six teamed Ottawa City loop.

Now, that the Halifax Wolverines have disbanded what of Canada's chances for gold in ice hockey tournament, Canada has won these honours since their inception, but the opposition has become stronger every year and is now becoming a strong contending team to represent Canada at the 1936 winter Olympics in Germany. Another the C.A.H.A. will incorporate another Dominion play-down to name a Canadian all-star team or not is still undecided.

COMMODORE—Cier G. Smith, Montreal Winged Wheeler, will be in action in the Canada Cup motor boat race at Toronto Island Nov. 9 and 10. He is shown above with his boat, which is powered by two 12-cylinder motors.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

While in conversation with Newt Thompson, secretary of the O.G.B.I., yesterday, we learned, that the annual meeting of the Central League would be held in the Ma'ress Hotel, Peterboro on Saturday, November 23rd. According to the league constitution, the annual meeting of the league must be held on the third Saturday in November, pointed out President Mac Swanston, when he was approached in regards to postponing this conclave. The election of officers, presentation of the Johnson cup to the current year's winner, the Kingston Ponies, and any changes in the constitution must be presented at this time. Now would be a good time for the Kingston executive backed by Wally Elmer of course, to table some of those ridiculous suggestions brought forward by the Ponies during the 1935 playing season, we'd suggest. At any rate it is quite doubtful if President Max Swanston will stand for re-election for a possible third term, owing to business ties. Incidentally it is to be hoped, that the more level heads of the league can persuade Prexy Swanston to remain in office as he has filled those duties to a more successful degree than any of his predecessors.

Then again Secretary Newt Thompson, who has guided the destinies of the O.G.B.I., from the secretary's desk since its birth, decade, is not at all anxious to return to office. The clubs comprising the league would make a serious mistake in allowing both President Swanston and Secretary Thompson to resign in the same year, as both are experienced executive officials and know exactly how to handle trouble situations, that ever the case during a playing season. We desire very much whether or not there will ever sufficient could handle, in such a capable and efficient manner, some of the situations that have been so successfully settled by those two men. # KING'S SOLDIER SON IS WEDDED

Behind the Duke of Gloucester stood his two supporters, the Prince of Wales in the uniform of Colonel of the Welsh Guards and the Duke of York in the uniform of Colonel of the Scots Guards.

King George of Greece is Great Uncle

King George was a Field Marshal in his uniform and Queen Mary, a Revel-Rise chiffon velvet gown.

Besides the King and Queen were the recalled King George of Greece and Queen Maud of Norway. The bride's mother, the Duvager Duchess of Rockingham, and in the ballroom assembly accompanied by the King and Queen during divine services.

The ceremonies rose as the bride entered the chapel shortly before 11.30 a.m. (6.30 a.m. E.S.T.) and joined the Duke of Gloucester at the altar rail.

The eight bridesmaids remained 25 paces behind the couple.

The Service

The Bishop of London began the service promptly at 11.30 a.m., and the Archbishop of Canterbury then took up the ritual, pronouncing Lady Alice's hand from her brother, the new Duke of Buckingham.

With his right hand joined to that of Lady Alice, the Duke repeated after the Archbishop:

"I, Henry William Frederick Albert, take thee, Alice Christabel, to be my wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward, for better or for worse, . . . to plight thee my troth."

The royal couple then loosed and rejoined their hands, Lady Alice repeating after the Archbishop:

"I, Alice Christabel, take thee, Henry William Frederick Albert, to be my wedded husband, to have and to hold, . . . . . love, cherish and obey, till death us do part".

Welsh Gold Ring

The Duke of Gloucester, taking the Welsh gold wedding ring from the Prince of Wales, placed it on Lady Alice's finger, repeating after the Archbishop:

"With this ring, I thee wed, with my body I thee worship and with all my worldly goods I thee endow."

After the prayer and blessing the congregation sang the 67th Psalm, followed by the bride and bridegroom kneit before the altar as the precentor read from the book of sponsors.

The ceremony was completed with prayers by the Primate of the Scottish Episcopal Church, the Bishop of Brechin, an address by the Archbishop of Canterbury and a short benediction.

As the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march filled the chapel, the Duke with his bride on his arm, followed by the bridegroom, bowed while the bride and bridesmaids curtsied in unison.

Slowly the wedding procession filed out of the chapel into the Semi-circular drawing room beside the register, the Duke and the new Duchess signed their names and the King and Queen, the dowager Duchess of Buckingham, the Duke of Buccleuch, Prime Minister Baldwin, Home Secretary Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lord Hailsham and other guests.

Crowds Cheer

The public massed before Buckingham Palace cheered when the bride drive from her home in Grosvenor Place to the grand entrance to the Palace in a glass and gold Royal coach before the ceremony, had left first drive at 10.45 a.m. (5.45 a.m. p.m. (7.15 a.m. E.S.T.) when they stopped outside the palace gates and waved in response to cheers.

Another great crowd saw the King George and Queen Mary appeared followed by Princess Elizabeth, Secretary of state, and Princess Margaret.

The party quickly entered the palace for a wedding breakfast after which the bridal couple left to leave in the afternoon for a honeymoon at Broughton Hall, Kettering, one of the Buccleuch family homes.

The morning sun was succeeded by a slight drizzle as the newlyweds left Buckingham Palace shortly after 3 p.m. for the St. Pancras railway station nevertheless, they travelled in an open landau drawn by four bay horses through the streets from the cheering crowd of spectators.

The Prince of Wales led the royal party in showering the departing couple with rose leaves and confetti.

The King and Queen walked to the grand entrance of Buckingham Palace to see the departure while little Princess Elizabeth, both her hands filled with rose petals, ran beside the carriage to the gates.

The Duke and Duchess departed on the 3.45 p.m. train.

Fair Fall Weather

Fair weather and sparkling fall sunshine favored the occasion which gathered for a view of the bride as she left her home for the train enroute for the private ceremony in Buckingham Palace.

Because of the recent death of Lady Alice's father, the Duke of Buccleuch, the State ceremony, originally arranged to be held before 2,000 persons in Westminster Abbey, was cancelled.

Only 120 close friends and members of the royal family attended. Among them with King George and Queen Mary, were the recalled King George of Greece, Queen Maud of Norway, and the Dowager Duchess of Buccleuch.

The public, excluded from the ceremonies, was accorded, nevertheless, at least three glimpses of the bride.

Bride to Palace

With her brother, the new Duke of Buccleuch, she rode about a mile down Constitution Hill from the Buccleuch town house, No. 2 Grosvenor Place, to main entrance of Buckingham Palace.

Her course, similar to that used at the wedding last year of the Duke and Duchess of Kent, had large glass windows enabling to the crowds details of Lady Alice's bridal gown of new Parisian material called Crepe Alalice.

After the ceremony, in which the Archbishop of Canterbury headed the officiating clergy, the Royal Party arranged to go to the famous balcony of the palace to greet the spectators before proceeding to the State dining room.

Drive to Station

Then came the drive of the newly wedded couple in an open carriage three miles to St. Pancras station to board their honeymoon special.

Their route along Pall Mall and the Strand was guarded by 7,000 police.

The original plan to give every school child in Great Britain a day's holiday to celebrate the wedding was cancelled.

The ceremony also gave the British army its turn to rejoice over a royal marriage.

When the Duke of York married Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon there was the air force, in which the Duke holds a commission, held special celebrations.

The navy had to wait 11 years for a similar chance, when on Monday, Nov. 29, 1934, of the Duke of Kent, to Princess Marina of Greece.

Soldiers Drink Health

Today, in every barracks from Aldershot to Delhi to Singapore and India, British officers and troopers drank the health of the bride in brewet-major, the Duke of Gloucester.

The Duke, born March 31, 1900, is 35 years old—less than two years older than his bride, who celebrated May, 1901.

Lady Alice, the athletic type of Scotswoman, small and finely featured, wore a bridal veil of tulle and a halo headdress of orange blossoms, studded with diamante.

Her gown, with a skirt satin finish, was of simple design, the silhouette showing form fitting lines with fullness at the hem. A scarf sash draped around the waist, long tight sleeves came to a point over her hands, and three gatherings at the hem caused the material to fall in three folds.

The train was not long, widening as the end. Her shoes were covered with crepe sidlice.

The Duke of Gloucester wore military uniform as did King George, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and the Duke of Kent.

Honeymoon at Kettering

Bridesmaids were Lady Angela Scott, one of the bride's sisters, Miss Moyra Scott, a cousin; Princess Elizabeth, 9; her five-year-old sister Princess Margaret Rose; Lady Mary Cambridge, 11; Lady Elizabeth Scott, 13, a daughter of the bride's brother; Miss Ann Hawkins and Miss Claire Phipps, 7 and 14 respectively, each a daughter of a sister of the bride.

The couple will spend their honeymoon at Broughton House in Kettering, one of the Buccleuch homes.

Brian Aherne, Frank Morgan, Frank Conroy, Joan Crawford in the sparkling romance "I Live My Life," now at the Belle.

LINDSAY AND SWANSON SWAP GAGS

Glee is quite manifest as Sir Ronald Lindsay, England's ambassador to the United States (LEFT) and U. S. Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson, swap the latest gags at a dinner tendered in their honor by the secretary, for Rear Admiral Matthew R. Best of the Royal Navy.

AT THE BELLE

"I Live My Life"

Joan Crawford and Brian Aherne in Picture Betrayal of Entertainment

Starring Joan Crawford and directed by W. S. Van Dyke—this picture combines enough to make any picture a success. In the case of "I Live My Life", the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production at the Belle tonight, Saturday and Friday matinee and evening, the combination coupled with a powerful story, is a picture betrayal of entertainment.

Different from any of the glamorous roles she has played, Miss Crawford casts her as a spoiled debutante whose love for a penniless architect changes her entire life.

As the archaeologist, Brian Aherne gives a splendid performance to the screen, making the character a warm, charming and humorous digger of statues.

Van Dyke's inspired direction is apparent in every scene of the new production. The swiftness, easy comedy and dramatic punch which he instills into his sequences are becoming a personal trademark.

Joan Crawford has never appeared more glamorous nor been more beautifully photographed. Her delineation of the gay, careless, heartless character is the work of a fine actress.

Equally stimulating is the supporting cast. Frank Morgan is up to his old humorous tricks as the bumbling, absent-minded butler, Arthur Aldridge brings dignity to her role of a woman sadly in love.

"Miami Nights" Mae"

Fred Keating is excellent as the handsome newspaper reporter, Eric Blore, the eccentric butler of "Top Hat" and Arthur Treacher are two butlers you'll never forget when you forget Jessie Ralph as the irrepressible Mrs. Wentworth.

Adrian has designed more than a dozen gowns for Miss Crawford and as only Joan Crawford can wear them. You'll be sorry if you miss it. Those among the audience who are appearing on the same program in person. The comedy complete for many weeks. "Sing Sister Sing".

Performances start daily at 2.15, 7.15 and 9.15 p.m. The feature presentation commences daily at 2.50, 7.50 and 9.25 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Virginia Judge"

A Rollicking Comedy Forms First Half of Excellent Double Bill.

Kelly who won fame in a similar characterization on the vaudeville and musical stage. Stepin Fetchit is also in the cast and he alone will provide you with enough laughs to satisfy you for days. "The Virginia Judge" is a story of a kindly, humorous old magistrate in a small southern town. There's plenty of comedy, plenty of laughs in the cases that come before him. As a matter of fact there is plenty of everything that goes to make spine-tingling entertainment. Every . . . . . men . . . . case dismissed . . . . and the verdict . . . two days o' laughs at the Capitol Theatre.

Rosi, Armstrong in "Mystery Man"

Jean Arthur has never appeared more glamorous nor been more beautifully photographed than in this picture they will find a smart hour's entertainment for any child around the melodramatic adventures of a swaggering, temperamental Spanish newspaper correspondence hawkire with too much ready cash, the story plays for laughs and suspense and goes to town with both. Robert Armstrong is the quiet guy who saves the day and Edward McMahon brings dignity to her role of a woman sadly in love.

PREMIER KING TO DISCUSS TRADE IN WASHINGTON

Holiday Will Not Interfere With Plans For Conference

DECLINES POST

John W. Dafoe Will Not Go to Washington as Canadian Minister

Ottawa, Nov. 6 (CP)—Preparation for the Dominion Conference will move forward with an absence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who leaves today for Washington, a visit with President Franklin D. Roosevelt and a holiday in other parts of the south.

Today Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, became Acting Prime Minister and under his direction the agenda for the conference which begins November 27, will be completed. It is understood this work is well advanced but the provinces have been asked for suggestions, which may be studied for advance added to the agenda.

Mr. King announced yesterday that John W. Dafoe of Winnipeg had definitely declined to become Canadian Minister at Washington. Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, will accompany Mr. King to the capital of the southern capital and while his name has been linked with the Washington post, the possibility of his assuming it has been denied in official circles. It is probable, however, Dr. Skelton, may remain in Washington for a while to aid the Canadian trade experts, who are already there conferring with American officials on the basis of a trade treaty between the two countries.

To Discuss Trade

Trade matters will form an important subject of discussion between Mr. King and President Roosevelt. It is unlikely that the two local executives will go into the treaty question in detail, but nothing is expected to give an impetus to the negotiations.

General regret at the announcement Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario would retire from office was expressed in Government circles.

Mr. King telephoned Mr. Hepburn from Washington to express sympathy. He said later he regarded Mr. Hepburn's action as a matter of finance of a public man being driven too hard by official duties, a tendency of the times.

Submission of the social legislation to the people, however, is the opinion as to its validity is expected to result in a decision that it will be asked the simple question, "Is this Act ultra vires of the Dominion?" which will be left to one of the laws in question.

Decision will be made to the court this week for directions and for a date for the hearing and at the same time the government will be notified so that they may prepare their case to submit to the matter.

Counsel for the Dominion Government will be appointed, who will probably take the stand the legislation is ultra vires. Counsel for some of the provinces are expected to take the counsel who will argue it is ultra vires.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper us fellows was sitting on Pruds Simkinses front steps with our erections on waiting to see if Pruds would come out and we could sing about different subjects such as "Old Black Joe" and "Home, Sweet Home" and started to have a debate about with is the best fun, winter or summer, me and Pruds saying Winter and Glasses saying Summer, and he said in the summer, Pruds saying, No matter how hot it is it is kinder cool, and in the winter it is kinder cool.

Sure there is, there's the ocean, Glasses Magee said, and Pruds said, Who ever seen a cake of ice in the ocean? But now you take winter, he matter how cold it is in winter you can go in the house and get warm and get warm.

Well, I suppose it was about 18 o'clock at nite where would you go to get warm in the house? Pruds said, You could always go in a powder station and pretend you was in there and then the pleasure of thinking that vacation is coming. But what is the best fun to do in winter during vecation? You have to think that school is out and you don't have every day, that's what, I said.

Well, I said, how about flowers and fruit, are they summer or winter? Glasses said, Fruit Pudd and Pruds said, Apple pie, and me said, How about splunkish while you're about it?

I'll tell you about ice, cream Pruds said, What kinds have you for ice cream in summer? he said, and I said, That's a heck of a argument.

Why with it? Pruds said, and I said, Because for the simple reason why because ice cream always tastes good to it just naturally couldn't taist any better.

Being the real smart yet and proving me and Pruds had won the argument, what had Glass Magee got to come out to all our front doors and waved us home.

DRAPER APPEALS FOR ASSISTANCE TO HUNT KILLER

Police Theory Girl Mutilated By A Degenerate

CRIMINALLY ASSAULTED

Intensive Search Fails to Give One Tangible Clue

Toronto, Nov. 6 (CP)— Hundreds of police and detectives here today pursued various angles of investigation in their hunt for the presumably degenerate killer of Ruth Taylor, 20-year-old stenographer, whose mutilated body was found in an east-end ravine.

Evidently attacked as she passed by the ravine carrying an umbrella during a driving rainstorm, about midnight Monday, the young woman was dragged down the hillside, beaten about the head and shoulders and criminally assaulted.

It was expected today after a conference between Chief Constable D. G. Draper and the Board of Police Commissioners a reward would be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer. The Chief Constable in an appeal to the people to assist in the manhunt stated any information offered would be treated confidentially.

A more definite picture of what probably happened on the night of the girl's death emerged as police pieced together details gathered from scores of sources.

Girl Worked Late

Having worked until 11 o'clock Monday night Miss Taylor rode by street car to a transfer point at Carlton Street and Broadview Avenue. There she boarded a street car, which ordinarily would have taken her to within a block of her home but the car was routed into the car barns owing to hockey game crowds and Miss Taylor found herself a mile from her home.

In spite of the rain and the late hour, police believe, the young woman decided to walk the remainder of the way home instead of waiting for another car. She put up her umbrella and set out.

Intensive search by police today had failed to locate anything in the vicinity of the crime, which may have been the instrument used to inflict the severe blows on the head and shoulders, which fractured Miss Taylor's skull and caused her death.

A bike pedalo had been found in the ravine but it remained undetermined today whether it was one which had been thrown there sometime prior to the killing or whether it was torn from the murderer during the struggle, which police believe attended the young woman's death.

Recalls Unsolved Crimes

One report was that police were seeking for questioning two men recently released from Kingston penitentiary, both of whom had been sentenced for criminally assaulting a girl in the same section of the city.

Circumstances of the case recalled to police the similar case of lilac bush case in which Mrs. Aloysne Thompson was found, beaten about the head and evidently assaulted, behind a lilac bush at his side of a quiet street in the northern fringe of the city; and also the case of Florence Costello, who a few years ago was found dead in a ravine in North Toronto, frozen in the ice of a pool.

Mrs. Thompson's husband is awaiting retrial on a charge of murder, a jury having disagreed at the first trial this autumn.

Domestic is Sought

Toronto, Nov. 6 (CP)— With the murder of Ruth Taylor, 20-year-old stenographer, on their hands police here today found themselves confronted with another mystery, involving the disappearance of Doris Newman, 19, missing since Thursday night.

The girl, a domestic at Government House, was believed to have gone to a dance Thursday night after which she intended to return to where she was employed. Police have been unable to trace her movements.

Tests in Progress to Determine Rust-Resisting Value of Wheat

Ottawa, Nov. 7 (CP)—Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, president of the National Research Council, predicted today rust-resisting wheat seed would be available for distribution among Canadian farmers by 1937, ending a battle against plant disease that has been in progress since 1925.

General McNaughton said several species, notably the Dominion Department of Agriculture, have collaborated in co-operative effort, with the Research Council's associate committee on plant diseases as a sort of steering committee, in developing three or four varieties of wheat that retain black stem rust, a disease that caused damage this year estimated at about $100,000,000.

The General added that the resisting varieties are being bred by the Department of Agriculture and its experimental stations, agricultural colleges and universities, provincial organizations and private individuals interested in the problem.

There are now in progress to determine the variety of rust-resisting wheat with the best protein content and best baking qualities. Meanwhile farmers are those credited with developing the new varieties will be withheld. Individual credit for development of the most successful breed will be given after its tests have been completed.

1936 Elections May be Furious

Washington, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The deadly earnestness with which each major party is seeking to show Tuesday's elections were a blow to the other gives a hint of the perhaps unequalled fury with which the struggle in the 1936 United States elections will be fought.

Republicans argue the results are a 'rebuke' to the new deal and lay stress on victories in New York and New Jersey assembly elections, the Democrats maroonly contest and other fights.

Democrats, disputing these claims, also point in turn to Kentucky with its triumph for the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, A. B. Chandler.

Took Lives of 5 Incurable Patients, Unidentified English Doctor Admits

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—An unidentified English doctor has admitted, the Daily Mail said today, killing the lives of five private patients whom he could not cure.

In what the newspaper called the doctor's "confession", the medical man declared:

"I've taken life on five different occasions. My conscience never pricked me. I still carry with me memories of those cases and the happy faces before they died."

The interview with the doctor, described by the Mail as a "kindly faced, elderly family doctor", was used as an argument for formation of the proposed voluntary Euthanasia Legislation Society, designed to "allow patients" suffering from incurable diseases the right to die."

The doctor said, the newspaper reported:

"I've broken the law and circumstances being similar I'd do it again. . . . . If need be I'm prepared to face any tribunal in the land —my justification is not my opinion for what I've done is human, ikky, knowy, unlawful."

The five cases, the doctor explained to the interviewer, included one of a newly born baby, "clearly doomed to imbecility" and four adults afflicted with incurable diseases.

Sponsors of the "right to die" society, headed by Lord Moynihan, famous English surgeon, plan to introduce a Bill into the House of Lords.

Other sponsors are Professor Julian Huxley, the Earl of Listowel, Lord Denman, former Governor-General of Australia, and Lady Denman, chairman of the National Federation of Institutes.

HUNGERFORD S. S. 20 LOSES APPEAL

Board Had Asked Judgment For $181.44 Against Joseph Fenlon

Toronto, Nov. 7.—(CP)— The Ontario Court of Appeal today dismissed an appeal of the Public School Board of Section No. 20 in the Township of Hungerford, against a judgment of the Fourth Division Court of Hastings County awarding the Board $17.45 for the taxes to be paid by Joseph Fenlon for the attendance of his four children at the school in Section 20, during the last four months of 1934.

In its appeal the School Board asked that judgment be given in its favor for $181.44 and costs against Fenlon.

Fenlon lived in Hungerford Township but his land was situated in School Section No. 4. He found it more convenient to send his children to the school in Section 20.

MANSLAUGHTER CASE TO JURY

Verdict Expected Late This Evening at Napanee Trial

Napanee, Ont., Nov. 7 (CP) — The charge of manslaughter against Howard G. or Gordon Allen, Belleville resident, resulting from the death of Billy McCann, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McCrear, Napanee, March 25 last was given to the jury today.

Mr. Justice Lloyd Jeffrey addressed the jury for one hour and 15 minutes. The jury retired for lunch and a verdict is expected this late this afternoon and possibly this evening. Arrayed in the address of His Lordship, Charles A. Payne, K.C., of Belleville, counsel for the defence and A. U. Bitz of Toronto, Crown Prosecutor, concluded the presentation of the prosecution with their addresses to the jury.

His Lordship stated there was a certain duty imposed by those driving motor cars on the highway and those walking on highways and even upon persons not entitled to every consideration by the motorist. If driving at high rate of speed and someone is killed the driver is responsible but in case of proof of negligence entirely upon the Crown, to show the driver was driving in a reckless and negligent manner.

He pointed out the difference between criminal and civil negligence. His Lordship put little credence in the testimony of Allen and Dean, the two accused men, because, he said, "both were intoxicated."

Mr. Justice Lloyd Jeffrey at length with the condition of brakes on the car and also stated the crown in the road and the depression in the highway like possibly been exaggerated by the defence.

Service Station Employee Held on Murder Charge In Stenographer's Death

Harry O'Donnell, 25, is Arrested While at His Work

SOME CLOTHING FOUND

Employer Comes to Spirited Defence of Accused Man

Toronto, Nov. 7—(CP)—Harry O'Donnell, 25-year-old service station attendant, was listed for arraignment in Magistrate's Court today on a charge of murdering Ruth Taylor, pretty stenographer fatally beaten about the head with a stone and criminally assaulted in an east-end ravine Monday.

It was expected he would be remanded in custody, while police and coroner's department officials made preparations for an early inquest and, following that, a preliminary hearing.

O'Donnell, under medium height and of slight build, was arrested before noon yesterday but it was not until late last night Toronto detective headquarters announced a charge of murder had been laid.

Clothing Found

Articles of clothing taken from O'Donnell's home, other items of wearing apparel, some with blood and a bloodstained jagged stone about 12 inches long weighing between four and five pounds, found in the ravine, were being checked by Prof. H. Joslyn Rogers Provincial analyst. Results of his examinations, expected to form an important part of crown evidence, will be presented at the inquest, date for which had not been set.

Police said O'Donnell was in his service station at Yonge and Eglinton Avenues Tuesday night and early last Saturday.

Arrested within 19 hours of the time Ruth Taylor's body was found by children in the ravine, relatives of O'Donnell was brought to headquarters in his working clothes, a leather windbreaker and leather leggings. He appeared cool and asked in a voice tinged with indignation, what the reason was for his arrest.

Confident with the end of the police hunt, fear for the safety of two others apparently at an end since a week ago, was relaxed. The two, Grace McKay, 20, and her friend, Kay Miller, were believed by police to have run away from home. Nov. 1 they sent a letter from her daughter saying she was going to Montreal with Kay Miller. Both girls are said to have left home similarly before.

Employer Interviewed

Detectives headquarters refused to state whether or not O'Donnell had given any statement. Precise information as to the time of the arrest also was withheld but it was learned police interviewed hundreds of residents in the vicinity of the ravine, where the girl was killed.

Headquarters also was informed about a $2,000 reward offered for information leading to capture and conviction of the killer of Ruth Taylor, made by the girl's father. It also said to have been withdrawn. Chief Constable Draper said the reward had been withdrawn before any announcement was made of the charge of murder.

From George M. Hillman, proprietor of the service station at which O'Donnell was employed, came a spirited defence of the accused man.

"He's absolutely innocent," declared Hillman. "I'd bank on him to the last dollar. I've worked for me for 20 months and has balanced my books every month to the perfect satisfaction of the company auditors."

Funeral of Girl Friday

Hillman said O'Donnell closed the station Tuesday night at the usual hour.

The murder and the headlines in the papers were the only topic of conversation around here this morning," Hillman said. "But Harry did not act in the least unnatural. He was just his own genial, obliging self as all times. You could have knocked him over with a feather, when the police arrived here."

Hillman opened the station yesterday morning as usual and left for a short time later. At 11.30 a.m. the mistress came.

Miss Taylor's funeral will take place Friday afternoon.

SENTENCES FOR ARSON

HARRY O'DONNELL ARRAIGNED TODAY

Is Remanded on Murder Charge by Magistrate Browne

Toronto, Nov. 7 (CP)—Harry O'Donnell, service station attendant, was charged in police court today with the murder of Ruth Taylor, pretty 20-year-old stenographer and remanded for hearing until Nov. 13.

O'Donnell, without the windbreaker he wore when arrested yesterday, stood in the dock before Magistrate Browne and heard the charge he killed the girl whose battered body was found in a rain-soaked ravine in the east end of the city Tuesday.

O'Donnell wore a mechanic's blue shirt, blue trousers and black leggings. He stood with folded arms leaning against the rail of the prisoner's dock as Clerk Fred Eberts read the charge.

Slightly Pale.

The 25-year-old mechanic whose wife gave birth to a baby boy Saturday, appeared slightly pale but showing little effect of the 11-hour questioning he had on a night in the cells.

Fred Regan, O'Donnell's counsel, asked if the hearing will proceed Nov. 13 and Crown Attorney Boyler said he would get in touch with defence counsel and let him know.

Outdoors, outside the court room swarmed with people, most of them talking in hushed tones about the girl. O'Donnell's appearance before the magistrate was brief. In about three minutes he was back in the cells.

O'Donnell Unknown to Family.

Miss Jean Taylor, twin sister of Ruth Taylor, told newspapermen today she had never heard of Harry O'Donnell, gasoline station attendant charged with the murder of her sister.

BUILDS BONFIRE WITHIN CELL

Man's Action Causes Others to Shout For Their Lives

General bedlam ensued and excitement reached a feverish pitch in the cell block at the police station last night when minutes ahead of "fire" and pounded on the doors to be liberated from what they believed to be a burning inferno. Sergeant Harmon and P. C. Arnott rushed to the scene and found a blazing fire had been kindled in the centre of the cell room floor. A well-directed pail of water, however, soon extinguished the blaze, the embers being later removed.

After the excitement had died down as the transients to share the cell block were calmed to a degree where they agreed to remain in warm quarters, it was discovered that a man secured of intoxication who had been placed in confinement earlier in the evening, had started a portion of the bedding used in the cell block and kindled the fire, that was burning brightly in the centre of the floor when suddenly detected the transients awakened and the fire fighting.

The accused camp-fire builder gave his name as Thomas Patterson Kingston, traveller, who had been arrested by Child Kidd as he proceeded along Front street while intoxicated. Patterson approached Child Kidd at the point and offered before $20 p.m. and tried to contact conversation later charged him in his nearby parked automobile, which he intended to drive away. Child Kidd, however, refused to accept as he deemed the man too intoxicated to drive.

Today Patterson appeared in the local police court before Magistrate R. J. Deacon, K.C., charged with being charge of a motor car while intoxicated. Patterson pleaded guilty and his case was enlarged for 24 hours, the accused man wanting to secure the services of counsel. When confronted with the story of incidents of the night previous, Patterson claimed he did not recollect kindling the fire in the cell block but assured Child Kidd he would make restitution. He was allowed to return home. Trial being provided later today.

Animal Kingdom in Civil War As Billy Goat Battles Cow

'Billy' Takes Defeat Like Hero, May Return to Tank Climbing

Billy, the bewhiskered billy goat of employees of the Canadian Oil Company's headquarters south of the city who have used him during the past season as an animated mascot to keep the grass and hedges trimmed, evened a grudge yesterday afternoon in a bang up fight with Bossy, a cow.

The rousing battle, pitched on a level sward near the bay shore had as its audience a large gathering of men who had rushed outside on the scene by the commotion of battle.

Eyewitnesses of the scene declare that Billy, who has been accustomed going by her sharp horns failed to daunt the goat's attacks on the animal's hairless cow. Rear actions, flank attacks and head-on charges were tried by the goat in turn with varying degrees of success and superiority.

Billy was pointed to today as one of the gamest. Past misdemeanours such as nibbling the shirt tail on a handy line, butting his way into back kitchens through closed doors and other pranks have not given. Billy had proved that he could take it, and also give it out.

When ordinary pleasures, such as clearing the neighborhood of tin cans, and running and making sidewise jumps at passing horses and teams and occasional bunts at the legs of passing pedestrians pall, Billy indulges in a bit of mountain climbing on the huge oil tanks comprising the Company's property. Ascending the narrow and slippery steel stairs to the tops of the tanks, Billy performs his aerial gymnastics to his fill with proverbial goat surefootedness. The last is reported to have again, however, is beginning to get a bit wearisome, employees of the company state.

WATER TURNED BLACK BY QUAKE

Well in Sidney Witnesses Sudden Transformation to Inky Fluid

Officials of the local waterworks department are wondering the reason for the sudden transformation of Pax's clear spring water into an inky black fluid, it was learned at Mr. Peter Graham, 4th Concession of Sidney.

The color of the water changed from clear to seemingly as the result of the earthquake which shook this section early last Friday.

A sample of the water which is declared by the owner of the well to be pleasant in taste is being forwarded the local waterworks department for analysis.

The rooms were very inviting and cosy and the tea table was in splendid array with lace cloth and silver service along with all the dainty things to eat. The centrepiece was a bouquet of white mums in yellow and mauve with autumn leaves. The tea which was under the auspices of the choir of Holloway Street Church was served by choir members, Mrs. M. "Pencil, pencil, who's got a pencil" It is a new game. Members of Christ Church Women's Auxiliary found themselves playing it quite unexpectedly Wednesday afternoon at the home of the President, Mrs. Vandervoort, assisted by Mrs. H. O. Wright. Entries searched in vain through adaptable bags, pockets, satchel, lipstick, compact, silver spies, defunct cheque books, clipped ear tablets came to light—but pencil was absent. However the guessing went on. Mrs. Schuster and Miss Bruce Bolton took charge of the contests which were enjoyed by all. Mrs. Coulter in one she tied with Mrs. Helen Rector of Nattenville. Delightful was the group of songs given artistically by Mrs. Douglas Haldenby, A.T.C.M. Mr. Duff was, as usual, a most sympathetic accompanist. The numbers were "Lochlaby" (Scott); "Hark! Hark the Lark" (From Schubert); "Elysia" (Clay Shaw). The business was Mrs. Sargent, assisted by Mrs. Wright and members of the Auxiliary. Mrs. Hurst played. Late in the afternoon, Rev. A. L. Geen attended and read to the members a letter from a little Indian girl in Alberta School for the Deaf, who was writing a letter to thank you for the Bible. I like it very much. I will keep it carefully and read it at night, when I have time. I like the pictures very much. With love, from Mary Morning Bull." Mrs. Harold and a happy week-end. The mystic wand of Miss Beatrice Jones laid bare the fortunes of many and created no end of merriment. Home cooking and vanity sold readily in charge of Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Clarke, Miss Black and Mrs. Wm. Coles.

St. Andrew's W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held in the Church Hall on the afternoon of Wednesday the sixth of November, and was well attended. Mrs. Parger, President of the Society was in the chair, and Mrs. Worrell's group was in charge of the meeting, the topic of which was "The Tidings."

Following the singing of a hymn, Mrs. Worrell read the Scripture lesson, after which Mrs. Morrice led in prayer.

Another hymn was sung, then the business of the meeting engaged the attention of the ladies, the secretary and the treasurer presenting very interesting reports.

After the completion of the business, Mrs. Worrell gave an excellent paper on "The Glad Tidings," the missionary leaflet.

Mrs. T. W. Bell rendered an enjoyable solo entitled "Others."

Mr. Parger gave a talk on The Ten Commandments of the Society clearly exemplifying the duties of its members.

Another hymn was sung and the meeting was closed by all reciting The Lord's Prayer in concert.

Weddings

BEDFORD—IRWIN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Wallbridge United Church on Wednesday November 6th, at three p.m. when Miss Knights Anne Irwin, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Irwin, of Sidney Township was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Bedford, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bedford of Ameliasburg Township. The Rev. H. B. Johnston, M.A., B.D., officiated. The groom was supported by Mr. Gordon Irwin, brother of the bride, while Miss Minnie Bedford, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid.

While the bride walked slowly up the aisle with her father, Mrs. Hilton Shorey played Lohengrin's Wedding March.

The bride was charmingly attired in a suit of royal blue trimmed with grey squirrel and matching accessories and carried a bouquet of pink and white mums. The bridesmaid wore a gown of turquoise blue with brown accessories and carried yellow mums.

The church altar was tastefully decorated with yellow mums and pink and white roses. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. The young couple then left on a honeymoon trip to Oshawa and points west. Their many friends wish the popular young couple much happiness in their home at Rednersville.

McCONNELL—DAIMARD

At Bridge Street United Church Parsonage, Belleville afternoon, the marriage of Mr. Melvin Morris McConnell and Miss Mildred Amelia Daimard, both of Cherry Valley, was performed by Rev. James Semple.

Quints' Dolls, Toys Are Growing Up

(By Ruth Cowan)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Chicago, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Growing up with the Dionne Quintuplets is what is being done in toys, it was noted today at the first showing of Santa Claus' specialties in Toyland in the big stores along State street. The newest thing in dolls is a representation of the world's most famous babies.

In small playpens and tiny high chairs sit brown eyed, brown haired identical baby dolls. The labs in their dresses proclaim them to be Yvonne, Cecile, Marie, Annette and Emilie.

To go with them, if desired, is a white robed nurse.

The grownup world ..as never been more carefully copied in miniature than in toys Santa will pack this year.

In boat sections are small reproductions of the "Normandie", the pride of France and the largest liner afloat which this year made its maiden voyage.

Small Disappearance May Be Reopened

Toronto, Nov. 6 (CP)—Paul Hinds, barrister, acting on behalf of Patrick Sullivan who seeks to upset the $2,000,000 will of Mrs. Theresa Small, said today he would request the Toronto Police Board to take up a renewed investigation of the disappearance of Mrs. Small's husband, Ambrose Small, wealthy theatre owner, disappeared in December, 1919.

Sullivan declared he would seek evidence of a nurse regarding purported statements of Mrs. Small before she died. Most of the woman's estate was left to charities.

Government Opposes Reorganization Plan

Toronto, Nov. 7.—(CP)—The Ontario Government will "actively oppose" the Gedfaell-Aldrich plan for reorganization of the Great Lakes Paper Company, despite the fact 77 per cent. of the company's bondholders have voted in favor of the proposal.

Following a cabinet meeting yesterday, Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, issued a statement saying the government would oppose sale of the company's property to the United States interests "and believes that suitable alternatives to the Gedfaell proposal could be found".

1885 - FIFTY YEARS OF CANADIAN PACIFIC - 1935

Lord Strathcona, then the Hon. Donald A. Smith, driving the iron spike that linked the rails from the Atlantic to the Pacific, at Craigellachie, B.C., November 7th, 1885.

On the occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the driving of the last spike, the Canadian Pacific takes pride in recalling to its fellow citizens some of the developments of the past half-century which have placed the Dominion in the forefront of the nations. The story of Canada and of the Canadian Pacific, it written across the face of the Dominion. It is a story that all may read who travel through their country with seeing eyes.

1885. Buffalo roam the western plains. Wandering Indians gaze at a ribbon of steel winding westward from Winnipeg. Another ribbon threads eastward from the Pacific Coast. At Craigellachie, the two meet. The last spike of the Canadian Pacific Railway is driven. Sir John A. Macdonald's dream is realized: The Dominion is united and Canada's Cavalcade gets under way.

Slowly it gathers momentum. The terminal on the Pacific Coast becomes the port of Vancouver. On the prairies, oldtime frontiers vanish before the settler. Industries are born. Canadian keels cleave eastern and western oceans completing an Imperial Highway from the Orient and Australia to England. The newly fledged nation salutes at the passing of its first great leader whose vision brought the railway into being. Other leaders arise. One towers above them all: a French-Canadian. He attends the Diamond Jubilee: returns Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Klondike Gold Rush; and Canada's eyes are focussed on the Trail of '98.

The turn of the century sees Canada continue her forward surge — taking her place beside the Motherland in South Africa: opening her lands to the immigrant willing to work. Two new provinces are created: a blacksmith's chance-flung hammer unearths the wealth of Cobalt: wheat makes Canada the granary of Empire. Her contributions to the culture of the world are many. Her men of science achieve world-wide renown.

On moves Canada's Cavalcade to the drum of mechanical innovations that revolutionize the factory, the office, the home. Water powers are harnessed. Mineral wealth is tapped. Smelters are built to treat it. Great newsprint plants spring up. Grain elevators dot the landscape. New factory chimneys soar as industrial development is spurred to greater achievement and a more balanced economy. New rails are laid and waterways deepened to carry her growing commerce. Newer and higher standards of living are created and maintained.

The Great War finds Canada doing her duty. Through postwar recovery years she is stable. She rides through hysteria: meets depression: faces the future with pride in her heritage and confidence in her destiny.

THE POPPY AND CANADA

Poignant reminder of those spacious days of glory and of grieving, "Poppy Day" once more returns to prompt the citizens of this country in the duties they have inherited from the past generation. To Canadian Youth in this year of grace, the deep-red petals of the Poppy may not carry the same significance they bore to the youth of fifteen years ago. The symbolism of sacrifice with which the Poppy has become charged is something to which the present generation succeeds only through the wistful memories of the aging man who fought their Country's battles, who suffered privations, endured long agonies and finally triumphed amid surroundings carpeted with poppies.

To wear this humble emblem on Poppy Day is the proclaim that amid all the tangling confusion through which this country is striving valiently to penetrate, the heart and mind are nevertheless attuned to a sense of homage to those men whose peace inspired 600,000 Canadians to offer themselves for service between 1914 and 1918; of that number more than 60,000 found graves in France and Belgium, and it is over those graves that the Poppy blows in perennial bloom.

The numbered dead were not strangers. They were young Canadians, filled even as the youth of today is filled, with the joy of living. So also were the 170,000 men who in 1885 bear upon their bodies the marks and scars of war—the disabled ex-service men who suffered disablement on behalf of Canada.

To manifest that proud recognition of their place in this country, to mark that tribute which is their due, Poppy Day has been set aside in order that all may join in recalling the Great Sorrow.

The blood-red emblems distributed throughout Canada by the Canadian Legion's vast volunteer organization are the product of disabled veterans, men striving to maintain themselves in the Vetcraft Shops administered by the Dominion Government. To purchase a Poppy is a small thing. For every citizen to do so is a big thing.

Let us all wear a poppy on Poppy Day.

WILL ROGERS MEMORIAL

While the movement for a national memorial in the United States to the name and fame of Will Rogers who lost his life in Alaska in a plane accident some time ago, has not been crystallized into a definite decision as yet as to the form which the memorial will take, it is likely to be a living memorial, which will serve those who live and those who are to yet unborn—a humanitarian institution, old marble or granite shafts and memorials are all very well but to represent adequately the riches of personality which was made up the life of the great humorist, the impression appears to require something institutional. The present age has been taught to realize its duty as the brother's keeper and the thought turns naturally to something which will make and mould the lives of men and women and children and alleviate suffering.

CLOUD LIFTS SOMEWHAT

More hopeful signs are reported from the Mediterranean as there has been tension over the Libyan garrison and the numbers of British war vessels at strategic points in the Red Sea. Some look upon this as the prelude to a settlement of the Ethiopian affair.

The situation has been intriguing to the public which, everyone knows, does not know the real inner meaning of events. Signs of lightening of the tension do are things which the public can appreciate.

Indications gather that a greater war will not break out. The fact that Italy continues to remain represented at Geneva is taken by many as a sign that the power of united opinion is something which no nation can afford to disregard. Italy has chosen to be the first to "have a run in" with the League and accordingly the results will be momentous one way or another.

HEAVILY OVERSUBSCRIBED

The success of the Dominion Loan of $75,000,000 was so great that it was heavily oversubscribed in a short time.

Canadians have faith in their country and regard Dominion bonds as the choicest investments.

It was a demonstration of loyalty and confidence in this country's recovery and future.

Kindness is a language the dumb can speak, and the deaf can hear and understand.—Bovee.

Kindness in ourselves is the honey that blunts the sting of unkindness in another. —Landor.

When death, the great reconciler, it is near our tenderness we repeat, but our severity.—George Eliot.

Judge of a jest when you have done laughing.—W. Lloyd.

OLD GOLD

In city by city
And town by town,
Through street after street
Men go up and down.
Through the whole, wide land
At each home they ask:
"Have you any old gold?"
What a curious task!

They are buying the chain
On youth's neck that gleamed,
They are buying the dream
Which a lover dreamed.
They are weighing a locket
That held a lover's face,
They are buying a cross
From a source hone can trace.

They are getting a mother's Marriage band
And the ring she took
From a dead child's hand.
It will all be purged
Of its dross and dreams
And hidden away
From the sun's warm gleam.

CANADA IS A LAND OF MAGNIFICENT DISTANCES, it has been well said, and there are many people in the United States who still think that Canada is just a narrow strip along the great Lakes and river St. Lawrence, sparsely inhabited. F'r instance a resident of New York City asked recently a visitor from Belleville if he knew a certain party in Canada. Where does he live? asked the Bellevillian. "I dunno," said the New Yorker "Just back of Canada somewhere." Two motorists from the sunny south passed through Belleville recently. They stopped their car and asked a policeman, "where are the Dionne quintuplets?" The policeman knew his quints and told them that Callander was a matter of over two hundred miles from here. "Do tell," said the motorists, "a man up the road a piece said that the quintuplets were down this way about a mile." Was he trying to spoof them or did he not know — they were strangers and he took 'em in or somepin.

WENT OVER THE SUITE WITH A FINE TOOTH COMB, said the Toronto Globe in reporting the theft of $7,500 worth of jewels from the visiting prince and princess on their honeymoon. The article also stated that this suite had been occupied previously by Premier W. R. Bennett and also by Sir Edward Beatty. Who and what did they expect or suspect hunting with a fine-toothed comb—the wicked flea—which gets a move on when no man pursueth—or mayhap a clue? Eh, what? Suppoin' Toronto dicks caught a clue on a fine-toothed comb, would they get it X-ray'd or hoovered. Considering the fact that Toronto 'tecs were able to bring several desperate criminals from Cornwall to Cobourg without losing them, and then wouldn't have lost them had not the pangs of hunger compelled them to all eat at once at a nearby beanery, they should be able to get a real clue on even a coarse-toothed comb—and if given enough time, a century or two, solve the Ambrose Small mystery. So what?

THE ENGLISH WAY

In a recent issue of the Manchester Guardian appear two significant accounts of the way in which British courts handle cases of drunken driving.

One Burton butcher, was arraign-ed in court for driving a truck when he was under the influence of liquor. Sentence—fined £25 and ordered never to drive a motor vehicle as long as he lives.

William Neale, engineer, arrested for a similar offence during which his car struck a cyclist, also was found guilty. Sentence—two months in jail at hard labor and licence suspended for life.

In neither case was there any loss of life. The menace, in other words, was almost entirely potential.

The important point about all this is says the Kingston Whig-Standard that England makes second offences of the type in question extremely unlikely. Contempt of court hangs like a veritable Sword of Damocles over the head of every erstwhile drunken driver who has been denied the privilege of operating a car.

LOOKING BACKWARD
GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
NOV. 7TH, 1915.

Lieut. Theakstel of Belleville, who is in his twenties, claims to be the first Canadian to design and build a complete aeroplane. It is designed for use either land or water, the pontoon feels being interchangeable with wheels. It gives a speed of over 100 miles an hour and a power of rising from land or water with a run of 300 feet.

The schooner Grace M. Filer, Capt. Fagan in command, arrived here yesterday from Georgetown with a cargo of coal. This will be her last trip this season.

Mr. and Mrs. George Robson of Napanee spent the week end in the city.

At the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society the following officers were elected: Hon. President, Mr. Thos. Hichie; President, Mr. A. E. Bailey; Vice President, Mr. E. R. McIlride; Recording Secretary, Mr. Walter Mott; Treasurer, Mr. H. F. Ketcheson; Auditor, Mr. F. C. Laurin; Hon. Solicitor, Mr. Wm. Carney.

30 Years Ago
Nov. 7th, 1906

Chief of Police Coleman of Trenton was in the city to-day.

Messrs. J. Reid and N. Lancaster, members of the county Council from the northern divisions, are in the city to attend County Court.

Col. Fenton, D.D. G. M. of the Masonic Order, accompanied by a number of the members of the craft, will pay an official visit to Craig Lodge, Deseronto, this evening.

Union Methodist evangelistic services are being conducted by Mr. A. Gordon, K.C., and Mrs. Gordon of Ottawa, at Bridge Street Church.

The new revetment wall will greatly improve the appearance of the landscape as seen from the lower bridge, but some people are wondering if it will stand the onslaughts of the ice in the spring seeing that what experts call "dry stone" was alleged to be absent.

40 Years Ago
NOV. 7TH, 1895.

About seventy carloads of stone from International Bridge have arrived at Brockville from Point Anne.

Mrs. (Rev.) J. A. McCamus is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. W. H. Campbell is spending a few days in the northern part of the county.

Mr. J. C. Wilson of Glenora, is in the city and is the guest of his father-in-law, Mr. A. McMeachan.

The water famine still continues throughout the county.

Dr. Yeomans and Mr. Wm. Stoddart of Deseronto were in town last evening.

Mr. C. C. Hunt has returned from Toronto and Hamilton where he spent several days on business.

Mr. W. A. Carson of the Canning Factory has returned after a business trip to the western part of the province.

50 Years Ago
NOV. 7TH, 1885.

A horse belonging to the Belleville Rolling Mill Car Company died this morning.

Mr. R. Barnes will be given a benefit at the Opera house this evening, when the "Deserted Village" will be produced.

Mr. John Taylor caught a 18 pound Muskinonge yesterday evening fishing between Bigger and Baker's Islands. This makes the second fish Mr. Taylor has caught this season.

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club will meet at Hanaly's Restaurant to-night for business.

Awnings have almost disappeared from Front Street.

Scrubwoman Knows Her Actors, Not by Sight but by Their Rooms

Hollywood, Nov. 7 (AP)—Madge McDermott knows more about the movie stars than does Hollywood —yet she has only seen one off the screen and none on it.

Unlike other studio workers, her "office hours" uninfluenced by the caprices of the business, are strictly those of five—that is, nine at night until five in the morning.

Madge McDermott is a scrubwoman. She is 60 and probably cares about $18 a week. Her memories she regards as priceless.

She has her own recollection of Will Rogers.

"Seems like he must have come in the book himself to get his clothes off," she said. "I used to find clothes, money, papers, even his shoes in the drawers of the floor.

"Ronald Colman is a little like that, too.

"Shirley Temple's bungalow doesn't take five minutes to fix. I guess her mother don't let her mess it up.

She said Janet Gaynor once left a note and $100 for her at Christmas.

In 15 years she has seen one picture and one movie star in person. The picture she doesn't remember. The star was Warner Baxter.

HARRY O'DONNELL ARRAIGNED TODAY

sister in a brutal attack in an east end parking Monday night. Miss Edith Rapley, the victim's closest friend, also said O'Donnell was known to her.

Wife Not Alarmed.

Hunted as a prisoner nursing home here are keeping the news from Mrs. O'Donnell that her husband Harry is charged with the murder of pretty 20-year-old Ruth Taylor.

Mrs. O'Donnell gave birth to a baby boy Saturday and her husband visited the hospital Saturday, Sunday and Monday, nurses said. He was expected again by his wife today, the half-day off.

"When they catch the man I hope he gets his desserts," Mrs. O'Donnell is reported to have told the nurses after reading newspaper accounts of the discovery of Miss Taylor's battered body in an east-end field.

Friends Rally to Defence.

Family, friends and business associates came staunchly to Harry O'Donnell's defence today with an unshakable confidence that the 25-year-old gasoline station attendant is not guilty of murdering Ruth Taylor in a brutal attack in the shadows of a railway bridge east and of the city Monday night.

While O'Donnell returned to police cell after a preliminary appearance when the murder charge was laid on him, his sister Margaret declared, "I know he didn't do it, because he had a son Saturday and his whole heart and soul were wrapped up in that baby." She also said her brother was devoted to his wife.

His mother, injured in a fall down stairs, was said to be in serious condition today with the shock of her son's arrest complicating her injuries.

PRIME MINISTER ISSUES APPEAL

Joins With Former Premiers in Support of Poppy Day Fund

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King joined with two former Prime Ministers, Sir Robert Borden and Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett in appealing for support for the Canadian Legion's Poppy Day Fund and in stressing the significance of Remembrance Day Mr. King's message said:

"Remembrance Day recalls both the horror and the heroism of war. With the speech of traditional strife again visible over the horizon the sacrifices and the sufferings of those gallant Canadians who risked their all in the Great War is revealed anew in a light more vivid than the dim of many of the years that have since intervened.

"As we wear a poppy or lay a wreath, we honor the memory of those who sleep in Flanders fields and in hallowed ground elsewhere. We do more. We extend a friendly helping hand to the dependents of those whose lives were sacrificed and to thousands of others of our fellow countrymen who, shattered by the shocks of war, remained crippled and infirm and who remain among us, many of them permanently impaired in body or in mind many of them wholly unable to care for themselves."

Sir Robert said: "Remembrance is remembrance to the end of recording. Twenty years ago loyal duty and humanitarian sacrifice that love can never forget. So let remembrance and love pour forth of our abundance to honor duty and sacrifice."

Mr. Bennett said: "Remembrance Day is one of the most impressive of our national holidays and no activity which calls for aid of the services by Canadians is at the moment as important as the Poppy Day appeal."

'BILLY' SUNDAY DIES AT AGE 72

Heart Attack at Chicago Carries Off Noted Evangelist

Chicago, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday, 72, well-known evangelist, died suddenly last night of angina pectoris, at the home of his brother-in-law here.

Sunday, who came here several days ago from Winona Lake, Ind., dined with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Thompson, his brother-in-law and sister. He went upstairs shortly before 8 p.m., after complaining of illness, and died before a physician arrived.

Was Ball Player

The Rev. William A. Sunday, familiarly known throughout the country as "Billy" Sunday, was the originator of the most dramatic and sensational type of religious service ever introduced to the American people, including the professional baseball player when he was at the height of his career, he became one of the most successful evangelists in the country, and even the large cities were unable to provide auditoriums of sufficient capacity to accommodate the crowds that sought admission to his revival meetings.

Mr. Sunday was born at Ames, Ia., Nov. 19, 1863, and after being graduated from high school at Nevada, Ia., studied at Northwestern University. He was a proficient baseball player for seven years, 1883 to 1890, played in the National League with the Chicago, Pittsburg and Philadelphia teams. He ranked high as an outfield, was one of the speediest baserunners in the league, and above the ordinary as a hitter.

Time Extension Asked For Purchase of Plates

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 7.—(CP)—The year-end deadline for purchase of 1936 automobile licenses and drivers' permits will deal a blow to merchants, it was claimed by Ald. Percy Begley, when discussing a resolution the Ontario Government extend the time-limit until Feb. 1 at city council last night.

There are 32,000 automobiles in the Windsor district that will not be the government approximately $360,000 in license fees it was estimated by Ald. Begley. If this money was retained by motorists it would probably be spent on Christmas gifts, he said.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

MME. ARLETTE STAVISKY

Charged with helping her late husband in his $10,000,000 operations, Mme. Arlette Stavisky, beautiful widow of the French swindler, has gone on trial in Paris. Two members of the French chamber of deputies, charged with using their influence to further Stavisky's swindles, also faced trial.

C.P.R. CELEBRATES HALF CENTURY

Anniversary of Completion of First Transcontinental Railway

Montreal, Nov. 7 (CP)—Fifty years ago today a cheer rang from the throat of nearly 60 men huddled together deep in the Canadian Rockies and died away as it echoed from peak to peak.—Today marked the 50th anniversary of completion of Canada's first transcontinental railroad, one of the great events in the Dominion's history, under the name of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

On November 7, 1885, Donald A. Smith, with careful taps, drove a common iron spike high up in the Rockies at Craigellachie as a few railroad executives and workers looked on. The spike linked the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans by rail stretched 4,000 miles across Canada.

Little pomp or ceremony marked the event.

PREMIER KING ON WAY TO CAPITOL

Indications Point to Early Trade Treaty With U. S.

Montreal, Nov. 7 (CP)—Silent as to what matters would be discussed in the United States capital, Prime Minister King today was speeding southward towards Washington. The Premier passed through Montreal last night on the first leg of his trip to the White House.

While Mr. King continued to withhold definite announcement of the purpose of his visit, all indications appeared to point to early negotiation of a reciprocal trade treaty with the United States.

Presence in Washington of three departmental trade experts and the fact Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under Secretary of External Affairs, is on the train with the Premier lent support to this belief. The same departmental officials opened trade negotiations under the Bennett Government.

Mr. King is due in Washington at noon today.

Other matters of interest besides reciprocity are expected to be mentioned in talks between the leaders of the two countries. Among these are those with Russia and application of sanctions against Italy, it was stated unofficially.

ELECTION CAMPAIGN IN BRITAIN DRAGS

London, Nov. 7.—(CP Cable)—The election campaign entered its final week today with signs it was beginning to drag and a noticeable lack of new developments.

Three Edinburgh constituencies had a new campaign system to discuss. The Women's Citizen Association in North, Centre and East Edinburgh is holding public meetings at which candidates of all parties will appear in turn. The essential purpose is to provide a personal contact with the candidates.

AMERKS FIGURE ON REACHING A PLAYOFF BERTH

Dutton Has Splendid Mixture of Rookies And Veterans

HAWKS READY

Morenz And Chabot Will Not Play For Awhile

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With higher hopes than any of his record predecessors dared to express, Marvin (Red) Dutton sends his New York Americans against the Black Hawks at Chicago tonight in the opening game of the National Hockey League season. Under Dutton's leadership, Americans figure to have a chance of reaching the playoffs.

It is a fact, that only two of the eight teams in the N.H.L. won't reach the playoffs next spring, but so often have the Americans been one of the few left behind, that it will be a triumphant campaign for the spangled team if they finish anywhere but fourth and last in the Canadian section.

The husky Dutton, far from depending on sprightly youth to carry the New Yorkers out of the rut, will throw an experienced, seasoned checkers in front of the fast-skating Black Hawks tonight. And the Hawks may find there is unaccustomed scoring power in the renovated American machine.

Oldsters on Forward Line

One forward line, for instance, is made up of such old-timers as Nels Stewart, Harold (Mush) March and Oliver. To make room for Stewart, who joined the Americans from Boston and Cotton from Toronto, the New York club released Normie Himes and Babbit McVeigh, also oldsters.

Dutton is hopeful he kept the right veterans and not the wrong ones to team with the younger Pete Burns, Sweeney Schriner, Art Chapman, Lorne Carr, Tommy Anderson, Fred (Bingo) Robertson, Carl Voss, Hoy Worters will be in goal with Dutton, Bill Regan, Ace Bailey and Red Jarvis as coaches.

It's a question of speed and sustained drive with the Hawks, just as a year. The attack will suffer tonight if Doc Romnes is not among the bench because of a wrenched back and there will be worries about the defence if Lorne Chabot's injured knee doesn't permit him to play goal.

Morenz Out For Time

Morenz's place would be taken by Eddie Costello, star centre of London Tecumsehs, intermediate champion team, and Chabot's by Mike Karakas, capable goalie in the days of the American Association.

The other six N.H.L. teams will drift into the campaign at intervals with Boston Bruins and the Stanley Cup champions, Montreal Maroons, making a belated start in Montreal on Saturday, Nov. 16.

When the Americans get through tonight at Chicago they will hurry to Toronto to help the Leafs open the N.H.L. champions, open the season in Madison Square Garden on Saturday night. Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers will get going Thursday night at Detroit and Montreal Canadiens will first be heard from meet Ottawa Senators' major league in Montreal.

JACK TAYLOR TO HELP ARGONAUTS

One of Best Broken Field Runners in The Prov-

Ince

Toronto, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Toronto Argonauts, still revered as highly as any team to win the eastern football championship, will have a pinch-hitter on the bench, when they face Ottawa Senators on the Big Four game here Saturday. A fellow by the name of Jack Taylor, whose terrific bursts of speed carried him around the ends and through broken fields two years ago, that put him on the all-eastern team and which, in fact, almost made Argonauts Canadian champions. He's coming back because the Scullers need him.

Argos most defeat Ottawa here Saturday to have a chance to capture the following Saturday to assure themselves of the Big Four title. The 21-8 beating they took from Hamilton Tigers last week won't let Tigers only one game behind and the Bengals are favored to beat Montreal Wanderers here.

Taylor can't forward pass like Tony Rose or even Lou Smith, the iron-legged Tony, but he can run the ball like a jet-propelled. The 8th pound sec. who retired at the start of this season for business reasons, saw in the long run against Ottawa, the Scullers will be satisfied.

These Big Four games between Argos and Montreal-Tigers—will share Saturday's football headlines with the McGill-Queen's struggle at Kingston. A Queen's victory over the Redmen will send the Kingston club to Varsity Stadium for a sudden-death playoff with the undefeated University of Toronto team.

Tardily finished its schedule at London against the Western Mustangs. The O.R.F.U. schedule will be finished at Hamilton where Toronto-Balmy Beach meet defeat the Cubs to qualify for a two-game playoff against Sarnia Imperials.

Belleville can boast of one energetic sporting organization that is slowly but surely advancing to a position where it may become one of the strongest in its particular category in the province. We refer to the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. From a season ago to the present time the bowling club came into being in Belleville, they built over a portion of the Exhibition Park and sat back for a full season, while these greens acquired that mellow and best green in this part of the province. This fall the club completed its second full season and today we find lawn bowling on the completed six rinks, the pride of the community, with the club's membership increasing to practically capacity numbers in both ladies' and men's groups.

Today the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club has twelve available greens, all in first-class condition, and the envy of practically all the province. Of the twelve greens, six are open to the public, that is to say, the bowlers can play either lengthwise or crosswise of the rinks, without being unduly held in this manner. Eyebrow greens are reserved for the contesting bowlers bowling on the championship and league schedules in an easterly and westerly direction one night, while the following night the contests are run in a northerly and southerly direction. As for the four greens at the rear, however, they are open to lawn places in a north-south direction, the greens not being sufficiently long to permit of twenty-one ends being played. A splendid system to allow east-west play. A delegation from the Bowling Club recently met the local Parks Commission with the intimation that they, the bowlers, were prepared at the Exhibition Park grounds to be lengthened five feet westerly and established in a slight way in both directions, which will permit eight ends to be played at one time. The work of enlargement will be in the hands of both parties and when completed the lawn bowling club will have 18 perfect greens, where they may enjoy the game in every direction desired. When completed next year the Belleville Lawn Club will boast of the finest greens in the province, and also the most spacious, thanks to the assistance of the Parks Commission.

Here's today's laugh—

Lunatic in asylum yard, meets passing superintendent: "Have you?"

Superintendent: "I'm the new superintendent."

Lunacy: "Oh it won't take them long to knock that out of you." (It was Napoleon when I came here."

Now that notices have been mailed by the O.D.B.H. office's notifying all clubs of the league's annual meeting at Peterboro, on November 22, is it not high time the Belleville Amateur Baseball Association held its annual meeting? Local representatives and official clubs of this city will be named in the near future and the intricacies of the local baseball moguls presented at the November meeting. Already Oshawa, Peterboro, Kingston and Napanee have unofficially announced their entry for 1936, but what of Belleville and possibly other centres in the east? Then again the local baseball mentors of the various parishes should convene and closely scrutinize the league constitution and by-laws, as any amendments to these must be presented at the annual meeting in November, and not at the semi-annual meeting next April. Then again if any individual club wishes to make amendments to the O.B.A.A. constitution or by-laws, they must first recommend these changes to their particular league, which in turn may present such amendments at the provincial annual meeting that is, providing the suggested meets with the approval and majority vote of the league.

There is little left to say in regard to the evening's activities at the Belleville Rowing Club, featuring a finished bout between Joe Kalchuck and Chief Lynx, with us time limit. The Arena should see a bumper crowd as the semi-final bout is equally as good and sees Walter Parnell meet the Terrible Turk, Ali Hassan, the man of Herculean strength. Last a match of strength versus brutality, Parnell supplying the brutality. The quality of the opening bout is well known as Jim Wilkins, of Toledo, and Basil Daly of Petrolia. Daly has appeared here before and won the admiration of the fans as naturally he will be out to retain his prestige.

Lovers of baseball a decade or less ago, will be glad to learn that Dr. Harry W. Blakely, who starred for the Belleville Nationals, when they won the senior O.B.A.A. championship back in 1923, has opened an office for the practice of his profession at Sudbury. Dr. Harry was always a favourite on the baseball diamond and undoubtedly will carry his gracious manner into his profession. Welcome home, Dr. Blakely! is our well wish, and also the wish of all who knew him in years past.

Pete Morgan, erstwhile Belleville and Brockville pugilist, turned out to practice at the Maple Leaf Gardens with the former Belleville lad, senior O. H. A. recently. Pete expects to join the Leafs in Chicago as one of the faster Mercantile clubs in the Queen city. Incidentally we hear that Jimmy Orsini, ex-Belleville boy who has had a varied career with the New York Americans these two years back, was shunted "down the river" to the Leafs' farm at Springfield, Mass. It seems 'Red' could not come to salary terms with Manager Dunnigan and failed to report at the Americ's autumn training camp in Oakville. Dutton and Dunn are just prior to the American's departure for Chicago.

PRY OFF LID IN INTERNATIONAL

Opening Games' to Be Played in Windsor And London

(By The Canadian Press)

The International Hockey League equipped with a new president and two new clubs bringing it to eight club stature, opens its 1935-36 season tonight on Canadian ice, London and Windsor fan will see the Leagues opening games and the league's entire eight splinders will be functioning by Sunday night.

Windsor's opener brings together the old rivals, the Bulldogs and Detroit Olympics, 1934-35 League champions. Buffalo Bisons, under Frank Nighbor, help the Tecumseths inaugurate the campaign in London.

Olympics, a remarkably powerful minor league outfit last season, are generally favour. It provide the fireworks again under the leadership of Donie Bowie, who started in this hockey business as a trainer and worked up from there.

Hughes was appointed boss of the Olympics last season and scored a rare success. He again has the benefit of all the surplus Detroit Red Wings, and the ex-mystique of his players being available to the National League Club at all times.

ONLY REMNANT OF TEAM LEFT

Little Hope of Halifax Representing Canada at Olympics

Halifax, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Only a remnant of the valiant pack of Wolverines who brought the Allan Cup to Halifax remained on Jack Dwyer's lineup today. They were definitely out of the Maritime Hockey League and had little hope of going to Berlin to represent Canada in the Olympic games.

Five of the smartest puck-chasers along the championship route are in their uniforms—two to hit the penalty-bench and three to seek berths in Northern Ontario—and Coach "Red" Stuart was gone.

Dwyer had visions of an Allan Cup-Olympic trip, however, and in an announcement last night, he said a financial support was forthcoming. Wolverines augmented by certain players selected by the Olympic Committee, would begin a tour of Canada and the eastern United States to attain the necessary physical condition and polish to play to make a creditable showing.

CHILEAN TEAM WELL IN FRONT

Ride Difficult Jumps at N.Y. Show With Eight Faults

New York, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Canada's military team to the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden today in its bid for the International Trophy presented by Colonel-in-Chief Edward Prince of Wales.

Peta Morgan, erstwhile Belleville and Brockville puncher, turned out to practice at the Maple Leaf Gardens with the former Belleville lad, senior O. H. A. recently. Pete expects to join the Leafs in Chicago as one of the faster Mercantile clubs in the Queen city. Incidentally we hear that Jimmy Orsini, ex-Belleville boy who has had a varied career with the New York Americans these two years back, was shunted "down the river" to the Leafs' farm at Springfield, Mass. It seems 'Red' could not come to salary terms with Manager Dunnigan and failed to report at the Americ's autumn training camp in Oakville. Dutton and Dunn are just prior to the American's departure for Chicago.

Holway Sold To Cleveland

London, Ont., Nov. 7—Carrying out their plan of making London the "baseball centre" of Canada, London Tecumseths yesterday sold the services of Holway (Tooie) Holway outright to Cleveland Falcons.

Although the sale occurred on the eve of the Tees' International league baseball season, it was not unexpected, Pittsburg Pirate scouts also had a bid in for Holway.

Tecumseths have completed arrangements for the acquisition of their roster, and club officials have stated that they have also secured a change of scenery after having played here for the past five seasons.

Car Is Smashed, Driver's Nose Bleeds

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Nov. 7. (CP)—Apparently the front of his auto was almost demolished, radiator crushed right back on the engine, headlights and spare required to splinters, Charles Gribble escaped with only a bloody nose when the car crashed into a trolley light night. Gribble faces a charge of driving while intoxicated.

The case was adjourned until Fri. day with no plea taken.

FIGHTING IRISH WHIP OHIO IN ROUSING FINISH

Although down 13-0 at the end of the third quarter, a fighting team from Notre Dame unearthed a terrific finish to beat Ohio State University 18-13 in the most important game of the United States football season to date. Ohio State and Notre Dame were both unbeaten prior to this contest, and both were pointed for national honors and possible competition in the Rose Bowl game. Ohio were forced to whip the fighting Irish, and for three-quarters looked the champions. But three touchdowns in the last quarter were forced over by Notre Dame. TOP picture shows the Irish eleven pushing across the goal line to register their second major score of the last quarter. BELOW: Boucher of Ohio State is seen kicking behind his own goal line while hurried by Notre Dame tacklers. The game was played at Columbus, Ohio.

QUEEN'S MUST WIN TO FORCE FINAL

In the event of Queen's University defeating McGill in Kingston Saturday to clinch another place in the Intercollegiate Football Union, a sudden-death playoff game between Queen's and University of Toronto, league leaders, will be held in Toronto to determine the Intercollegiate champion. Warren Stevens, athletic director of U. of T., and Varsity football coach, announced last night. The game will likely be played Nov. 16.

The winner of the sudden-death tie has the right to enter the Canadian Rugby Union finals.

HITLER ASSURES WORLD ATHLETES

Religious Susceptibilities of Non-German Athletes Will Not be Hurt

(By John A. Bouman)

(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Berlin, Nov. 7.—(AP)— Reichsfuehrer Hitler today gave Count Henri De Baillet-Latour, president of the International Olympic Committee, his personal assurance nothing would be done to hurt the susceptibilities of persons of religious beliefs or races other than the German in the forthcoming Berlin Olympiad.

Count Baillet-Latour told the Associated Press after a full half-hour talk with Hitler, he came away completely satisfied on the points which had aroused some controversy abroad particularly in the United States.

The Count asserted a campaign against Germany as scene of Olympic games had been conducted for political and unsporting motives, un supported by other National Committees.

"We can disregard it because it is based on misstatements and many lies," he said.

"Under these circumstances the International Committee has neither right nor reason to object to the games being held in Berlin.

"If any National Committee tried to prevent people from coming there the International Committee will take steps to remove such objections."

"Jewish sportsmen have assured me positively no distinction has been made as regards race and color," he added.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside?

Do you know they can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and remove the cause of Piles, to be free of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation, congestion and inertia in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flabby, full of impure congested blood and weakens the rectal membranes.

So if you would have relief from piles you should use an internal medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Cochrane. HEM-ROID banishes piles by relieving the cause. It stimulates circulation, eases the congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that old Canadian war veteran, whose body was found in his home in Redford Township, near Detroit, Mich., believed to have been caused by Leart failure, was judged to have occurred three months ago.

MISS HSIU-CHANG

This beautiful mermaid, who holds a multitude of aquatic records in her homeland, is Miss Yang Hsiu-Chang, premier woman swimmer of China. She was photographed when she appeared at the celebrations marking Shanghai's new $10,000,000 civic stadium.

The auditor's statement, attached reads:

This is to certify that I have completed the audit of the Belleville General Hospital books for the year ending September 30, 1935. Attached hereto is statement of operating account and balance sheet which are made up in conformity with Ontario Government requirements. The Operating report, before allowance for depreciation, and taking into consideration $3,953.60 for Bad Debts shows a loss of $6953.38 and after writing off depreciation a net loss of $3,943.85.

Hank Balances

I have confirmed the bank balances as shown with the Bank and find them to be correct.

Inventory

The inventory was taken by the Secretary who certifies it is complete and correct and that all the items of which he has knowledge are included in the balance sheet.

Investments

These consist of the following:

|---|---|
| $10,000.00 4% British Columbia Debentures fully registered. | |
| $30,000.00 3½% Saskatchewan Debentures not registered. | |
| $10,000.00 4% Alberta debentures not registered. | |
| $22,500.00 3½% Dominion of Canada debentures not registered. | |

You will note from the above that the only securities registered in the name of the Governors of the Hospital are $12,000.00 British Columbia. I would recommend that action be taken at once to have the remaining securities registered in the name of the Governors of the Hospital.

Accounts Receivable

Last year I called attention to accounts outstanding against the Counties of Hastings and Northumberland and would again draw this condition to your attention.

Accounts Payable

It is the custom to have the Head of the Department sign as to the receipt of goods and the accounts presented to the Board for payment. I would strongly recommend that all accounts be approved for payment by the Superintendent and then certified to by her before being presented to the Board.

Income

The amount now carried is $270,000.00. The Co-Insurance clause calls for 80% so be carried. This amount is now almost $14,000.00 below the value as shown on your balance sheet. I have examined the surety bond of Mr. T. Macbeth and find the same to be in order.

Respectfully submitted

F. G. Chamberlain, Auditor.

MARRIAGE LEGALITY FIGURES IN CHARGE OF NON-SUPPORT

Montreal, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Faced with evidence indicating the marriage of two Roman Catholics by a Protestant clergyman had been annulled by one judge and later upheld by another, Judge A. Monet today reserved judgment in a non-support case until November 15.

Evidence showed Louis Sorbonne sued for non-support, and Clementine Doche were married by a Protestant clergyman in France some years ago. They came to Canada and in 1927 the late Mr. Justice Coderre rendered a judgment annulling the marriage. The following year, however, the marriage was declared binding by Mr. Justice Surveyer.

Judge Monet said he would have to settle the question of the legality of the marriage before deciding whether the woman was entitled to support.

YOUTH SEES WEST IN DRAMATIC TRIP

Jack White is Back at School After "Discovering" Canada

Jack White, 18-year-old youth of this city is back in classes again in the local collegiate institute after having "covered" half the continent during the summer vacation. He has left the thrill of depending solely upon his own resources during the lengthy trip, and of working in the western harvest fields of Canada.

The schoolboy adventurer, who travelled with only enough expense money to see him through from city to city and who depended only upon the rides offered by kindly motorists over the lengthy distances ended finally at Saltcoats, Saskatchewan, where he was engaged for a period in harvesting and exploring the western country.

Leaving Belleville he travelled along the main roads, getting occasional lifts in cars and trucks, and finally reached Windsor. Crossing into Detroit without any particular trouble, then covered several of the States of the middle west. He crossed the international border at Manitoba and continued west.

At Regina, as thoughts turned homeward to Belleville, the boy had assumed for a time the role of valet to several car loads of cattle and managed to make a lengthy journey from that city to Toronto. The best part of this trip was the pay, he recalled today with a chuckle. From Toronto the trip back home again was comparatively easy.

"You'll be able to write a book on your experiences," suggested the Daily Ontario Intelligencer today.

"It was better to have had them than write about them," returned the youth.

Geography of this country has a new appeal in his studies, he now admits.

The Kellogg Company wants to help you have a fine Christmas. Just write a slogan for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Send it to us with the top from a package of ALL-BRAN. Every one has an opportunity to win.

For years, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN used the slogan: Help Yourself to Health. We received thousands of letters from folks whose lives have been made brighter by this cereal. Out of their sunny letters was born a new slogan: Keep on the Sunny Side of Life.

Now we are looking to tomorrow. How would you describe the benefits of ALL-BRAN—in a slogan easy to say and easy to remember?

The best way to discover the value of ALL-BRAN is to go to your grocer's, buy a package, and try it yourself. Seeing how much it helps your family will give you many slogan-ideas.

Weigh these facts too: Many meals served today lack needed "bulk." Often, these "Minus Meals" lead to common constipation.

Frequently, this lack of "bulk" causes people to feel under par—without realizing what is wrong. Cathartics often fail to give more than temporary relief. It's safer to correct this condition by diet rather than drugs.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies generous "bulk" in mild form. Also vitamin B and iron. Serve it regularly as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into appetizing recipes. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Enter the contest! The money prizes are generous. But the new degree of family fitness you'll all enjoy will be worth ten times as much!

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Dorsa

He left the land development office and looked up and down the street, holding his hand up for a taxi. A bus hove in sight, and he restrained himself. Remembered that from then on taxi was a word in the dictionary, but not anything which Swayne could fool around with.

Dropping a nickel into the coin box, he rode downtown, impatiently eyed the numbering, slow progress of the big vehicle.

He leaped up the wide stairs to the luxurious apartment Allison occupied four at a time, and jabbed the bell vigorously several times, ignoring the previous occasion when patient people who put her bell out of order, in their simple fashion, pressed it.

"Well, really, Michael!" Allison greeted him annoyedly, no vestige of melting smile, and warm sympathy on her lovely face. "I must say you're plenty to explain! Walking out on our honeymoon like that without so much as an apology or explanation! Forgetting your engagements with your customers, your business...."

"Sorry, Allison." He broke in a brittle, crisp tone she had heard him use only on the few occasions when he had been irritated, impatient over someone's stupidity. "I want my things. I'm in a hurry. I haven't a moment to lose!"

"Where are you going, Michael?" Allison's voice was sharp, shrill, and she did not realize that in that single revealing sentence she had proved that no amount of money, no amount of riches and sophistication can ever divide one class of women from another, when it comes to the primeval attitude of love.

"Back to reality, Allison." Michael said briefly, yanking open his pigskin luggage and cramming things into it in mad haste. "Back to honesty and decency." He looked into eyes to her white, stark face, and his mouth twisted with humble contrite wistfulness. "Back to loving.... If I can ever make myself worthy of her"

"What about me, Michael Swayne? After all I've done for you...." Allison's voice rose and fell, getting shriller, huskier, as the words she knew poured out, the words and words and words that painted her side of the story. Never had she been the Michael Swayne she had tried to acquire by fair means or foul.

"I'm sorry, Allison," Michael said simply. "I.... I must have been crazy. I.... I'll pay you back. Every penny."

Allison laughed disagreeably. "That's rich, Michael! That's good! Pay me back! You never paid for anything in all your life, and you know it! You don't know the meaning of the word! And you never will! You can't."

Michael flinched visibly before her assailing indictment, then bent his head lower over the packing. It was true. True of the old Michael Swayne. But no longer true. Not now!

"I.... I'm sorry, Allison. I will pay you! In cash. Money I'll earn."

"I don't want money, Michael, and you know it!" she flared again, fully. "I never did! Whatever gave you such a ridiculous notion?"

He stirred uncomfortably under this new, startling, bald statement.

"I must have been blind, stupid," he spoke slowly, aloud as it to himself. His fingers toyed with the lock on the luggage nervously, "dreaming, not to guess. You thought I'd fall in love with you, Allison. Divorce Judy and marry you.... Is that it? Is that what you meant?"

Allison laughed shrilly, "Are you completely crazy, Mike Swayne? How could you marry anyone—without a dime to your name? Without a job! You haven't said a word since you took that cute little makebelieve job at Remsdale's, and you couldn't even buy your own cigarettes! And," she concluded viciously, "if you think I'd marry anybody and lose this all-important alimony I've.... Why, you're crazy as well as...."

Michael stared at her mutely, digesting the startling truth of every word she had spoken. Pinching fiercely at his stark, brutal exposure of a modern gigolo, a 1935 American gigolo, she had catalogued as she fought ruthlessly tooth and claw, to keep him, keep him through his very indebtedness to her, to announce his plan for regaining his manhood, his independence.

There was more. Much, much more. Ending finally, in tears, in hysterics and abject pleading as Allison implored him not to go. To forgive her humor and start over again and begin over again. They'd go away, to Bermuda, he had always wanted to go to Bermuda. They'd travel, until they'd spent all the money.

Michael jet himself out of the luxurious apartment, his ears echoing with the sound of her spasmodic sobs coming from Allison's closed bedroom. He went down to the Y.M.C.A. and hired a clean, servery plain room, registered for an indefinite stay, and then went to a pigskin luggage, now containing only such things as he had originally packed to use. Things he was going to "travel" in, a pawnshop. An almost new dinner suit, golf suits, new and expensively tailored. A signet ring. A costly wrist watch and several cigarette lighters. A gold fountain pen and pencil, engraved monogrammed. A set of golf clubs in a super bag, containing thirty-four matched clubs. A monogrammed, silver cocktail shaker, lined with gold. A fur coat, almost new. A London-made wallet with gold monogram. And so on. All the glittering, costly, superfluous luxuries that had been the glamorous margins on which the old Michael Swayne played his life. Played it for a fall that almost saw him counted out for good, before the bell saved him. A bell generously giving him a long count, by a man he knew, now, was or had been, a rival. A rival, had fate only altered the pattern to give him more than a modicum of luck, to be a worthy part of worshipper..... not worshipped. Ted Hoyt.

He bargained with the little, furtive-eyed, hard-eyed pawnbroker in hard, ruthless fashion. He refused to back down, did not, once, manifest the easy courteous, careless munificence of that other Michael Swayne. Every dollar counted now; every dime, every penny! Not for himself. For Judy.

They meant.... flowers. Books. A little quilted silk bed-jacket. Rosewood powder, because she adored them. Jig-saw puzzles and a bedtray to work them on. Because they were fun.

He steered grimly away from the shops he had once patronized because they were smart, expensive and generously disposed to credit accounts. He walked blocks to tiny side-street shops, and he hounded clerks until he got exactly what he wanted, and he paid his money down in cash for each thing he bought.

A book of puzzles, and a mechanical pencil, with a box of extra refills. Three boxes of Egnaw puzzles and a little gay, enameled breakfast table, for bed. A ridiculous, gay little colored elephant, hand-made ad stuffed. And, last, but not least, quilted silk jacket, because blue was Judy's color. He liked it on her. And she loved it. Two detective novels in bright jackets and a copy of the new Continental Magazine and a movie magazine. Judy loved movies.

Lastly, in a tiny, cupboard-size shop, a bunch of purple violets that brought a lump in his throat as he flashed out change to pay for them. Judy had always adored violets.

He walked all the way to the hospital. The Peter Hoorck Hospital, though it was blocks and blocks, and he had already walked miles that day.

He rang the bell, and lifted his humble, dark eyes to the quiet, questioning eyes in a wistful, unspoken contrition.

"Mrs. Swayne," he said thickly, huskily, "may I see her please? I'm Michael Swayne!"

The nurse hesitated.

CHAPTER XX.

JUDY

Dr. Remsdale led the way to Judy's room, and he stood back in the shadows as if reluctant to trust Michael alone with his patient. As if he knew much of the case and was convinced it could do Judy no good to run any further risk.

The nurse stacked the packages on the table, as if they were of very little consequence, and then faded herself quietly, efficiently about the room. Michael waited, and it seemed as if Judy would never stir again. As if he must pay for this terrible thing he had done to her, by watching her die, there before him.

"Has.... has she been awake this morning?" he asked, and the nurse nodded.

"The sleeping potion will wear off soon now," she said, her lips tight with the condemning memory of Judy's illness, her terrible, hysterical weeping, her ceaseless repetition of his name. The only name she voiced. A word she spoke like a prayer before an altar lighted with tall candles, in the dim, hallowed sacredness of church.

"Michael," she had whispered over and over again, "Michael don't be angry at me like this. I didn't mean.... I wanted.... your happiness...."

Slowly the heavy, purple lids dragged open, as if they were weighted, as if she hadn't the strength to quite open them. Wonderingly, Judy's fever-bright eyes fastened on Michael's face. Then, as if the spurt of strength was spent, they closed again, and her lips, dry and parched, moved faintly. "Dream.... another...." Illusion. Illusion.

"Judy." Michael whispered hoarsely, holding her, feeling incredibly thin little hand in fingers he could not keep steady. "Judy.... it is Mike. Sleep now, Judy. I'm standing by. Now.... and forever."

She did not open her eyes again, but his heart twisted cruelly, as he saw the big tears squeeze slowly out from under either lid and course down her bluish-white face.

"Mike," she muttered, "..... need.... you." she muttered, "..... need.... you."

After a long while Dr. Remsdale released the thin wrist, and his eyes met Michael's. Wordlessly, the erect head of the man sitting beside the bed, had lost their watchful suspicion and distrust. He knew he had no longer any need to "keep an eye on" what Judy's beggar, or first-class tramp!" as Ted Hoyt had flippantly ordered him to, He knew, with the keen intelligence of the profession that Michael Swayne had gone through some secret, soul-scourging purgation that had wiped out the stigma Ted had warned him against. He knew that he would no longer have to wage a double battle to bring Judy's body back to health, as Ted had told him he would.

Several times during that long night, Judy stirred faintly, and her fingers moved in weak mute alarm that he might have gone. Always, Michael tightened his grip on her fingers gently, and spoke softly:

"Here, Judy. Sleep again. It's Mike."

The nurse, who was secretly romantic, in spite of her hardy profession and close proximity to death, disaster and tragedy, was visibly impressed.

"He's grand," she confided to the ward interne when she left the private room to get things for her patient. "Simply swell. You'd know he would be, with her that crazy in love with him. I'll bet it's just some lovers' misunderstanding."

"Yeah," he agreed. "The more they love each other, the worse they fight. That's life for you."

"You love!" the little special nurse corrected him with shining eyes. Grinning, he hurried on about his business.

It was ten minutes to eight, the next morning, before Judy finally opened her eyes wide and recognized Michael. She smiled weakly, and her thin face sobered to heart-breaking sadness and she turned her face away, mutely.

"Judy," Michael said huskily, "don't do that! Give me a chance! I.... I've never been a bad sport, Judy. I've got to run now. Got to get to work.

"You came because..... because they asked you, Michael," she whispered brokenly, "not because you wanted to!"

"No, Judy," he said gently, humbly, "I came because I had to. Because I love you so. Because...."

"Don't say you love me unless you mean it. Please don't say it unless you mean it!" she begged, and then she was silent, as if she could not trust herself to speak.

"I mean it, Judy," he pleaded, "just once. See what I brought you. I.... I've got to run now. Got to get to work.

Judy's face changed to deeper lines of weariness as she surveyed the stack of things on the white iron bed.

"Please, Michael, promise you won't.... any more," she began shakily.

"Judy," he declared firmly, loudly. "These are all paid for! Every penny! I'll never, as long as I live, give you anything again, Judy, unless I own it outright! Pay for it with my own money! Now.... can you smile?"

TRAFFIC OFFICERS GIVE TESTIMONY

adjournment on Wednesday, Charles A. Payne, K.C., calling more than eight witnesses for the defence, including the accused.

Car Out of Control

Miss Hilda Parks, was the first witness called as the trial resumed and related as she was walking on Richard Street, a car was seen coming over the hill and as it was walking across the street, heard a terrific crash and by the time I looked again, the car was trying to get away from the curb.

"Did you see any children?" —"There were a number of them."

"Did you see a body on the sidewalk?"

"Not until later. MacKenzie drew my attention did I see a child lying on the walk."

In cross examination Miss Parks would not say whether the car came to a complete standstill at the intersection after mounting the boulevard.

George Vincent, mail carrier of Napanee was on the Paisley House when three men drove up in a car. One of the men walked around and lifted up one of the fenders.

"What was their condition?"

"They seemed as if they had a drink, but were not drunk."

His Lordship—"Did I not apply to all of them?"

"Yes, sir," said the witness.

"How far away were you from those men?" asked Mr. Payne.

"Ten or twelve feet."

"What fender was straightened up?"

"I think the fender nearest my car."

His Lordship— "Did you notice anything wrong with the fender?"

"No, Sir."

Tells of Arrest

Percy Downing, Traffic Officer at Kingston told of the arrest of O'Brien near Calumet about 2.30 p.m. on March 26th. The officer stated he was told to detain a car, that had been in accident. I went to the western limits and soon the car appeared. I made an effort to stop the car and finding the occupants were O'Brien and Mr. Lamb, the driver O'Brien and James Deacon to get in the back seat. At the police station, I saw Alice take a bottle from his inside pocket and place it in the seat, which I confiscated.

"Were you in plain clothes?" asked Mr. Payne.

"Yes."

"What was your conversation with O'Brien?"

"I asked him his name and address."

"Did he tell you how many shops he had?"

"Yes."

"Did you put him to profane his occupation?"

"For all the police station."

Talked Frankly

"Did he answer you frankly?"

"Yes."

"Did O'Brien tell you about breakfast?"

"He said they were tight and only to apply easily."

"Were you present when Napanee police arrived?"

"Yes."

The party was not told why they were being held. The officer stated that Deacon and Allore were intoxicated and to a much greater extent than O'Brien.

"Did O'Brien answer questions put to him by you intelligently?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you smell liquor on O'Brien's breath?"

"Yes."

"Did he walk straight?"

"He had little chance to walk as I removed him from the front seat and put him in the back."

"Do you know O'Brien has imprisonment in the past?"

"Yes."

Evidence Corroborated

Harold G. Downie, Traffic Officer for the City of Kingston, corroborated the evidence of the former witness.

"Did he say as regards to Napanee?"

"The accused said that he had struck the curb."

"What were their conditions?"

"They were all intoxicated."

"Was the car checked?"

"Yes."

Mr. Payne examined the witness at length as regards the arrest of O'Brien, the traffic officer insisting the driver was intoxicated.

"Was the man examined by a doctor?"

"No sir."

His Lordship—"How intoxicated was Deacon?"

"Quite intoxicated" said the witness and the same applied to Allore.

Ralph Forsythe, mechanic of Kingston testified as to the condition of the brakes on the O'Brien car, stating that the service brakes were in poor condition, showing the brake only on the right rear wheel, while the emergency brake showed power only on the rear hind wheel.

"How was the steering?"

"In fair condition."

Defence Is Opened

Mr. Payne opened the defence with the calling of J. H. Fitzpatrick, proprietor of the Paisley House, Napanee, stating that he had known O'Brien for a period of fourteen years.

"What was his condition on March 25th?" "Nearly normal."

"When did you see him?"

"Some time after one o'clock in the afternoon."

J. A. Dougherty, Arden, lineman for the Bell Telephone Company, said he saw O'Brien on the day of the accident, and that he was sober.

His meeting took place a few miles west of Napanee.

"Was O'Brien intoxicated?"

"No, sir. He was not in any different than I have seen him and I have known him for three years. Mr. Hill did not question the witness at length.

Mrs. O. Young corroborated the evidence of the former witness.

Gordon Davies, Belleville, stated that the brakes on the O'Brien car were tested on March 23rd and found to be in good working condition.

Max Spafford, truck driver, of Belleville stated he hired a car from O'Brien on the Sunday previous to the accident, stating that the brakes were all right. At this point the court adjourned for lunch.

Accused on Stand

In the afternoon, Edward G. O'Brien, the accused in the action was called to the stand in his own defence. The witness stated he purchased a bottle of liquor for Walter Allore and took it to his room and then related the arrange. ments made with Deacon for the trip to Kingston. He stated there was a stop made at Shannonville Hotel, where he admitted drinking part of a pint of porter.

His evidence was much the same as that given by Deacon and Allore. In his own words, the witness told of the accident. He said everything went all right until he hit something. I banged on my brakes but then it hit a hole and it went on to the curb, the car mounting the boulevard and running along for some distance.

"Did you see any children on sidewalk at anytime?"

"No sir."

"Did you speed away from the scene?"

"No."

"Where did you go?"

"To Paisley Hotel."

"Did you drink any liquor before accident or after?"

"No sir, I did not."

"What do you attribute the cause of the accident?"

"My brakes did not respond in the manner they should have done."

"How long did you stay in Napanee?"

"Fifteen or twenty minutes."

"Did you have a drink in Napanee?"

"No."

"How did you go to Kingston?"

"By the regular Highway."

The witness stopped and talked to the men near Westbrook, who were Bell Telephone employees, a fact with whom he was employed, up until May 18th, 1934.

Said Off Job

"Why did you leave the company?"

"I was laid off because of lack of work."

"What was wrong with your brakes?"

"If you pressed hard they would pull to the right."

O'Brien told of his conversation with police officers at Kingston, and strongly protested evidence that he was intoxicated.

"How did you know your car had been instrumental in killing a child?"

"In Kingston police station?"

"When were you liberated from jail?"

"On April 4th on bail."

"When did you get your car?"

"About April 30th."

"Was the car in the meantime?"

"At 313 University Ave, Kingston.

Gives Rate of Speed

In cross examination, the witness admitted he was travelling 25 to 30 miles per hour through the town of Napanee.

Asked whether before the accident did he test your brake to reduce your speed.

"Yes."

"Were your brakes working then?"

"Yes."

"Have you ever been convicted of any offence?"

"No sir."

Mr. H. Beatty has purchased a new car.

Mrs. H. Garrison of Belleville spent the week end with her daughter Mrs. R. Townsend.

Mrs. R. Townsend attended the Wood-Welch wedding on Saturday evening.

Unique Project Sought For April First Next

New York, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Envisioning a transatlantic Air Freight service between Ireland and Newfoundland, James Mollison was in New York today, awaiting final plans with which to get this unique project started next April.

News films, foreign fashion models and other freight in which speed is a premium would be shuttled across the broad ocean in semi-weekly trips under the plans the British veteran of the airlines has in mind.

Mollison and his equally noted wife, the former Amy Johnson, who has accompanied him on flights across the Atlantic and into South Africa, each would pilot one of the freighters. He was not decided yet upon a plan for the third plane he hopes to purchase.

Imperial Airways have been preparing for establishment of a passenger and mail service between Britain and Newfoundland since 1933. The project was discussed here this year by governmental representatives of the United Kingdom, Canada and Newfoundland. Officials of Pan American Airways of the United States attended and it was said they would set up a feeder line between New York and St. John's, Nfld., with sub-stations at Halifax and Saint John, N.B.

Sex Called Handicap By Commercial Pilot

Pittsburgh, Nov. 7 (AP)— Helen Richey, first woman commercial air pilot of the United States, today had confirmed reports she resigned because her sex was a handicap.

The attractive young pilot plainly showed her disappointment at the turn of affairs. She was employed last July 1, after flying 800 solo hours, including 120 hours at night on passenger runs. Her boss, J. D. Condon, President of Central Air Lines, said her work had been satisfactory.

Miss Richey's friends said a ruling by the Department of Commerce that she should be relieved of flying during rough weather was "outrageous."

The exercises were held in the compound of the Moore Memorial church to which General Chiang Kai-Shek belongs and the event marked the first development of the endeavour of the Chinese Christian school for bootblacks to help the unemployment situation in Shanghai. FRED PEERNOT'S BIRTHDAY Act One Scene, Fred Peernot's house. Mr. Peernot, Where you going Fred?

Fred Peernot. O, just out. Why? Mrs. Peernot. Yes, why?

Mr. Peernot. Well to be frank with you I have something serious to tell him. He's old enough to know.

Mrs. Peernot. Alass I fear I know what's coming.

Fred Peernot. Darn it I do.

Act 2

Scene, the same.

Mr. Peernot. To cut a long story short, it happens about the time of your birth. In other words you hadn't been born very long when what was our surprise one morning to find you on our doorstep in a basket. In other words we are really no relations of yours and you are a foundling of ours.

Fred Peernot. How did you know my name?

Mr. Peernot. I knew your first name because there was a teeny little visiting card klutched in your tiny hand with nothing on it but Fred. But I didn't know your last name and I dont still, so that's why we call you Peernot.

Mrs. Peernot. And that's what I really suppose to be mean. I have a confession to make. I was the one who left that baby on the doorstep. I wanted to serprize you, and then I remembered how you hate to be serprized, so I never told you. In other words he's really our child and we've just neerely driven him.

Mr. Peernot. Well I'll be darn, this has happened to one of my life. I always loved you like a son and now I know there was a darn good reason. Run out and get 2 quarts of ice cream. Fred, and we'll have a big reunion.

Fred Peernot. Whipped cream on it?

Overwrought Nerves
The bane of many women

Many women are slaves to their nerves. The doubts and cares and worries which seem to come along every day undermine and break down the nervous system. The result is irritability, headaches, tired feelings.

Everything seems to go wrong at times and finally there comes the collapse of the nerves with extreme weakness and discouragement. These spells of hysteria and weeping and despair are likely to become more frequent unless something is done about it. There is no question what to do if you know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as the great beneficial restorative to thousands of women.

Ask your friends about this fine restorative for nerves. Ask them if they know of its value and soon begin its use once they are run down, and find the nerves getting the upper hand.

BRIEF REVIEW OF PRECIOUS AND BASE METALS

GOLD—Prof. Alfred Buller thinks he is certainly so undervalued that no increase in the American price of gold is in prospect, at least for six months or more term. In view of the premium on New York funds, Canadian producers are obtaining a slight benefit from the exchange by disposing of their output in Winnipeg.

SILVER—The announcement of Nationalization of silver in China had a temporary effect on silver and the price rose slightly above the 48.78 cent level at which it had been holding since last August. The Washington treasury is reported to have shortened all speculative offerings of the metal in the London market at the price of 48.78 cents per fine ounce for August. What the next step will be in Washington with regards to silver is difficult to guess. Meantime speculation in the metal is at a very low ebb.

COPPER—Prices have reacted slightly after touching a peak of 9.60 the electrolytic in London on October 11th. Demand for the metal abroad and in the United States has been very heavy the past few months, so much so that it has exceeded production, and the additional position, as a result, continues healthy. At the end of September world stocks were estimated at 91,800 tons, compared with 540,200 tons a month previous. In American metal circles it is said that domestic output in October showed no further increase to meet the expanding demand for the metal.

We are in the midst of a bull market with public participation increasing daily and many new highs being reached with comparative ease. Many of those traders who have combined their activities mainly in New York are beginning to sit up and take notice as the past three weeks have produced some very appreciable profit possibilities.

With very few exceptions, practically every department of the list is participating, which is the way stocks get in a bull market. Movement about any particular stock is superfluous for the reason that the buying brings about the sharpest gains in those securities whose floating supply is comparatively small.

The public is realizing that conditions in this country are improving and a good deal of progress has been made since the depression low of early 1933. The sentiment of the political uncertainty has brought in some foreign demand, particularly from London and New York, investors in those centres having held back pending adjustment of a number of important factors.

A large number of stocks have recently sold up to new highs for 1935 among which can be included Hollinger-Seagrams, Howard Smith Preferred, Lake of the Woods, Minities Preferred, Lake Shore, National Breweries, Massey-Harris Common and Preferred, International Nickel, Power Corporation, Canadian Dredge and Dock, Bell and Canada Common and numerous other issues.

Another interesting news item was the one with reference to the Export Bankers Association which President Roosevelt is to send assistants to Washington to discuss the Reciprocal Trade Treaty to the Senate again this October, but is said to desire certain changes in the draft so that it may be more acceptable to the Senate, which rejected it. Secretary Hull will talk to the St. Lawrence Waterways treaty again; call attention to the possibilities of such companies as Canada Cement.

The advance in Power Corporation has been a conspicuous feature in the rise in the general list. Power Corporation, which is an investment trust with large utility holdings, has benefited very handsomely from the rise in public utility values, and the book value of the common is considerably higher than the $7 a share indicated at the end of the last fiscal year—June 30th, last.

NICKEL

The Government of Great Britain is going to the country on a direct re-armament policy and should they be returned to power, it may be accepted as a assured that Great Britain will be spending hundreds of millions on a defence programme which will call for large production of International Nickel's products. And if Great Britain sets her face in this direction, it seems certain that many other countries will follow suit.

CONSOLIDATED MINING AND SMELTING

Consolidated Mining and Smelting Common has recently been bought by people lately who feel that the company has regained a position of its former importance and the outlook is for a continued improvement. Smelters is one of the largest non-ferrous metal smelting and refining enterprises in the world. While mining interests are large and have been expanding, the company's refining and smelting and refining organization. The Canadian Pacific Railway has been affiliated with it from the start. Between 1924-1930, the company declared average annual earnings of $18.56 per share on its common stock. In 1932 earnings were $18.02, and in 1933, $17.35. Working capital is again on the upgrade and now stands at $13,477,268.

Whirlwind Evangelist Called Devil That Old Fellow

Chicago, Nov. 7.— (AP)—Among some of the homely epigrams used by Billy Sunday, evangelist, in his fight against "that old fellow, the devil," recalled by friends today were:

"You can go to hell as fast on Fifth Avenue as on the Bowery."

"The fellow that says he can drink or he don't, I've noticed, never let's it alone."

"Hoisting a dollar with an inch of a man's head sometimes will make him stone blind to everything that is good."

"Adam! At Pentecost one second saved 3,000 people in one day. Now 3,000 people is get one old, butter-milk-eyed, red-nosed whisky-soaked bum."

"Come on, you miserable sinners, get down on your knees, the devil don't see two strikes on you already."

War Begins on Slot Machines

Toronto, Nov. 7.—(CP)—War on slot machines becomes province-wide today as Attorney General Nixon announced the provincial police would inaugurate a clean-up of machines within their particular district.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Nov. 7—Trading was quiet on the local produce markets yesterday. Prices showed little change from the previous day. The egg situation remained much the same, changed levels; butter prices were steady to a shade easier in spots; there was little demand for cheese, while potatoes and poultry remained as before.

The butter market was quoted unchanged in some circles at 34 to 34½c, while others called the market 34 1-4c to 34 1-2c per lb., for No. 1's and No. 2's at 33½c to 33¾c. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted at 35c, wholesale prices at 34 1-2c to 35c for solids and 36 1-2c to 37c for prints.

The egg market was firm at unchanged levels. Graded shipments in cartons or 1-dz. lots were generally quoted 43-45c for A-large, 41-42c for A medium, 38-39c for A-pullets, 34-35c for B, and 32 1-2 to 34 for C. Receipts, 1826.

Export Board Ship 6,552,000 lbs. Butter

For British Markets

It was yesterday reported that as a result of the recent efforts of the Butter Export Board, Canada's shipment of 1,717,000 boxes, or 6,552,000 lbs. of butter to the United Kingdom. This figure is sharply higher than the previous estimate, which was just above the 6,000,000 mark.

The bonus plan guaranteed a return to exporters of 22 cents, monreal, for early shipments, and this figure was raised to 24 cents, monreal, for the month of August, which anticipated heavy exports. It was stated yesterday that the Canadian butter sold in the United Kingdom at from 22 to 24 1-2 cents, monreal.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"I Live My Life"

Picture Bristol of Entertainment

Joan Crawford is a strong kind of picture as well as a new leading man to the Belle tonight and Friday, matinee and evening, when the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production "I Live My Life".

The story is novel, dramatic and at times uproariously funny. The leading man is Brian Aherne, the distinguished English actor, who with this picture comes into his own as a leading man to be reckoned with.

He's Hard-Boiled

Aherne is an archaeologist in "I Live My Life", as hard-boiled and city-hating as they come. When first he sees the beautiful girl from the yacht in the quiet bay of the Greek island where he has been digging, he's uninterested.

She's obviously rich, and rich girls to him are parasites. When she tells him, however, that she is the owner's secretary, love comes in a rush. Then begins a romance that rises to all-absorbing proportions.

When, however, the archaeologist follows the girl to New York, discovers that she is in reality the rich man's spoiled daughter, trouble—and laughter—begin.

Miss Crawford has never been more glamorous than in the part-ability, magnificently seconded by direction, Her Adrian-designed costumes are quite-ly, par more stunning than ever before. Interior settings are in ensemble taste while the out-of-door scenes are as magnificent as only great landscapes and seascapes can be.

Supporting the leading players is a superb cast. Frank Morgan is at his fumbling, mumbling best as the well-meaning father.

Also Matinee Scenes

Aline MacMahon gives a stirring performance as the motherly archaeologist who loves her man too much to rob him of his happiness with another woman.

Eric Blore, the hilarious butler of "Top Hat", is again a butler . . . and a funnier butler never lived, unless he is Arthur Treacher, also prominent in the picture.

The precise which makes Director Van Dyke's name famous is apparent in every scene of "I Live My Life" . . . in his swift and effective dramatic accent. . . . You'll be sorry if you don't see "I Live My Life", at the Belle Tonight, or Friday afternoon or evening.

Patsy Kelly and Thelma Todd are appearing on the same program in their latest screen scream "Sing Sister Sing".

"The Broadcast 1936"

Scarcely has such a diversified and supposedly starry cast been seen on radio, stage and screen been assembled for one picture as in Paramount's "The Broadcast of 1936" which comes to the Belle Saturday, for two days, matinee daily, with Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen and Lyda Roberti in the leading roles.

In addition to the regular cast that appears in the broadcast, each comedy are famous personalities who contribute specialty numbers, which forms a background to the main theme. Bing Crosby, film and Radio star; Amos 'N' Andy, world famous for their daily comic black face sketch on the air waves; Ethel Merman, star of radio and musical comedy hits; Bill Robinson, internationally known negro tap dancer; Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles, noted comedy team; Ben Bernie and the Nicholas Brothers, negro dancing specialists. Willie, West and Mcclinty, and Ray Noble, renowned English band leader and song writer, with his orchestra, all have important roles in the picture.

"I Wished on the Moon", "It's the Animal-in Me", "Why Stars Come Out at Night," "Way Dream", "Miss Brown to You" and "Double Trouble" are the song hits which are sung by Norman Taurog with dance ensembles staged by LeRoy Prinz, dance supervisor.

Communists Break in

He had definite information, he said to the effect at least $4,000 was brought to Seattle for "use by communists in the Fisher mill strike by a man whose name we know, the Russian consul and two of the Pacific secretariat of the communist party at San Francisco".

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Three Musketeers"

A Gay Comedy Drama That is Sure to Please

Tonight will conclude the showing of these two splendid features to large audience viewed on the screen of the Capitol Theatre last night. Walter C. Kelly, international stage favourite who brings his famous Virginia Judge character to the screen in the title role of "The Virginia Judge" here on the stage, is a brief of laughter from start to finish. This same man has a hit as usurping the role of Solomon Levi as America's son . . . the humorist. Shand on the Panther figure which Kelly created on the stage for nearly thirty years. "The Virginia Judge" has been adapted into a gay comedy drama set in the picturesque atmosphere of a small town in the Tidewater County of Virginia. Dealing with the simple pleasures and problems of life in southern townfolk in a local community, the film brings with human sentiment, clean, wholesome humor and engaging charm. Kelly portrays most of the acting honours with his portrayal as the genial Judge whose sensible bits of philosophical wisdom as pronounced by him in his court room proceedings are of the funny moments in this uplifting comedy produced. The story revolves around the ability of the Judge to settle all the problems of the lovers who are involved. He sees the boy feels a sense of antagonism towards his father and the way the Judge runs about to make the boy like him is one of the highlights of the picture. Stepin Fetchit, Negro comic, is seen in many humorous and uproarious scenes.

Mystery And Suspense

Any bolt contained in the "Mystery Man" second picture of the Double bill on our screen, Mystery, suspense and the ludicrous fused in the essential ingredients supplied to you in this picture. The branch presented against the colorful background of newspapers and police land and takes its principal characters through a series of thrilling adventures. Murder and mystery finds himself suddenly accused of crimes and responsible for the future of a very pretty girl. Armstrong in the starring role presents his best performance to date. The role is one fro which he is very well suited and he brings to the team, a new pinnacle of popularity. The manager of the Capitol hopes that you are still keeping Friday and Saturday in mind for on those two days you will be treated to the big stage show featuring Jimmie Rodgers and a host of beautiful girls.

B. C. Donnan, K.C., and W. N. Ponton, K.C., expressed the feeling of the members of the Bar at parting and also their appreciation of all the skilled and experienced help they had received from Mr. Vandervoort and from the present Registrar in searching the labyrinth of titles in the old County.

Must Stamp Out Petty Thieving Says Magistrate

Three local youths, Victor Whitby, 17, Stanley Archer, 17 and Delbert Crawford, 21, appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court and pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and entering the premises of Mrs. Mellon, gillies Bridge, and stealing therefrom a quantity of household goods. Whitby and Crawford were remanded to gaol for three weeks determinate and a further indeterminate sentence of three months on day in the Ontario Reformatory, while Archer was given into the custody of his parents to appear at a subsequent court for sentence. All three youths were under the observation of Dr. Doyle, Kingston mental physician, who recommended Archer be given treatments at the Bowmanville Training School.

Mr. S. L. Howell appeared on behalf of Crawford and asked for a suspended sentence, it being established that Archer and Whitby had been in Juvenile Court on previous occasions, while Crawford had never been in serious trouble before. "I'm sorry, but I cannot show discrimination in such cases. Petty thieving and breaking has become a serious problem in Belleville and there is but one way to stamp it out that is by imposing jail sentences," stated Magistrate Butler as he further intimated that more lengthy sentences would follow subsequent charges of a similar nature. B. C. Donnan K.C., who conducted the prosecution suggested as an example to the other youths due to the seriousness of their offence.

As Crawford was led from the court room to the county jail his mother broke down and wept to such a degree that His Worship requested that the court room leave the actions disturbing the proceedings, he claimed.

VANILLA DOES A-HUNTING GO

Vanilla, wise in deer-tracking lore who has been denied the pleasures of the hunt with his master for the past many years, is now enjoying the deer country of Hall's Lake north of Bonarlaw as the present time with his master, W. H. (Cap) Bottum, of this city.

Mr. Bottom, well known sportsman, is accompanying his brother Dr. Gray Grayson on a hunting party this year, preferring the Bobcaygeon district to Timberdoon Lake where he has hunted for the past many years. "Cap" Bottum is one of Belleville's oldest and most renowned hunters on the annual trek.

In past years he has become necessary to tie up his famed tracking hound, Vanilla, before leaving for the hunt. The accustomed wails of the neglected dog have risen high above the usual neighborhood noises annually following this procedure.

THREE MONTHS ON CHARGE OF THEFT

Sentenced in Police Court While Fourth is Remanded

Three of the four local youths charged with breaking and entering the premises of Mrs. Mellon Bakeries in Belleville and stealing cash and register containing $150.00, pleaded guilty as charged before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today and a sentence of three months determinate and a further indeterminate sentence of two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory being imposed in each case. The fourth charged, Victor Whitby, Jack Semark, was represented by counsel and given a week's enlargement, bail being provided.

Raymond Crawford, 23, Frederick Kelly, 22, and Jack Semark, 23, all local youths, pleaded guilty to the charge laid against them of the passing of sentence. Crown Attorney C. B. Donnan, K.C., addressed the court at length and pointed out that accused youths had stolen a cash register from the bakeries valued at $600. The register was damaged to the extent, Mr. Donnan pointed out, "This is a serious matter and must not be overlooked or punished with a suspended sentence," added Mr. Donnan prior to the meeting out of the sentence. The Crown Attorney pointed out, however, the fact that the accused youths perhaps told the truth, when they stated there was only $65 in the cash register, instead of the amount first announced.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., representend Semark and asked for an enlargement in the event a decision of the defence not being ready to enter a plea. Bail was accepted and Semark allowed his liberty until Tuesday.

Engineer Shown In C.P.R. Picture

Belleville citizens were more or less interested in the pictorial presentation of the important chapter in Canadian history symbolized by "Fifty Years of Canadian Pacific" in Thursday's Ontario Intelligencer. Some Belleville citizens were quite intimately concerned with the building of the first transcontinental railway which has meant so much to Canada and the driving of the last spike by Lord Strathcona at Craigalachie, B.C., on November 7, 1885. In the picture published above in Thursday's Ontario Intelligencer, Lord Strathcona driving the last spike. Sir Sanford Fleming may be seen standing directly behind with a tall beaver hat attempting no doubt to the importance. Next left to Sir Sanford is Henry Carre, C.E., P.L.S., O.L.S., (bowler hat and black whiskers), late of Belleville, father of Miss Carre, Miss Alfred Street, and Mr. Frank Carre, Dundas street. Mr. Carre as a civil engineer, was intimately connected with the building of the C.P.R. as a member of the engineering staff. He died some years ago in Belleville and was buried in this city.

Kent in surprise party and shower given in honor of their daughter, Miss Nellie May Kent, who will be the next few weeks will become the happy bride of Mr. Walter Bernard Stirling. Rev. A. S. McCopnell acted as master of ceremonies throughout the evening. A fine program of musical numbers given by Mr. Fred Houch-in and Freddy Calpin, and Mrs. McConnell at the piano provided entertainment for the early part of the evening, and several interesting contests aided in the fun of the evening. Later in the evening a large number of gifts were brought into the room and the following address read:

St. John's A.Y.P.A.,
Stirling, Ont.

Dear Nellie and Walter:

We the members of the A.Y.P.A. have gathered here this evening to express our best wishes for your future happiness and to endeavour to show in some way the esteem in which you are held by one and all.

We hope to see you often in our midst many times in the future when you are settled in your new home. As a token of our friendship, we ask you to accept these gifts and as your friends we extend to you our best wishes for a happy wedded life.

Signed on behalf of the A.Y.P.A.

Howard D. Morrow,
Leola Palen.

The honored couple both offered a very fitting response to the address and a dainty lunch was served and the remainder of the time was spent in music and games.

On Thursday afternoon High School Rugby team visited the local campus and enjoyed a decisive victory over the Stirling eleven. Because of recent rains the field was heavy and muddy and did not favor speed, but seemed much the better in rough going. Wood on the Stirling team stayed in the game until well into the third quarter though he was injured in the early stages of the game. Mumby, Scott, McDonald starred in fine passing attack for the team with Reilley flinging out plenty of his well-known passes. A. Scott and O'Neill were the stars for the visitors. The final score was 13 to 7 for Marmora. This defeat is the second in four starts for the local squad and will no doubt serve as an increasing number of spectators on the field Thursday.

Stirling team was as follows:

Richardson, Bedford, Matheson, Brooks, Bailey, Scott, Wood, Rowland, Reid, Campbell, Mumby, McDonald, Lemoine, Hagley.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN SLEW TAYLOR GIRL SAYS FRANK REGAN

Probing Information to That End Points Out Counsel

CLOTHING EXAMINED

Wearing Apparel Found Subject of Minute Examination

Toronto, Nov. 8 (CP)—With counsel for Harry O'Donnell, accused of murdering Ruth Taylor, claiming possession of information which "points conclusively to another man, not yet identified" police and Crown authorities continue today to organize their case against the 26-year-old gas station attendant.

Deputy Attorney-General T. A. Humphries directed Dr. E. R. Frankish, Ontario Government medico-legal expert and veteran of scores of complex murder cases, to assist Dr. J. M. Cameron in the examination of "certain articles" held by police.

These articles, presumably clothing seized by police following O'Donnell's arrest, either wearing apparel found in the Gerrard Street ravine locale of the crime, and a legal understanding was expected to play a significant part in the proceedings.

Frank Regan, counsel for O'Donnell, accused of dragging the girl's 20-year-old stenographer into an East End ravine during a rainstorm shortly after midnight, battered and criminally assaulting her, declared:

"I cannot say what this information is, which points to another man without disclosing the source upon which I depend, I am making strenuous efforts to check them.

Accused in Bad Shape

"He (O'Donnell) is taking it the way any innocent man would take it, but he's in a bad state. His pastor has been with him. His mother is in a state of near collapse and they have called Rev. Bruce Nelson, family refuses to believe he had any part in this trouble and so do his friends.

His client, Mr. Regan said, had "burst" on the night of the murder.

Mr. Regan said that the knowledge of her husband's arrest on a charge of murder was being kept from Mrs. O'Donnell's wife, who is in a maternity home, where she gave birth to a son Saturday. He said the shock of the news "will have disastrous effect" if not informed until she is improved and able to bear the shock, and in the meantime the baby's old name is maintained as sick." Mr. Regan said.

O'Donnell appeared in court yesterday on the charge of murder and was remanded in custody until November 15.

SKIN TROUBLES In Your Home?
If so do not neglect them; however slight and unsuspicious they might be! Unless attended to right away, that rough patch or persistent irritation, may easily develop into eczema or other serious disease that may be difficult to eradicate.

ECZEMA ON HAND.—Mrs. J. Marr, 320 Atlas Avenue, Toronto, Ont., writes:—"I suffered with eczema nearly five months, tried many different ointments and had a doctor's treatment without any result. I finally tried Zam-Buk which cleared up the trouble in less than a week. . . After this experience my wife will never be without Zam-Buk in the house."

BURNS & CUTS.—Mr. Charles M. Dunham, Lyndon, Ont., writes as follows:—"Shortly after receiving your sample of Zam-Buk I had occasion to use it on a burn, and it seemed that in no time the pain had entirely disappeared and there was not the slightest sign of a scar after the burn had healed, which was in a few days' time. Since then I have used it for cuts and scalds from your steamer, I have never been without having a box handy, and the quickness of cure does away with scar tissue."

ZAM-BUK OINTMENT is invaluable for boils, inflamed, and diseased conditions of the skin, while its swift antiseptic healing makes it an ideal first-aid dressing for burns, scalds, cuts, etc. Zam-Buk is also a soothing remedy for piles.

"Charlie", a familiar figure on the streets of Trenton for over thirty years has passed away. Charlie was a horse owned by W. J. Turcott and the two have been constant working partners for many years. Charlie was born in Goteau Landing on October 15, 1902. When he was three years old, his owner Capt Reinhart sold him to Charles Allore. Sr. of Trenton and he remained with him on steamer "Alexandria". Many boys and girls of Trenton being introduced are now grown citizens of Trenton and Mr. Turcott purchased Charlie that day until a few days ago when he was stricken with a leg ailment which caused his death. Deceased Mr. Turcott drove the horse for over thirty years and never a day he purchased him and the two have been inseparable pals with the exception of holidays, ever since.

REMEMBRANCE DAY

Armistice Day, or Day of Remembrance, anniversary of that eventful day of 1918 given over to rejoicing at the end of the Great War, but which brought a deepening sense of loss in the death of relatives, in contrast to the feeling of jubilation at the close of the conflict, will be observed everywhere in more or less formal manner. Undoubtedly all forms of observance feelings will be intense and sincere.

For there probably has not been an Armistice Day anniversary which has lodged as deeply in the minds of people during the past decade as will next Monday's. Because for the first time war is being prosecuted by a League member against a League member while the sanctions of the world body are being prepared for the Italians who have been called the offenders. Added tension comes from the situation in the Mediterranean, where British interests demand at least that this Sea be free.

Time has softened but little the sense of loss especially in the light of the war talk and war of the past few months. Those who gave sons, husbands and fathers to the war of 1914-18 naturally feel a sense of sorrow that all that that was expected from the Armistice signing in 1918 has not become fact.

Remembrance Day should mean more and more as the years pass and generations come forward to enjoy the fruits of peace won by sacrifice. For this reason it is naturally expected that the observance this year will take the form of holiday or a part holiday or the two minutes' silence will make of the occasion a holy time when the most precious thoughts are with men and women and the communion of the living with those who have gone through war from this earthly scene will become very real. The two minutes' silence can become a hallowed moment, not soon to lose its effect, the half day or the whole holiday a day of dedication of the living to the uncompleted task of winning peace.

In one way or other the time will be hallowed in every city, town, village, hamlet and in the broad countryside.

ELECTION WARMS UP

These are days which delight the Scot for he has a chance to try his humor on the candidates who are seeking election to the British House. He takes the shape of a heckler. According to George Hambleton of the Canadian Press, all candidates in Dundee are subjected to it. Usually the question of first question is hurled at the Liberal nominee, Dingle Foot.

"As you are well versed in ancient politics," queried a waggish heckler, "can you tell us who played the fiddle at Adam and Eve's wedding?"

"I can only suppose the fiddle was played by the serpent," Foot hit back. "The Serpent of course was a Socialist leader and he was the first person to mislead the workers."

Here is another specimen of rhetoric and retort. Opening his West Highlands campaign, F. A. MacQuisten, government candidate in Argyll, said he had received a threatening letter from David Lloyd George, written "as if he had again become a dictator, as he was between 1916 and 1922."

If certain replies to certain questions were not received, he said the letter promised Mr. Lloyd George's council of action would place a candidate in Argyll against MacQuisten.

"Lloyd George may be told," commented Mr. McQuisten bluntly, "that no Scottish Highlander was ever intimidated by a Welshman."

A SECOND SPRING

The broken heart may have no second spring again as the old song, "Loch Lomond" says but nature has the fall a sort of second spring with vernal breezes blowing and leaves budding out as in early May.

Nature has laws which are exacting enough but sometimes there is a freak season like this present autumn. Mild weather somehow coaxes the buds out before the sap has all retreated to the roots from the winter frost.

Lilacs are leafing, and some plants may possibly flower, but it is not summer that is heralded. It is winter that is ahead, however mild it be.

CIVIC ELECTIONS NEAR

Elections are drawing near. Three weeks from now the campaign will be one for the choice of mayor, candidates for council, for the board of education trustees and the commissionership. Candidates are already announcing themselves.

ON A BROWN BOG'S EDGE

I'd like a little house
On a brown bog's edge
With a warm thatched roof,
A shining holly hedge.

And my mother's oak settle
On the hearth—God bless her—
A row of deft mugs
On the tall, dark dresser.

Leaning at morning
On the low half-door,
I'd see bog-cotton waving
On the brown bog's floor.

The small singing lark
Rising straight from the reeds,
And I'd see a still pool
Where the lone heron feeds.

A wise little lady-goat
With hair like silk
Would come to my calling
With sweet, wild milk.

And of a Sunday morning
I'd sup tea by the fire,
Hearing the old bell
In St. Brigid's spire.

And stiff country boots
On folk going to pray,
Saying "Su-san, Su-san,"
Each step of Judy.

There I'd never be lonely —
Never be sad,
Leaning on my half-door
To chat with a lad.

Could I build a little house
I'd never, never rue it,
And not another in the world
Could hold a candle to it.

LILIAN MIDDLETON.

"I WRITE AS I PLEASE" is the title of a new book just off the press, and the title suggests every newspaperman's dream of being able some place, sometime, to write without repression all the things that are fit to print but which have been kept out of print for various reasons. We have been a smouldering irritation in the mind of the newspaperman for days and months and sometimes years. When Walter Duranty, well known newspaper correspondent, and authority on Russia, lay dying after a train wreck had crushed one of his legs, he prayed in this writer's hearing that things I have been afraid of before, complaints by my boss or the loss of my job, or the opinions of my friends, or any danger, are as bad as the thing I am facing now . . . If I do get back I shall do as I please, without fear or favor." All of which reminds us that the daily newspaper staff today must exercise rare judgment in deciding what is fit to print and that which is better for all concerned not to print.

IF?

A FOOL AND HIS FIRE!
(After Kipling—Long After)

If you can toss a match into a clearing,
And never give a thought to put it out,
Or drop your cigarette butt without fearing,
That flames may kindle in the leaves about;
If you can knock the ashes from your briar,
Without a glance to see where they may fall,
And later find the forest all afire,
Where you have passed—with no one near to call;
If you can drive your auto through the working,
And cast your stogie stub into the slash,
Unmindful of the danger therein lurking,
Of Homes or Happiness, that You may smash—
If you can leave your campfire while 'tis glowing,
No thought of industries that it may blight,
Or of the billion saplings in the growing,
Turned into charcoal ere the coming night;
If you can start a fire beneath a brushpile,
When wind is roaring like a distant gun,
You surely should be jailed without a trial,
And labelled as a lunatic, my son.

Track laying was commenced at six o'clock yesterday morning on the last half-mile of the Canadian Pacific Railway. In exactly nine minutes past nine o'clock everything was in readiness to complete the connection. Hon. Don M. A. Smith took the hand to drive the last spike and after missing it several times he drove it home amid cheers from all present. After, congratulations had been exchanged on the completion of the great work, the Van Horne special train with invited guests proceeded east and departed for Port Moody the second terminus of the road, where the party took a special steamer for Victoria. Chips from the last tie were sent away as mementoes by those present.

It is particularly gratifying to learn that Her Majesty the Queen has been heartily fully advised of the progress of the Canadian Pacific Railway and that she has given expression to her congratulations on the completion of the great enterprise, as will be seen by the following communications which has been sent by the Governor General to Lord Lansdowne.

"Dear Sir John MacDonald:—

I have received by cable through the Secretary of State, Her Majesty's commands to convey to the people of Canada her congratulations upon the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Her Majesty is pleased to add that she has watched the progress with much interest and that she hopes for the future success of a work of such value and importance to the Empire. You will have no doubt taken steps in order to give publicity to her Majesty's gracious congratulations. Let me conclude this note by expressing the hearty satisfaction with which I have learned that this great national work has been successfully accomplished. I am, dear Sir John, Yours Sincerely, Lansdowne."

KINGSFORD-SMITH REPORTED MISSING

Noted Flyer on England to Australia Flight

Singapore, Straits Settlement, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Darkness fell over the Malacca Strait tonight without any further word from Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian on a flight from England to Australia a hundred or more hours behind leading planes prepared to search for him.

The noted Australian pilot and his co-pilot, Tom Pethybridge, were last sighted by T. James Melrose, who reported he had flown over the missing flier's place over the Bay of Bengal.

Melrose, a prize winner in the London-Melbourne air derby last year, announced he was abandoning his own flight from England to Australia to assist Royal air force pilots in a search tomorrow for the missing men.

Ships in the Bay of Bengal were warned by wireless to keep a sharp lookout for Kingsford-Smith.

Aviation experts expressed fear for the safety of the famous transoceanic flyer who began his latest flight Wednesday from Lympne, England.

Aviators here believed Sir Charles might have been forced down by fuel shortage after battling monsoon wind storms in the Northeast.

Abead When Missing

Previously Kingsford-Smith had been timed in at Allahabad in India at 1.35 p.m. (7.35 a.m. E.S.T. Thursday) and was reported over Calcutta at 9.06 p.m. (9.06 a.m. E.S.T.) Thursday.

Seeking to better the time from England to Australia set by the Melbourne air race winners last year Kingsford-Smith was 167 minutes ahead of schedule. He elapsed time at Baghdad was 29 hours, 26 minutes.

His route took him thence over Karachi, across India to Akyab, Bad, southeast to Calcutta and down the Bengal Bay coast for Singapore.

Sir Charles and Pethybridge were flying a London-Sydney monoplane alternating at the controls. It was their second attempt in a month to reach the Orient. The first ended at Brindisi, Italy where they were forced down by a violent storm.

Before he took off on his second try Sir Charles declared: "There's no fear in my mind. Next time I'm pilot on."

His most recent major flight had taken place just a year ago when he flew from Australia to England over their way from Brisbane, Australia to Oakland, Calif., a distance of 7,400 miles. On this trip he had attacked the route he had flown in 1928.

Passing Motorist Risks Life Carrying Children to Safety

One Taken From Burning House Not Likely to Recover

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 8.—(CP)—Paul Bandzal, passing motorist risked his life "ten last night to carry two children from a burning house on the Niagara highway, four miles from Hamilton. It was believed he did not reach the scene in time however to save the life of Eleanor Miller, 3.

The girl, employed by Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Pulney as house maid, was badly burned before Bandzal rushed into the blazing house and found her unconscious, clothes nearly burned off. She awakened as he picked her up and told her rescuer Donald Pulney, 4, was in an adjoining room on the second floor.

EULER CHEERS INDUSTRIALISTS

Urges Leaders in Business to Apply Service To Industry

Montreal, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Canadian industrialists stood charged today with responsibility of bringing Canada back to economic normalcy. Opening the National Exhibition in Canada Exhibition here last night, Hon. W. D. Euler, Dominion Minister of Trade and Commerce, advised businessmen to see to it that any change in conditions was "in the right direction."

He invited them to apply science to industry and make use of the National Research Council, established some years ago as an aid to industry.

International Strife

"Unless we in Canada stride with other countries," he said, "we shall fall to the rear."

It was up to the Dominion's businessmen to see the country did not keep pace with the rest of the world.

Development of foreign trade and increase of domestic purchasing power were the aims of the Federal Government, the Minister said.

"Trade must be developed because of lack of purchasing power and it is economically sound that we have sufficient to supply the needs of everyone in the country, 1,000,000 people are on relief."

He termed the problem of distribution a "challenge to Mr. Mackenzie King and the nations" and urged men to "apply themselves with ability and initiative to find a way round to the rights of their fellow men."

Foreign Markets

Mr. Euler said the new government has set out to find new markets for the selling of foreign markets. "Reciprocity is in the air," he stated. He planned a return of confidence "in ourselves" as a condition precedent to the return of full trade.

The Minister hoped business men would think of the future less than five years from now and praised the exhibition as the greatest thing of its kind in the country.

"The last few days we have had much unpleasant weather," he said, "and the ramifications of my department are such that not in any sense yet have I become its master." He referred to the campaign conducted during the past few weeks to make citizens "Canadian-conscious."

The speaker predicted rusty wheat which has seriously dominated Canada's wheat crop in past years, would be "a thing of the past by 1937." He said he was informed several days ago by Major-General A. G. L. Macdonaghton of the Research Council that sufficient rust-resisting wheat would be on hand in 1937 to provide all farmers with seed for

Bread No Fattener Declare Bakers

Toronto, Nov. 8.—(CP)—Bread is not fattening, claimed Ontario bakers contend, and they were willing to stand in line, climb on a scientific balance and have it publicly peddle furiously to prove it.

A challenge to all and generator with a "series of trials measuring the muscular energy used in the rides at a fastest exhibit at the baking industry convention here and it showed that bread is completely consumed by the body in the production of energy and does not produce fat.

The machine was chained by baker to prove one slice of bread is burned up by a person's body after one hour of sleeping and that one night's sleep requires the energy supplied by that loaf of bread. Various other amounts were specified as necessary for their daily tasks, such as five slices after an hour of window-washing or golf and six slices after an hour of hitch-laying or walking four miles.

Science Peers Thru Milky Way Window

Harvard, Mass., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Discovery of a "window" in the Milky Way through which the telescope of Harvard University's Oak Ridge Observatory has found its way to unexplored realms beyond was made known today by Professor Harlow Shapley, Observatory director.

The opening in the vicinity of the constellation Sagittarius, was described as one degree square through which light from stars beyond the Milky Way is discernible.

Professor Shapley described it as "one of the most important windows" of its kind and said there are only a few others, smaller, farther down the galaxy.

The discovery shattered the common belief, he said, that the Milky Way is entirely shrouded by interstellar dust, gases and other substances.

KNOCKOUT DROPS PROBABLY USED

Mystery of Death of Former Actor, Reginald Cornish, in Montreal

Montreal, Nov. 8.—(CP)—Belief Reginald Cornish, former actor and fellow officer of Clive Brook, movie star, in the war, was the victim of knockout drops, expressed by police as they sought for a young woman whom they believe was Cornish's companion before he was found dead Wednesday in a St. Lawrence Boulevard boarding house.

Cornish, secretary-general of the Canadian Underwriters' Association, had been missing from his home since Tuesday. Yesterday the proprietor of the boarding house sent him a room he had rented the night before and found Cornish dead in bed.

A doctor was called and a preliminary examination indicated Cornish had died from natural causes, but autopsy is to be performed to see if there is poison in the stomach of the 41-year-old man.

Police said today their investigations showed a girl had been seen in Cornish's company and they believed she had put knockout drops with robbery as a probable motive. They did not, state definitely, however, whether Cornish's pockets had been emptied.

Cornish was responsible for many successes of the Montreal Repertory Theatre.

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST YOUNG MAN

St. Jean Deschaillons, Que. Nov. 9.—(CP)— Rolland Sinclair, 28, of St.-Jean Deschaillons was taken to Quebec, today charged by a Coroner's warrant with the murder of Joseph Malo of Montreal whose body was found buried Monday near Sinclair's home. A coroner's jury last night found Sinclair criminally responsible for Malo's death.

Armistice Day in Ontario

(By The Canadian Press)

In many Ontario centres for the first time since Monday those who took part in the Great War will be remembered with some ceremonial more elaborate than a two minutes silence.

Interpreted by many as an expression of the determination of the people for the maintenance of peace, Premier Mitchell Hepburn, officials and other citizens are joining forces in a movement toward making Armistice Day a full holiday dedicated to the honor of the thousands who gave their lives for an ideal.

At Colchester, a village about 18 miles northwest of Orillia, a new cenotaph to the war dead will be unveiled Nov. 11, with a memorial of the signing of the Armistice. Major Arthur Harris and a special guard of honor from Midland will be present. Col. J. Walker of Collingwood, commanding officer of the Simcoe Foresters, also will be in attendance while George McLean, M.P. for Simcoe East, will give an address.

Trenton Ceremony

Scripture readings, taking of the oath of allegiance, and a short speech by Mayor Lawrence will constitute the service to be held at the cenotaph outside Trenton City Hall at 10.45 a.m. Monday. Leading figures in the city's clerical life will take part in the service.

Lieut.-Col. Tweedsmuir, Canada's new Governor-General, today had three wreaths purchased from "poppy headquarters at Ottawa. One of the wreaths, made from autumn-hued maple leaves and blood-red Flanders poppies, will be placed upon the cenotaph Monday. His Excellency will place the second wreath in the memorial chamber of the Peace Tower. The third was purchased on behalf of the household of Government House.

Other Centres

The Barrie Retail Merchants' Association have decided by resolution to have all shops and places of business closed on Remembrance Day. Fitting ceremonies will be held by militia units and civic officials.

Overruling a suggestion of Mayor Johnston, that shops remain closed until one p.m. only, an organization meeting of Listowel Business Men's Association ruled that all businesses cease in that town on Nov. 11.

VALUATION OF CROP IS SET AT $2,000,000

Flue-Cured Tobacco Industry In Ontario Rests On Scientific Lines

It looks as if the $8,000,000 valuation put upon the Ontario flue-cured tobacco crop by experts will be exceeded by the value of the actual purchasing made by Canadian and British manufacturers within the past few days, starting last Tuesday. Yet it is only a few years since tobacco-growing in Canada was practically limited to a few farmers raising it for personal use or for a limited local market. Now approximately 20,000 acres of the best soil in Southern Ontario are almost exclusively devoted to the growing of Tobacco leaf in a scientific way, this year's crop amounting to 35,000,000 pounds and having a selling-value of $3,000,000 in cases of top grade, in turn of 1934. The finest cigarettes and cigar tobaccos produced in Canada. Incorporate Canadian tobacco in large and increasing quantities, where, hitherto, American and other tobaccos had been used, while Canadian leaf also has an established market in Great Britain in competition with foreign leaf.

The Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited, which buys a great deal of the Canadian crop, has had much to do with the great strides taken by the tobacco-growing districts because it has had a policy for years of trying to encourage domestic production. First, however, it was necessary to gradually teach growers what and how to grow in order to meet public tastes long accustomed to foreign leaf. The company, at its own expense, imported cultivation experts, brought in the necessary plants for experimentation, made its own chemical and other researches of the soil, of moisture, and other conditions in the districts, set the standards of tobacco, taught the grower to grade his crop, and introducing experimental plots, and in other ways tolerated him in improving and enlarging his crop for the uses of the domestic market. It also financed him in the primary processes by which the domestic market may be developed to a profitable way. This, and the researches of government experts, combined largely to promoting the present condition, and to the creation from a small and comparable crop, a large and marketable crop, valued at more than $8,000,000 a year.

AT THE BELLE

"The Big Broadcast of 1936"
Fun, Music, Romance Fill New Musical Comedy

Tuneful, brisk and gay, "The Big Broadcast of 1936", which comes to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday), combines a diverting comedy plot with an impressive collection of stars, garnered from the top ranks of radio, stage and screen.

Packed with rich comedy moments handsomely produced, this highly entertaining production is headed by a cast that can be depended upon to lead when it comes to outing crazy capers, such comedians as Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen and Lyda Roberti are sure-fire stand bys for light hearted humor and laugh-provoking antics.

In addition, an imposing array of famous personalities such as Bing Crosby, Amos n' Andy, Ethel Merman, Bill Robinson, Ray Noble and his orchestra, Willie, West and Mcginty, Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland contribute specialty numbers that shouldn't be missed.

The story centres around the rivalry between two radio entertainers when they fall into the hands of a young Countess, Jack Oakie and Henry Wadsworth own and operate their own radio station. As fans believe that the romantic singer, "Lochinvar" is one man whereas it is Oakie who does the announcing and Wadsworth the singing. To avert bankruptcy the boys decide to compete in an international radio contest. Burns and Allen bring their television invention, the Radio Eye, to the studio.

Lyda Roberti, rich romantic-minded Countess, and her social secretary Wendy Barrie, meet the boys. Ethel Merman, Oakie and Henry Wadsworth on her private yacht and Countess Lyda, the Cuban island estate, to decide which one she wants to marry. In their frantic effort to escape, lochinvar's amazing chase, Oakie, in calling Burns and Allen for help with the Radio Eye, unwittingly takes part in the broadcasting contest, all uproarious finale closes the film.

As a background to the main theme, different specialties are offered as highlights of the production. Anne n' Andy proved their face comics, as seen in a typically familiar skit; Bing Crosby warbles his "I Wished on the Moon" number while Ethel Merman sings "It's the Natural in Me" with an elaborately staged chorus ensemble background. Bill Robinson, world-famed negro tap dancer, presents his sensational dance routine, the Nicholas Brothers, two equally clever dancers, are seen in "The Miss Brown to You" musical presentation, while Ray Noble and his band render other of the comedy hits, while Mrs. Roberti does the "Double Trouble" number Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles appear in a mirth-provoking sketch Norman Taurog did a fine directorial job. "The Big Broadcast of 1936" is indeed a merry melange of music, mirth and amusement with comedy and many dancers equally divided among all participants. "Water Babies" a funny and clever Walt Disney Silly Symphony in beautiful Technicolor, the Belle Latest News ; :alne, and "Did You Know That" clever screen oddity will be exhibited on the same program. "The New Adventures of Tarzan" will be exhibited at the Saturday matinee.

"I LIVE MY LIFE" DEPARTS

The most entertaining picture to date this year, "I Live My Life" with Joan Crawford and Brian Aherne in the leading roles will be exhibited at the Belle tonight for the last times.

Directed by that master W. S. Van Dyke, it is eight reels of human drama and brilliant photography. The supporting cast includes such experts as Frank Morgan, Aline MacMahon, Eric Blore, Fred Keating, Sterling Holloway, Hedda Hopper and others.

A funny Paisy Kelly, Thelma Todd comedy creation precedes the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Two Fisted"

Diverting Fight Movie Has Hilarious Dialogue

An engaging story, swift paced action and hilarious performances are the part of all concerned forms the basis for a laughable piece of diverting entertainment in "Two Fisted", romantic comedy which opens at the Capitol theatre, today.

The inimitable Lee Tracy is given the typically fast talking, high pressure, wise cracking role which he does so well and with such gusto. Employing all the familiar tricks and mannerisms which have made him famous in fast moving light comedy, Tracy romps through with a spontaneous ease which at once establishes his natural acting.

Roscoe Karns runs Tracy a close second in acting honors in his uproarious performances as a city pressfighter, with an eye for the ladies. Kent Taylor is well cast as a Park Avenue playboy, while Gail Patrick makes a lovely and entertaining society maiden. Gordon Westcoat contributes an outstanding performance as the villainous husband, with Grace Bradley an attractive feminine foil for Karns. Florence Lake is responsible for many of the laughs in the film. Five year old Billy Lee lends the proper touch with his childishly winning appeal.

The story centres around the amazing experiences of two fighters when they accidentally crash Park Avenue society. Tracy is seen as the manager and promoter Karns, a dull witted, second rate leather pusher. Broke and disgusted they are arguing their troubles out in the street when along comes Kent Taylor, pleasantly tipsy. He insists on taking them into his mansion where he feeds them and then asks Tracy to put him in condition so he can handle his unscrupulous brother-in-law, Gordon Westcoat who is trying to swindle his wife, Gail Patrick out of the fortune left to their small son, Billy Lee.

Events move fast and furious when Tracy and Karns take possession of the household as butlers, and the fun which ensues provides us includes an exhibition boxing match between Tracy and Karns, one of the entertainment in celebration of the youngsters birthday at a party held in his home. During the bout, Billy Lee disappears, causing much excitement and many amusing situations.

An hilarious finale exposes Miss Patrick's husband, Karns knocks out his opponent, Miss Lake falls for Tracy, Karns proposes to Miss Bradley, and G. P. Huntley Jr.'s loyal secretary to Miss Patrick are finally unmasked.

"Hay Fever". Noel Coward's sparkling comedy of family life affords artistic temperamental ease and clash or lovely support each other at the most unexpected moments was presented last evening in the Collegiate Auditorium as the first production of the Young Thespians. This year the play is being given two nights and each evening's crowd was very gratifying. "Hay Fever" is royal entertainment. It tells of a family all wrapped up in itself that outsiders never fit in and the complexity of its best intentions in the world some one tries to be polite to the guests usually become a source of annoyance in even a "Saturday to Monday" and in her chapter is an unfeigned relief. The family then invites to the enjoyment of its own wit, and to genuine delight in the turbulent climaxes and satisfying lull that follow up the folly life of the household.

Happily chosen as Judith Bliss, Miss Rose Lazier gave a very creditable performance as the actress who retires from the stage periodically but never ceases to act. Life for her is one scene after another and she never lets her audience down. At crucial moments she recalls a parallel situation from one of her many successes and without the slightest warning she reverts to "character". Her husband, her son and daughter enter joyously into the spirit of the thing and play up to her. To a unwary guest, who is quite unprepared for the swift changes in tempo the family appear to be a bit mad.

Douglas Newby, as David Bliss, a successful novelist, gave a distinguished performance as the husband of Judith who is nevertheless a celebrity in his own right. He is a power, too, but then all the Blisses are, and he lends a touch of dignity to family gathering, a dignity that is liable to disappear under pressure.

Bill Rutledge and Nelle Marsaka were the children of the famous Blisses. Simon sees his parents as they are, and is undisturbed but Sorel longs for a "normal" life when family members are more like people. But the effort of being a charming and thoughtful hostess does prove too much for her and on the week-end becomes another Bliss temperamental orgie with the guests completely overcome.

The four guests, whose visions of a quiet intimate week-end with their host or hostess were splendidly portrayed by Miss Mary Forster as Myra "a self conscious vampire", Alec Saunders as Sandy Tyrrell, a young boxer in whom Judith is momentarily interested, Don Sprigg as Richard Greatham, an elderly admirer of Sorel's and Miss Betty Morgan, as Jackie Croyden, the only really likeable person in the whole house. The varying personalities of these guests each of whom has been asked to the Bliss home by a member of the family unknown to the others and whose arrival together in the small house is the signal for another tempest, are skilfully revealed by the young actors.

Miss Janet Adams as Clara the maid whom nothing can disturb gives a really fine characterization.

The stage setting of the play, the hall of the Blisses' home at Cookham Dene, is an example of the decorators' art, a perfect background for the action with every detail of the actors speaking a fully unobtrusive picture. Presented under the direction of Miss Lloyd the play is another success for the Collegiate drama group.

In lighter performance, however, could have been improved by certain of the actors speaking a little louder and clearer. In the opening scene particularly a tendency to drop voices lost for the audience the thread of the plot. This is a fault which should be corrected for the performance this evening.

The stage manager, Haddon Baird, and business manager, Jim Pigden, carried out their duties effectively and the play an smoothly and naturally. Dan Fairman's Concert Orchestra gave an enjoyable program between acts.

Joe Katelmach Winner After Chief Lynx Injures Knee

Semi-Final Saw Ali Hassan Defeat "Red Man" Parnell

WATCH IS BROKEN

Taking full advantage of Chief Lynx's injured knee, sustained during the first round, Joe Katelmach won the main bout of last night's wrestling card, presented at the Belleville Arena, in two straight falls, in a finished bout, of no time limit. Strength won over brutality in the semi-final bout, however, when Ali Hassan, the Terrible Turk of Herculean strength, won over Walter Parnell, the St. Catharines pest villain, in a bout that practically stole the show. Parnell and Hassan giving a splendid exhibition of the "racket", that was terminated when Parnell objected strenuously to the referee's decision and while appealing to the timekeeper for help smashed that official's watch with a well-directed blow of a hammer, but eventually lost two decisions as a portion of his purse was held-up to recompense the loss of the watch. In the second bout Jack Pavlos literally carried his lighter opponent, Jim Wilkins, before both contestants were counted out, as they battled fiercely in the ring and Referee Wells tolled the count of ten, no contest being declared.

The main bout saw Chief Lynx and Joe Katelmach commence scientific rather cautiously, the bout being a finished scrap. For over 20 minutes the grapplers gave the best exhibition of that wrestling seen locally in many a day, both having the advantage at times and stop the opponent. Arm-locks, scissors holds, hammer-locks and full Nelsons predominated with the Indian having Katelmach's shoulder practically pinned to the mat in the first minute of the bout, but Katelmach successfully squirmed out. The contestants subsequently went to work and gave the best exhibition on modern wrestling seen locally in some time, the bout resulting in a straight shooting match. Katelmach, the Winnipeg heavy, stole Chief Lynx's thunder, however, when he won the first fall with the Indian's favorite hammer-lock hold, leaving the vanquished lying helplessly on the mat. During the round Katelmach pugnaciously attacked Chief Lynx at one point, twisting his knee and badly injuring the same. After a lengthy rest the grapplers returned to the mat to continue their stellar exhibition, but Katelmach, sensing his advantage, finally procured a second hammer-lock and again pinned the Indian's shoulder to the mat, despite the fact that Chief Lynx opened the round on the offensive and again secured the advantage in the early part of the round. Katelmach won the initial fall in a time over 23 minutes of torrid wrestling, while he procured the final decision after four minutes, Chief Lynx's knee being badly injured, however.

Semi-Final Steals Show

The semi-final scrap, between Walter Parnell and Ali Hassan, the Terrible Turk, had its moments and all but stole the show. The ferocious mat-villain, Parnell, tried all of his known tricks of the trade to overcome the Turk's superior strength but without avail, as Ali repeatedly broke holds applied by Parnell, much to the villain's disgust as Parnell tried all his bag of tricks to pin the Turk and worked to a battle degree than seen locally in some time. On three occasions Ali Hassan invited Parnell for the ring, using his Herculean strength to ruin the his opponent. Ali Hassan eventually applied a new hold seen locally, the suplex hold, to send Parnell's shoulders to the mat. Incidentally the suplex hold can only be exemplified by a man with super-strength, as the applicant has to force his opponent to the mat with sheer power. Parnell resorted to rather shady methods and ferociously attacked Hassan during the second round to draw blood from the Turk's mouth and eventually soften him with a series of flying tackles and with this a body press after nine minutes of grappling. Again using his super strength, however, the Turk wore Parnell down and won the third and deciding fall with a reverse Nelson and press, after four minutes in the third round. Parnell objected strenuously to the referee's decision, eventually appealing to the timekeeper, where he became enraged

NEW UMPIRE

Cal Hubbard, above, 363-pound veteran football player of the Green Bay Packers, and Charles E. Johnston, a 13-year veteran as an umpire in the Western League and American association, have been named by President Will Harridge as new umpires for the Junior circuit in 1938. Hubbard worked in the International League last year.

and smashed that official's "ticker" to shivers with a well-directed blow of a hammer.

The opening bout saw Jack Pavlos, Greek, carry Jim Wilkins for about fifteen minutes before both contestants were counted out, as Pavlos pinned Wilkins outside of the ring, hailing ferociously at the feet of the ringside spectators. Referee Wells declared no contest and sent the grapplers to their dressing room. Pavlos out-weighed the Toledo youth fully 30 pounds and took full advantage of his excess weight, looking much the better grappler prior to the disqualification of both men. About 800 fans witnessed the show, which will be repeated with new faces contesting next week.

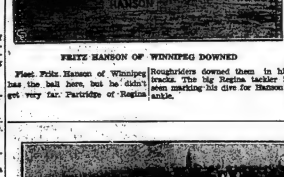
SCENES FROM WESTERN CANADA SEMI-FINAL AS WINNIPEGS DOWNED REGINA

Winnipegs whipped Regina Roughriders 15-2 in the Western Canada football semi-final, but Ritchie's Regina warriors put up a stiff resistance before succumbing. Here is one the Tops were stymied. They carried Riders back to the shadow of their own posts, but, despite a wild charging line, Olson was able to drop back and kick out of danger. Peg attackers are fighting desperately to get through and block kick, but the Rider line was holding heavily. Their offensive blocking is clearly visible.



FRITZ HANSON OF WINNIPEG DOWNED

Fleet Fritz Hanson of Winnipeg has the ball here, but he didn't get very far. Partridge of Regina Roughriders downed them in his tracks. The big Regina tackler is seen marking his dive for Hanson's ankle.

PIERCE BREAKS AWA Y FOR REGINA GAIN

Though Ralph Pierce, star Regina runner, is surrounded by Winnipeg tacklers, he breaks away with the ball to register a Roughrider gain. Ralph, who starred in the Dominion championship finals last year, is seen with the pigskin tucked neatly under his arm, getting out of the tangle of tacklers. His purpose was caught up with him before he could do any real damage, however, and Regina's chance was gone.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

If the Oshawa Collegiate junior all the armouries around the middle football squad topple over the Peterboro seconds, the Motor City outfit has practically agreed to meet the Belleville Collegiate, Bay of Quinte junior titleholders in either a home and home series or a sudden death game. Whether the game arrangements will hold good if the Peterboro juniors win or not has not been definitely established, stated George Laughlin of the B.O.I. and V.S. junior squad today. "Doubtlessly the game arrangements would hold good if the Peterboro junior C.O.S.S.A. series is finished it will only leave the winner of this series and Belleville east of Toronto in the junior group. Press dispatches from Peterboro reveal the Peterborough Lift lock City kids as a powerful squad, while the Oshawa kids are no pushovers in football circles. Regardless as to the publicity given these two squads we firmly believe Coach Laughlin's charges will give a good account of themselves in the proposed C.O.S.S.A. play-downs.

Following last Saturday's reverse at the hands of the Peterboro Greyframs, the Lindsay sport scribe is not quite so haughty these days. On the contrary the Lindsay squad's only hope now are to have Cobourg drop out, they say. Incidentally the Lindsay and Peterboro scribes are labouring under some erroneous impression that there is to be a play-off in the Lake Shore intermediate O.H.A. group, providing one team does not finish the schedule. The Lindsay and Peterboro scribes naturally are looking for Cobourg to throw up the sponge. Just where they dug up such a ridiculous idea we cannot find naturally the Oshawa Blue Devils are saying: "phooey to you from us." It seems to us, that it was decided at the inaugural meeting of the Lake Shore intermediate club finishing first would be declared group winner and would continue into the semi-final playdowns, unless there was a tie for first place and then naturally, a play-off would be necessary. Both the Lindsay and Peterboro sycophomders are trying to figure out the future wins and losses for the benefit of their own fevered figuring, however, that the Belleville squad is not even considered under prognostications. Coach Dr. Kennedy and his merry band of rink-skin chasers only have one regret that being the two battles they had with the Oshawa Blue Devils, but they are in no way discouraged as there sole hope lies in the Blue Devils having to absorb one more defeat, as the red and blue are just beginning to hit their peak. Saturday they journey to Lindsay and a merry time is expected.

The advent of cooler weather apparently roused the local badminton club into a state of activity. Genial Al Waters was elected to the office of president and will guide the destinies of the badminton club for the coming season. Congratulations Al, and to the club for choosing such a competent executive head. The club's annual meeting clearly demonstrated the popularity of the local badminton club as the annual meeting proved most encouraging to all. The club will commence their season's play

In the annals of the Peterboro press the Sea Horses have given notice they intend to strenuously criticise the system of umpiring that was in vogue in the O.H.A. last season. To us that is one great big laugh supplemented by a couple of haw-haws. Now let us turn the picture back about six or seven months and we find flashed on the screen. We can conscientiously point out to our Peterboro contemporary the fact, that we criticised the O.H.A. system of umpiring before the season opened last spring and even brought the subject up at the semi-annual meeting in 1936, but weak club moved and fought to retain the old system! No other delegation but the Peterboro representatives, who acceded at the suggestion of changing the umpiring system in the league. In other words it looks as though it's merely a case of "the biter was bitten" and now that Hugh Campbell and his henchmen find they will not have President Swanston to back in the future, they're ready for battle in the committee room. If the Sea Horses would battle on the field as ferociously as their executive does in the committee room, well they'd have as many provincial bermuda flytips as the mashlead in the Belleville club.

While on the subject we wish to thank our Oshawa contemporary for his moral support recently. Don't worry George, we can stand the gaff on the 22rd regardless as the cool reception that may be afforded." better fetch a body guard!

Today we are sporting a brand new Ingersoll, thanks to the direct efforts of Walter Parnell, our personal enemy No. 1 in wrestling circles. Mr. Parnell may have thought he won a second round over the press, but when we confronted the timekeeper with our damaged timepiece last eve, it was a tune of a different kidde. In short words, Mr. Parnell worked for peanuts last night, his end of the purse being held up by the promoters to defray the expenses of our destroyed ticker. Just why Mrs. Parnell's pet son directs his pugnacious attention in any general direction especially in defeat, we are at a mystery to understand, but, after losing his entire purse last evening, perhaps he will lay off the timid keepers of the time in the future.

In reality last night's wrestling bouts were much better than usual, simply because the contestants did not resort to sensational and pugilistic chanels. From the initial bout to the termination, the contestants gave their all and we were sorry to see Chief Lynx sprain his knee, simply because he and Katelmach might have still been trailing had not the Indian injured the ligaments of his knee, when Katelmach wrenched the limb. Personally we were glad to see Ali Hassan our enemy No. 1, Walter Parnell, but we are sorry to admit that Parnell practically made the show, but the Turk's superior strength usually saved him from defeat. In the main affair Joe Katelmach was declared the winner, but had it not been for the fact that Chief Lynx sprained his knee, perhaps a different story might have been told. At least we are sure that Jack Pavlos was much better than Jim Wilkins in the contest, despite the fact, that both grapplers tried their utmost to please. Incidentally, where is Dan Petroff these days?

MARITIME LOOP IS CRACKING UP

Withdrawal of Halifax Sees End of Big Time Hockey

Halifax, Nov. 8 (CP)— Public efforts to keep the Maritime hockey league from cracking up were underway today following the withdrawal of Halifax Wolverines, Allan Cup holders and chosen team to represent Canada in the Olympic games.

The end of big-time hockey in the seaside provinces was in sight unless Moncton, resting place of the cup for two seasons, could muster an outfit strong enough to offer competition to Saint John Beavers and Charlottetown Abegweits.

Failing formation of a team at Moncton good enough to match the Beavers and Abegweits, three of the Saint John team planned to leave on short notice to join Lachine Tecumseha in the International League.

Ray Getliffe, Pig Bremner and Dicky Dashels, all of Stratford, were the three and their departure would rob Beaves of their front line.

To Saint John fans, sure they were backing the 1936 Allan Cup team, the turn of events was a tragedy. W. A. English, Beaver manager, and Murray Long, director of the Saint John Forum, arrived in Moncton last night to see what could be done about saving the league.

CANADIAN TEAM OUT OF RUNNING

Jumping Trophy Will Likely Be Carried Off By Chili

New York, Nov. 8—(CP)— Although giving promise of improvement, Canada's military team in the national horse show appeared today to be out of the running for the Alexandri trophy, competed for by the representatives of 26 nations.

The Canadian officers steered their mounts over the intricate jump-course for only 1-3 faults at Madison Square Garden last night against the 38 faults piled up Wednesday but they remained at the foot of the list.

The Chilean team continued to set the pace with 8 1-3 faults for the two chapters of the competition which includes tonight. Fresh from was the United States with 13 1-3 faults; by Poland, 19; Mississippi State, 20; Holland 20 1-3; and Canada 21 1-3.

Captains Earl Thomson and G.C. Hadwen aboard Ricochet and Amanda gave the finest performance last night, clipping the course in tandem for 5 faults. The Chilean who led the first night had only 1 1-3 faults scored them.

The Canadian, Colonel R.S. Timmis up on Lady Jane, and Captain H.A. Phillips on Virgil-Ski, were guilty of 3 1-3 faults for not keeping abreast over the jumps.

The United States officers won the second international joust of the evening to list the Irish army challenge sided with a performance marred by 11-3 faults. Chile was second within two faults of the Irish team next with 3 1-3.

Col. Timmis, up on Virgil-Ski, and Capt. Phillips with Lady Jane turned in brilliant rides in this event but the third horse, Jacqueline piloted by Captain Phillips, refused a barrier and put Canada out of the running.

TWO OLYMPIC PLAYERS MAY JOIN RED WINGS

Detroit, Nov. 8 (CP)—Lorne Duguid and Med Brunetau, two Olympic players will join Detroit Red Wings lineup for the opening of the National Hockey League here Sunday—if Manager Jack Adams doesn't change his mind.

Yesterday Adams had both Duguid and Brunetau practicing with Red Wings and he decided to use them in the opening game against New York Rangers. The former will replace Gordon Pettinger at centre on the line that has "Sec" Kilrea and Pete Kelly on the wings.

Brunetau will work with Sid Howe and Johnny Sorrell, supplanting Eddie Wiseman. The latter will be the 19th man on the squad and will be held for emergencies.

KIDS STILL TRYING

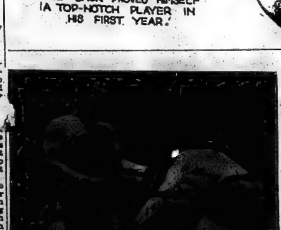
Bremerhaven, Iowa, Nov. 8 (AP)— Two junior east side football teams called up at the line of scrimmage. After the ref's whistle stopped:

Donald Weir, 14, had a broken leg.

Bill Kushner, 11, had a broken foot.



Robert Brerton, 15, had a sprained ankle.

But at a doctor's office one of the trio exclaimed: "We'll learn that Notre Dame shift yet."

ALLEGED LIQUOR USED TO WARD OFF EXAMINATION

Paris, Nov. 8.— (AP)— Joseph Carat, member of the Chamber of Deputies and former Mayor of Bayonne, today was pictured as an agent used by Serge Stavisky, alleged swindler, in warding off examination of the Bayonne Municipal Pawnshop by entertaining the examiners and plying them with liquor

CALGARY BRONKS HAVE A CHANCE

Adelman And Rebholz Doubtful Starters For Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Nov. 8 (CP)—Injuries to Winnipegs and arrival of Calgary Bronks, principals in the castle to decide the title of Western Canada football champions here tomorrow has whetted speculation among supporters concerning the outcome.

Lou Adelman, dependable centre and Russ Rebholz, were considered by coach Bob Fritz to be doubtful starters when Winnipegs take to the field for their crucial game. Greg Kabat, whose performance at flying wing has been a standout this season, was moved from end operation to an injured cheekbone.

While Bronks shook kinks from their legs with a light practice workout today statisticians recalled Cronin would be opposed by 10 members of the team he led into Toronto for an unsuccessful assault on the Dominion this two years ago.

CHICAGO WINS OVER AMERKS

Chalk up First Victory in N.H.L. Campaign The Score Being 3-1

Chicago, Nov. 8 (CP)—Mark up the first victory of the new National Hockey League campaign for Chicago Blackhawks. They are still dealers in speed and effective power plays, as New York Americans can attest today.

Mark up the first goal of the infant season to Harry Oliver of the Amerks. He scored in less than five minutes as the Hawks and the renovated New Yorkers set the Major League 1935-36 schedule into motion here last night. But the Hawks accelerated the pace, set off three and four-man rushes, and at the end they were the winners, by 3-1.

Also credit, or discredit if you will, "Baldy" Harold Cotton and curly-topped Paul Thompson, for the first fist fight of the season and the initial major penalties. They slugged it out after a bumping spree to the mingled cheers and boos of 13,500 fans. The big crowd provided a note of prosperity as the season got away to a speedy and thrill-packed start.

First Goal Solo Effort

Oliver's goal, at 4.05 of the first period, grew from a solo dash, while the New York band under the new managership of Red Dutton, was a man shy. Oliver joined Defenseman Marty Burke out of a position and fired the puck past Mike Karakas in goal for the Hawks, while Lorne Chabot nurses an injured knee.

In the second period the Chicago combination clicked in mid-season form. Lou Trudel scored after a passing play with Thompson and Tommy Cook. Four minutes later Thompson put the Hawks ahead after a rush with Cook and Doc MacFadyen, he latter assisted Doc Romnes to bag the only goal produced by the third period.

Before the game was set underway, Goalie Chabot hobbled up on crutches to receive from the hands of League President Frank Calder the Georges Vezina Memorial trophy. Chabot won the award by holding the goals opponents scored on the Hawks last season down to 88. His total was four less than the record mean Alex Connell compiled in helping Montreal Maroons into the play-offs where they snared the Stanley Cup.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR WILL VISIT IN U.S.

New York, Nov. 8.—(CP)—Dr. Henrich Bruening, former German Chancellor, was reported to be planning a return visit to the United States . . his first one having ended before it became known he was here.

OTTAWA WOMAN WINS $40,000

When Finalist finished third in the Manchester Handicap in England Mrs. Kennedy, wife of Joseph Kennedy, general merchant of Ottawa, became $40,000 richer. For several days she kept the good news within the family, but somehow it leaked out. She held ticket PV42215 in the Dublin sweepstake, which was coupled with Finalist. Mrs. Kennedy said she intended to leave the money in the bank. It was the first time she had bought a sweepstake ticket and therefore the first time she had ever won. Her room number was "Rainy Day."

Death and Terror Follow Kidnapping

June Robles now attends private school.

By Central Press Canadian

Tucson, Ariz., Nov. 8 — Haunted by as mysterious a lot of strange deaths and eerie horrors as any writer of terror yarns ever concocted, government agents are bringing Oscar H. Robson to trial here in an effort to answer the 18-month-old enigma, "Who kidnaped June Robles?"

Robson, middle-aged cabaret owner and cattle boss, has staunchly denied the charge that he wrote the ransom notes.

As weird as any Edgar Wallace tale, terrorism from the beginning has stalked the trail of this kidnaping.

Chained like some medieval prisoner, the brown-haired girl was found in a "torture-coffin," buried level with the desert floor. Near death from exposure to heat and cold, she was rescued in the nick of time.

Soon after June's rescue, William Lindstrom, a prospector, stumbled dazedly into the Phoenix, Ariz., police headquarters and mumbled a tale of having been abducted. Before he could finish, he dropped dead. Physicians found strychnine in his stomach.

And recently, Roddie Wells, who had aided the government in the case, died suddenly.

Eleven-year-old Goyo Estrada, the boy who was given a quarter to deliver the ransom note, was beaten mysteriously at night and left for dead. He recovered. Since he is the only other person besides June who saw any of the abduction gang, he may prove a key witness for the government.

Shortly afterward, Rex Farmer, a mechanic reported that he had been brutally beaten and thrown from a speeding automobile for having known "too much about the Robles abduction."

Then, most recently, Mrs. Mary Robson, mother of Oscar H. Robson, died, adding another fatality to the list of mounting deaths in the strange case.

Fearful lest the kidnappers strike in the lame direction again, members of the Robles family never leave their homes alone. June is watched constantly by her father and her mother. She attends a private school where she is guarded by the instructors.

Major Attlee, the new leader of the British Labor party is shown here as he addressed a great anti-Nazi demonstration in Hyde Park, London, organized by the British Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi Council. A huge crowd of 50,000 attended the demonstration organized as a protest against Nazi persecution.

ATTACKS REARMAMENT

Asserting that Great Britain has spent 10 billion dollars on its army, navy and air forces since the world war, Arthur Greenwood, ABOVE, former Labor cabinet member and now slated to head the British Labor party, bitterly attacks the British rearmament policy. Greenwood maintains that the British navy, augmented by the empire's naval forces, is the strongest in the world, with the probable exception of the United States navy.

He is Alfred Holland, who is weighing sugar in a grocery store at Tilshelf. He has been selected by the Clay Cross Divisional Labor party to succeed the late Arthur Henderson as candidate for the Clay Cross Division, Derbyshire.

MME. STAVISKY—B EFORE AND AFTER

Madame Arlette Simon Stavisky was once feted and courted as one of the leading beauties of France. She was won in marriage by Alexandre Stavisky, who was then at the height of his wealth. Then, just 21 months ago, Stavisky's intricate house of cards collapsed. He was sought as a swindler and found in a chalet—a suicide. Madame Stavisky was questioned and jailed. Her main occupation was planning a way to make a living for her two children. She is a mere number 79— as a beauty queen of France, where she is on trial with 16 men charged with complicity in the great Stavisky swindle. Because men in high places were accused of "protecting" the swindler the case has become a cause celebre, a political issue, marking an important line of demarcation between the "rights" and "lefts" of French politics. Mme. Stavisky is shown on the left as she appears today. And (RIGHT) as she appeared at the height of her reign

HUNTERS BEWARE! MOOSE SEASONS CHANGE!

Extensions and abertenings of the moose season in those parts of Canada where the hunting is not good (15 November and December, warrant careful study by hunters.

The farther north, the longer the season. In the Yukon Territory the moose season now extends to the end of February. In Manitoba west and north of Lake Winnipeg moose can now be hunted from November 15 to December 5 with a limit of one animal to each hunter. In New Brunswick, the season now ends on November 20.

In the three western provinces of Canada, moose seasons are open to December 15. Most of the hunting there is far north of the international boundary, in the unsettled parts of these provinces, where mining is now opening up the country, and where much of the trapping of fur bearing animals is done.

In Ontario the moose season varies as to district, but does not go beyond November 25, while Quebec provinces has an open season to the end of the year.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

He kissed her tenderly, and squeezed her limp fingers gently, as her eyes closed again, after that brief, radiant smile. Hope flamed in his golden amber eyes, as he glanced up at the strident little nurse—a new kind of bebe that had never lived there before.

"Take the best of care of her, nurse! On your life!" The little nurse sighed, because nothing like this had ever touched her drab little life before. So handsome," so distinguished and gallant. And so hopelessly, heart-breakingly in love with his little wife!

Michael grabbed a hasty coffee-and-rolls breakfast and boarded an uptown bus on the run, his long legs making time as he had never dreamed they could. All day you could have seen him. Hard at work. He drove a little flivver coupe, garishly lettered with glowing advertising, that told people everywhere the Lorendo Park Realty Company's dickery-making opportunities. He told people about lots and housing plans, and government mortgage loans that would finance the dream of owning one's own home and lot. He sold them. He did more than that, he doubled and triple groups of building lots, because he believed in them. Believed terribly.

The only way to get a home of one's own, he kept insisting, a workingman's dream come true. He was going to do it himself some day. When I've saved enough to buy the lot; buy the lumber!" And a dream flame lit his eyes, at the very thought.

All day, everywhere, he sold, contacted, made dates to meet new clients. For days, weeks, and Sundays and nights, he kept it up. And his commissions rose steadily, surely, as he knew, daily, over the worn wheel of the shining little car with the garishly lettered doors.

He wore a shabby, neatly pressed business suit of dark blue, though it was hard and sometimes to get a sported new. Spring tweeds and flannels. He turned down client's treats, luncheons, dinners, from customers, friends and acquaintances.

"No time. Sorry. Got to hustle. Besides—I'm on the 'wagon'! Can't accept a treat unless I can pay the favor back. God, a wife, you know. Thanks just the same!"

His face grew leaner, harder, but then came a glowing, ruddy, healthy color under his tan, as if his blood sang with clean, vigorous health. And every noon, and every night, he beat a straight swift course to the Park Beach Hospital, and dropped down in the chair beside Judy's bed, his amber eyes flaming with hope, with eager, exciting happiness, as he listened to her as she giving her bits of his experiences when he knew they would cheer her.

He brought her things, always. Not always things that cost money. A glowing branch of maple, flaming with long, dripping, crimson buds and trailers. A bunch of crimson sun and purple trillums he had spent an hour wandering along a swamp to pick for her, after selling a farm to an embryo chicken merchant. "They smell fierce, Judy, but they're so beautiful! I wanted to bring you some spring."

A bunch of mignonette, fluffy ground-out blooms, dog-violets, and four flawless, chaste, rosy ladies' slippers. A gorgeous bluejay's feather. The first melon he saw on the market. The first strawberries.

And other things. Things that proved the old Michael Swayne was dead, and a new Mike in his place. The story of a baby's smiles, and cute antics, when he had sold a young Naval man a farm, and his wife could live in the country and "make boy, selling eggs and dairy."

"Gee! . . . of my hair, Judy, and darned if she yanked it out, clear out! Bit my finger half off. And then begged me if I was a good-lost uncle. Gosh, he was cute!"

And always hope, and cheer, and steady, unwavering courage.

"Hurry and get well, Mrs. Swayne! I'm dying to show you my new pad. It's mine, all right! I sold every man-jack of 'em like hot cakes, wangled their bank loans to build their little homes, and saw to it they weren't gyped. I'm a shark at it, kiddo."

Judy was so proud, so thrilled, she expected any moment to wake up to rude, cruel reality, and find it all a beautiful, exquisite dream. She was so impatient to get well—well enough to be permitted to leave the hospital—that she was like an excited child in her eagerness to do everything they asked of her. Sleep, rest, sun-baths, medicine. They adored her for her enthusiastic co-operation, and adored Michael secretly, for inspiring her with such a passion for obedience.

A brief item in a morning paper Michael read over his coffee and rolls brought out another angle to the new Michael Swayne: "Noted engineer sails at midnight, on the S.S. Solaria, for extended work in South America. Edward R. "Ted" Hoyt, builder of Shanley Mountain Memorial Bridge, the Roosevelt Interstate Trunk Causeway, and many other notable engineering feats, leaves to superintend work on a series of Brazilian projects, where he first won fame as a cub engineer, fresh from college."

Michael clipped the item, and kept it in mind all day, all evening, until he said goodnight to Judy, and left. Instead of going to his lonely Y.M.C.A. room, he caught a down-town subway, transferred to a surface car, and got out at the docks. He carried, wrapped carefully in brown paper under his arm, a box that meant he would eat no desserts for many weeks to come, to balance his budget book.

"Hello, Hoyt," Michael greeted the tired, moon, thinner, much graver man in the modest stateroom. "I . . . uh . . . came to say goodbye. Wish you luck on your trip." And the brown parcel on the table beside Ted's chair, and the older man's face altered subtly.

"Thanks. . . . Michael, Judy didn't send you?"

"Oh, no. She. . . uh . . . doesn't know you're leaving. I'll tell her . . . when she's out of the hospital.

"Ted did not ask her why. He knew. He had made it his business to know, directly from Schuyler Remscheid himself, before a day, a week, or two, had passed.

"Ring of you. Thanks!" Ted said gruffly. And after a moment of grave measuring, weighing the new Michael who stood before him. "You'll do." Not grudgingly. But not admiringly, either.

"I came to thank you." Michael began soberly, and as Ted's brows went up "not entirely for what you did for Judy. For what you did for me. Putting me on the right road. Standing me on my feet. So I could find myself . . . and her."

They could never be friends in spite of their common bond in Judy. But Michael's words, spoken hesitantly, a little gruffly, wiped away any doubt Ted might have secretly harbored, as he left for distant lands, to lay to rest some of his loneliness and heartache in hard work, strange new surroundings, unfamiliar faces and voices. Far from the one face and voice, the one personality he knew would live on forever in his heart.

"Good luck, Ted." Michael said gravely, shaking hands, and feeling oddly proud, thrilled, as Ted's warm, hard handclasp erased the doubt from his own mind. "And come see us when you're back. Judy would want it."

"Thanks, Michael. Goodbye." He nodded toward the parcel.

"Not forgetting your package?" he suggested.

Michael grinned.

"For you. Cigars. Thought you'd enjoy them."

"Why . . . . thanks! Thanks very much!"

"They're paid for. . . . bought 'em myself," Michael added. He would always be adding that explanation to things he gave, for years to come. He walked, whistling softly, through the dark, hurrying confusion of the docks, and jumped on to a surface car to his room. He had lost four precious hours of sleep, and he was dog tired, but he was glad, happy.

"I've got to get back on the job again," Judy told him, the next time he saw her. "They're keeping me here much longer than I need to bet it makes me feel so useless. And guilty! I want to do my part, Michael."

"You're doing your part, when you get well, and step into your job," Michael insisted firmly. "You're not going back to any job again, Judy. You're to be a new Judy. You're going to keep house, and cook, and wait for Mike Swayne to get home the bacon. You're going to keep a budget book, and handle the money, and see that we get somewhere!"

We can't afford it yet, Michael," Judy protested.

"We're going to afford it, Mrs. Swayne!"

"But. . . . the office! I mean, Mr. Hoyt. I. . . . we. . . . owe him a lot, Michael. He did this. I. . . . I've got to pay him back, first."

"Mr. Hoyt" Michael assured her by saying. "I paid him up, and saw him off on his ship for South America!"

Judy gasped, sure she was dreaming.

"You. . . . wha. . . s. . . t. Michael!" Judy gasped, sure she was dreaming.

"I saw him off. I. . . . brought him a box of cigars from both of us, Judy. I thought you'd like me to."

"Michael," Judy breathed very carefully, softly, lest she waken, "You. . . . angel!"

"Nix!" Michael grinned. "Not on your life! I've also paid up a certain debt, a debt, a load-shark, and considerable on a car of our acquaintance. Besides saving some of each commission, in a bank account for my wife to furnish our home with when she has picked out the lot and ordered the style of bungalow. A very little bungalow to begin with, Judy, but we'll fix it up slick, sell it, make a profit, and buy another, bigger, and eventually, end up with what you want."

"Mike," Judy said, "could you kiss me? Right now? I think you're the grandest, most wonderful husband a girl ever had!"

Michael complied. Grinning, he held her off at arm's length, after a while, and surveyed her critically. "It's about time; don't you think, Sweetness?"

"About time. . . . what, Mike?"

"About time I buried that installment ghost and began making our marriage real!"

ITALIAN GUNS OVERLOOK MAKALE

Three Main Columns Massed on Ridge Dominating City

(By Andrew Berding)
Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

With the Italian army on the March, Nov. 8.— The entire Italian army along the 30-mile northern front occupied today a high ridge where its artillery looked down on Makale, objective Ethiopian city, and the village of Dedo.

The advancing Fascist forces took this strategic height after most of the whole northern front went forward at dawn in the final push on Makale, dividing the second major drive of the campaign to force Ethiopia into submission.

Back of Makale were strong Ethiopian forces which Italian officers believed might make their first real stand against the invaders.

Ras Halle Selassie Gugsa, former Ethiopian Governor of Makale who deserted to the Italians, is espar to lead the march into Makale and back to the flag of Italy.

Italian forces cleaning up the territory around Hazalien for resumption of the final drive routed hostile Ethiopian bands in a spirited hand-to-hand encounter.

The Ethiopians who fled from the close combat after a charge by African Askaris wielding sabres and bayonets, were reported to have suffered heavy losses.

Tweed and District

Tweed—Tweed Council met on Monday evening in the Council Chamber with Reeve Sayers, Councillors Purdy, Myles and Kingston present.

The Council was interviewed by Mr. T.C. Graham with respect to the possibility of extending the water main to the corner of McCammon Avenue and River Street. He was informed that a brief had a petition of ratepayers requesting the same. Messrs. C. McFall and W.E. Spackman also interviewed the Council with respect to a grant for the Public Library. The members expressed themselves as favorable to the grant and left the fixing of the amount of the grant to a subsequent meeting to be held on Nov. 15th.

The following accounts were ordered paid:—

O.D Wilson $5.15; Paul Rashotte $6.30; W. H. Richardson $31.60; A.O. Hayes $78.30; H. Courneyea $10.00; Tweed Foundries $.50; Joe Rashotte $27.15; Ontario Hospital, Woodstock $46.00; Kerr and Co. $83.75; Joe Rashotte selecting jurors $4.00; C. Kleinsteuber do. $4.00; W.H. Sayers do. $4.00; W.D. Courtney $5.00; Canada Bros. $24.18; John Hawkins $6.40; J.H. Foster $8.40; A.C. Bleakley $5.00; Hastings County of Hastings $14.11; Tracy Quinn $53.80; Dominion Stores $7.20; John Burleigh's $5.30; Elgie Drinkwater $13.40.

A by-law was introduced to set the time and place for a nomination and election of a new board of councillors for the year 1936, and a member of the Public Utilities Commission for two years. The date to be Friday November 22nd. 7.30 p.m. for the nomination and date of the election if one is required will be December 5th. 1935.

Springer and Beatty contractors of Campbellford, who have been engaged for several weeks in crushing stone for Highway No. 37 have completed their contract for supplying several thousand tons of crushed stone. They will probably be awarded a contract for more crushed stone for No. 7 highway.

Strong representations are being made by Peterboro interests to have the Forestry Branch moved from Tweed to Peterboro. This is the only Provincial branch office located in Hastings County and a great deal to the village. The removal of the branch and the families connected with it would be a serious loss to Tweed. It is hoped that the local Community Club will make sufficiently strong representations to the Ontario Government that the Forestry Branch will remain in its present location.

The staff of Tweed High School and the students concerned are to be congratulated in the winning of two Carter scholarships this year. These scholarships are awarded annually to Upper School students who write off ten Upper School Departmental Examinations in June. The winners from Tweed High School in 1935 are: Mary Hinlin; second Carter scholarship, cash value $60; and Hilliard Varty, third Carter scholarship, cash value $40.

Reports of Tweed No. 7 of the W.M.S. of Tweed United Church met at the home of Mrs. A.B. Allen on Tuesday evening, Mrs. M. Ardenne presided over the meeting. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. M.G. Daley, and the Devotional leaflet by Mrs. G.H. Connor. It was reported that $106 had been raised to date for missions. This represents over eighty per cent. of all allocations, which will probably be raised in full by the end of the current year. The first chapter of the new study book, "The Call of Africa," was given in a very interesting and capable manner by Miss Hazel Grindell, B.A.

The remainder of the programme was in keeping with Remembrance Day. Miss Dorothy Bagot A.T.C.M. sang most feelingly "William Tell Song," a song dedicated to those who made the supreme sacrifice. Following this beautiful selection, Miss Grace Houston read "In Flanders Fields" and "Remembrance Reply." Several short Remembrance Day readings were given by Miss R. Stuart B.A., Miss Logan and Mrs. C.E. Way. The hymn "O Valiant Hearts" followed Mrs. M. Ardenne offered prayer to conclude the meeting.

The work of dismantling the large steel barn, which is being constructed by Mr. Edgar Jones into a modern garage, was begun on Monday. A gang of men under the direction of Mr. A. Smart of Renfrew are removing the metal roofing and siding, the rafters, plates etc. necessary to cutting the huge building down to the proportions necessary for the garage. Mr. Jones has also purchased the dwelling next door. This will be moved back about 30 feet from its present location. A second gang of men is engaged in excavating a cellar and filling and levelling the ground at the side of the garage. Several partitions in the house are being torn out and the entire interior of the house is being remodelled.

Speaking to the accused, who was standing in the box, His Lordship stated, "I would have come to the same conclusion as the jury. I do not say you were in bad company for Aldora and Belleville, but whether you were or not, you alone know. You are not a criminal class but a victim of circumstances and it is a pity you ever went to that hotel for employment. Your counsel, Mr. Payne, conducted your defence ably and expressed his appreciation of the fairness with which the case had been conducted by the crown. The accused is a stranger in the public, crimes of this kind must be punished." In closing Mr. Justice Jeffrey told O'Brien not to have a grievance against society. "Remember the care, loyalty and devotion of your mother and after you have served the sentence of this court come out with a new viewpoint on life and try to redeem your past. Don't look on life as a drab affair," said Mr. Justice Jeffrey.

"No one regrets the death of this young boy more than the accused" said Charles A. Payne, K.C., defending his charge to the jury at the close of the trial. He said that E. O'Brien arraigned on a charge of manslaughter at the Fall assizes of the Supreme Court at Napanee, Mr. Payne pictured the life of the accused, stating that he had two tasks for hire and was working as a night clerk after he had been laid off his employment with the Bell Telephone Company. The counsel outlined the law respecting manslaughter and expressed his appreciation of the fairness with which the case had been conducted by the crown. "The accused is a stranger in a strange land", said Mr. Payne, "and I am sure he will be given a verdict commensurate with the crime." O'Brien was a hired man with Deacon and Allen as passengers, and he acted as a normal man during the whole proceedings. What ever unusual happened in Napanee is for you to decide.

The defence counsel argued the accused did everything that was humanly possible to avoid any accident. He maintained O'Brien was a careful driver and possessed of all his faculties at all times, taking the evidence of Mr. McDonald and Mr. Pringle into account, for McDonald saw him previous to the accident and Mr. Fitzpatrick shortly after.

Crown Counsel Heard

Mr. A. H. Silk, crown prosecutor followed the defence counsel, charged His Lordship, defence counsel and the jury for the splendid cooperation that had been given in the trial. There is no question about the case, who was the driver and the fact that a child was killed. Taking each witness in turn, Mr. Silk reviewed the testimony pointing out salient facts, that he argued were important in the case. Being an intelligent operation of a motor car, and the driving in death of a little boy. The counsel paid particular attention to the crown in the road, stating it was a normal crown and that it would not throw a car unless the driver was travelling at a fast rate of speed.

Charge To Jury

His Lordship, Mr. Justice Jeffrey in opening his address stressed the point of law involved was the duty to manslaughter. "The case has been most carefully presented and has been listened patiently—The crown and defence have done everything they cannot have but sympathy for the father and mother but the case could be stripped of all sympathy and look at it from the facts as presented by the evidence" said His Lordship. "You must take your own common sense, said His Lordship. "What did you do when you approached this particular car?—It is not always a faulty engine that attracts attention but generally a speed at which if was being driven. Four witnesses in the case have stated that the car was driven at an excessive rate of speed."

Speaks on Speed of Car

Reviewing the evidence further, his Lordship stated that the witness Ted O'Brien knew the speed at which he was travelling? There, is the evidence of Deacon, who gave an estimate of the speed but he was intoxicated and how much reliance can be put in his testimony? Mr. Pringle saw the crown of the road and the depression, His Lordship was of the opinion that probably the crown of the road and other possible defects had been exaggerated by the defence. About the brakes Mr. Justice Jeffrey dwelt at length. He stated, had his car not tried a curb and caused an accident, that he would have gone to the garage to have the brakes adjusted, if the accident had been caused by defective brakes, but he said "The car was driven from the scene of the accident without ascertaining the damage done and then driven to Kingston without anything being done with the brakes" Is this the action of a man, who was running cars for hire and who had a working knowledge of motor cars? asked His Lordship.

NEXT 24 HOURS IMPORTANT IN TAYLOR MURDER

Police Expect to Weld Chain That Will Solve Crime

REGAN OFFERS HELP

Counsel of O'Donnell Says Police Have Wrong Man

Toronto, Nov. 9.—(CP)—City of Toronto and Ontario Government experts today began a scientific examination of the undisclosed objects which a three-day search revealed in the ravine where the battered body of Miss Ruth Taylor was found Monday.

As the scientists, behind closed doors, began their investigations with the unofficial information developments in the case might be expected within a few hours. Frank Regan, counsel for Harry O'Donnell, charged with the girl's death, protested his client was innocent and said he could give a description of the man who killed her.

He said a thick-set man about five feet, ten inches in height attacted a woman on the same night and near the spot, a year ago Miss Taylor was assaulted, Regan said he had a statement from the woman, who was attacked and who was able to ward off her assailant.

"This man is the guilty man in the Taylor case and it can be established beyond any doubt he is not O'Donnell. Why do not police decide this man? If they need any help I shall be glad to help them," the lawyer said.

Chief Constable Draper said he was ignorant of such information. Asked if there was any other witness to the attack, Regan said: "I could name the ravine."

Regan said further: "I could establish O'Donnell was in his home somewhere before midnight," Monday.

"Furthermore the police have in their possession information which ought to satisfy any reasonable, sane person that my client is not guilty. This evidence embraced, what the police say and found in the room, where O'Donnell lived," he said.

Chief Coroner Crawford and Crown Attorney McFadden conferred today on the matter of an inquest. Doubtfully it was said the inquest might be held Nov. 18.

Prof. Gabyn Rogers, Dr. H. R. Frankish and Dr. I. H. Erb yesterday removed samples of earth and several small articles from the ravine at the spot where girl's body lay. These small material, apparently of cloth, was said to have been taken from the flat where O'Donnell lived. It is also understood samples had been made as yet of the clothing, including shoes, of the girl, similar to that from the girls sweater allegedly to have been found in man's clothing now in the hands of the police

Police said a man's overcoat found near the ravine "has no bearing on the case."

The investigation was summed up by one police official:

"We have a lot of very delicate and serious work ahead of us. Up to now it is all circumstantial material. Some of this is small in itself but when massed it will be extremely careful in our tests because to make an error would mean the probable destruction of the value of the material. It will be some time before we will be able to announce definite findings."

CHARGED WITH MOLESTING

Geoffrey Deniks, Prince Edward County, Arrested on Girl's Complaint

Two cases of young girls being molested on rural roads have been reported to the local police authorities that have resulted in the holding for questioning of a man giving his name as Geoffrey Deniks, Prince Edward County. According to the information from the information-giving young lady, Deniks was driving his automobile and on several occasions stopped the vehicle and tried to attract the attention of the young woman. A second such case occurred in the northern section of the county, when a local youth accosted an 18-year-old girl who became frightened and ran home. Later the police located a local youth whom they questioned regarding the man in question, and warned him not to continue such practice in the future. A charge of impounding peaceable pedestrians was laid against Deniks. Chief Kidd announced today.

MAY RE-INVESTIGATE SMALL DISAPPEARANCE

When Ambrose J. Small, millionaire Toronto theatre magnate, disappeared in December, 1919, he created a mystery that has since baffled the best police minds. No trace of Mr. Small has ever been heard since the day he disappeared. The whole case is now being revived since the death of Mrs. Small a few days ago. Reopened by Patrick Sullivan, witnesses are being interviewed and may be brought to Toronto for examination if will is protected. Some of the witnesses allege strange actions on part of Mrs. Small and state their belief that his body is buried in the Small home (shown above) in Toronto. The last photo is to be taken of Ambrose Small before his disappearance is also shown.

KINGSFORD-SMITH BELIEVED LOST IN BAY OF BENGAL

Last Seen Battling Way in Monsoon on Bay of Bengal

VARIED EXPERIENCE

Many Times Has he Faced Death in Lengthy Flights

Singapore, Nov. 9 (CP Cable)— Darkness fell over the Malay peninsula tonight as Royal Air Force aircraft were returned to their base after searching the Bay of Bengal and Malacca Strait all day for the missing Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and his famous Lady Southern Cross.

Contrary to earlier belief, it was learned the missing Australians' plane could remain afloat indefinitely if turned down on the Bay of Bengal, where they were last seen fighting through a monsoon.

Singapore, Nov. 9—(CP Cable)— Royal Air Force aircraft resumed today across trackless jungle waters of the Bay of Bengal in search of Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and his plane, the Lady Southern Cross.

Sir Charles and his co-pilot, Tom Pethybridge, were last reported on the second flight from England to Australia, brought word yesterday, that the Western airmen was encountering bad weather as the Lady Southern Cross over the Bay of Bengal, 150 miles from land, battling a monsoon. Flames were shooting from the exhaust and the plane was fighting to make headway, he reported.

A squadron of air force bombers, piloted by Flight-Lieut. Glidrid, Sergeant Chorlton and two Indian Air Force pilots headed his own flight to turn back and aid them.

No New Experience

Peril in the air was no new experience for the adventurous Sir Charles, knighted in 1932 for his services to aviation in Australia.

With Capt. Charles Ulm and several other daring fliers, he made the first trans-Pacific flight from Oakland, Calif., to Brisbane, Australia in 1928, thrilling the world with the way. At Hawaii and Suva, Fiji Islands, the plane was forced down by gasoline gone.

In 1929 he was lost for 13 days, flying with Capt. Ulm in a wild, desolate section of Western Australia, and later made a flight from Australia to England. Finally search parties found them, safe and their plane unhurt, beside their crippled plane. Later the same year he completed the first flight to establish a new mark of 13 1-2 days.

Fought Storm For Hours

In May of this year Sir Charles and Capt. Ulm in the Lady plane in the air on a special jubilee flight over the Pacific ocean between Australia and New Zealand. One engine was disabled, when the propeller dropped off, and the other two engines faltered in a wild storm. Radio messages told of their plight and Lord Bayley, aided by the heroism of Capt. C. O. Taylor, flew near enough to drop the wings several times to feed oil into the sputtering motors.

Record Lowered

Port Darwin, Australia, Nov. 9 — (AP) — Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith's 1933 England-Australia solo record was lowered today by a fellow Australian, C. W. A. Scarlett.

Broadbent, landing here six days, 21 hours, 19 minutes after leaving Croydon, beat Kingsford-Smith's record by seven hours, 36 minutes.

Rev. W. J. Walker Speaks to Masons

An interesting story was told of early settlement in Upper Canada, and the hardships endured and of the war struggles through which the people passed from as far back as 1812 to the end of the Great War was told by the Rev. W. J. Walker, M.A., B.D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, at the monthly meeting of The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A.F. and A.M. at the Masonic Temple. The sturdy character of the people and their response to duty was graphically told.

Rev. Mr. Walker was introduced by Rev. A. B. Payne of St. Thomas Church. At the close of the address, a vote of thanks was given the speaker on motion of Most Wor. Bro. W. M. Denton, Past Grand Master. During the evening the Salvation Army Band delivered a number of selections.

Wor. Bro. John Noakes, master, presided over a smoker banquet following the lodge meeting.

In Flanders Now

(Canada's Answer to John McCrae's "IN FLANDERS FIELDS")

We have kept faith ye Flanders dead,
Sleep well beneath those poppies red,
That mark your place,
The torch yoyr dying hands did throw,
We've held it high before the foe,
And answered bitter blow by blow
In Flanders Fields.

And where your heroes' blood was spilled.
The guns are now forever still,
And silent frown.
There is no meaning of the slain,
There is no cry of tortured pain,
And blood will never flow again,
In Flanders Fields.

Forever holding in our sight,
Shall be those crosses gleaming white,
That guard your sleep.
Rest you in peace, the task is done,
The fight you left us we have won,
"And peace on earth has just begun."
In Flanders Fields.

NEW ARTILLERY MODERN RIFLES REACH ETHIOPS

Critical Battles Expected in Mountains 15 Miles South of Makale

NATIVES MASSING

Confirmation of Advance of Italians Seen in Plane's Flight

Addis Ababa, Nov. 9 (CP)—For the first time since the opening of the war with Italy this capital today felt the presence of the enemy. A strange plane flew high over the city and quickly disappeared.

To many here this was a dramatic confirmation the Italians had pushed further into the country on both the northern and southern fronts. There was little doubt in anyone's mind the stranger was an Italian plane.

The plane had already been preceded by reports the air arm of the Fascist army was counting the way to further advances.

Heavy bombers soared northward from the new Italian lines and bombarded the town of Dansbor, on the Lesser River about 10 miles southeast of Enerar.

Ethiopians are massing in mountain positions 15 miles south of Makale. The mountains there are over 11,000 and 12,000 feet, presenting formidable barriers to artillery, tanks and even infantry.

Critical battles are expected in this area, described by military experts as the key sector in the conflict.

While Mussolini slowly extended his lines, Haile Selassie received new long range artillery, thousands of European rifles and millions of cartridges through various frontiers, heretofore blocked by the arms embargo, lifted by the League of Nations.

Occupation of Mai-Tsweo

Unending columns of the Emperor's warriors from more remote parts of the realm are still proceeding slowly toward the frontiers. So great is the stream of manpower serious congestion already exists in Southern Tigre and adjoining provinces behind the northern front.

Authorities said they are finding it most difficult to feed, clothe and shelter the warriors massed in the mountain regions, and also fear-ful of the spreading of disease amongst tactical retreats and other troop movement.

Ethiopians Captured.

Rome, Nov. 9 (AP)—Capture of an Ethiopian detachment by Italian troops after an engagement between Lakes Ahsum and the Takazze River, was reported today in an official communique.

"On the front of the second army corps," the communique quoted Gen. De Bono, "an important detachment fought an Ethiopian force between Ahsum and the Takazze River and forced it to surrender."

ITALIAN ADVANCE

While Italians are reported to have taken Makale without a shot being fired, it is also reported that the Ethiopians are taking their stand 15 miles to the south of the city where, it is believed, the biggest battle of the war to date will be fought. Map shows course of new Italian advance.

Canadian Book Week

The libraries throughout Canada are drawing attention to the books by Canadian authors during the week of November 9th to 16th. Canadian Book Week has been set aside to demonstrate that Canada is not declining in literary ability, but rather that much creditable work is ever issued. The idea was originated by the Canadian Authors' Association and is sponsored by them. The Association makes the purpose clear in the official statement "By no laws related in our favour, by no standards lowered in our benefit, does Canadian literature claim to be judged. We do claim, however, to be judged fairly, under the high standards we acknowledge."

The Library has added three Canadian volumes to its shelves for Canadian Book Week.

The 1935 revised edition of "Our Canadian Literature" chosen and edited by Miss Carman and Lorne Pierce, is a volume of representative verse in English and French. Miss Carman did not live to see the anthology in print but Dr. Pierce put the manuscript in form for the press and added the section of verse which appeared after his death, including her own splendid "Ave Canada, Ave" and "Ave Canada, Vale" which was the final tribute of our own times." Part One contains English poems ranging from those of Susanna Moodie, Charles Sangster, and Thomas D'Arcy McGee to those of the young writers of to-day, Nathaniel Benson, Dorothy Livesay, Earle Birney. The French collection in Part Two begins with the tradition-al French ballads, songs and and concludes with the work of the young poets Robert Choquette, Alphonse Routhier and Alfred DesRochers.

While the Library cannot claim the personal taste of Miss Carman, he felt at the same time that they rep-resented the best work of the seventeenth century which linger about that city, the early pioneers of the city with the principal buildings included, and to the enjoyment of a fireside tour of the ancient French capital.

Charles W. Jeffreys, R.C.A., has preserved the pageantry and romance of the Province of Quebec in art. "Canada's Past in Pictures", written, and illustrated by the artist, reveals another side of Canada, the vivid story. The artist has sought with diligence and historical material and from these he has repro-duced his pictures—furniture, pub-vehicles, buildings, made by handi-craftsmen whose productions he says were often more interesting and more trustworthy than written docu-ments. Much historical material has been preserved in fifty stories and pictures. The artist hopes to fill in many phases of early life with a series in the future.

Following is a list of twenty-five outstanding books on display at the Library this week. Each titled:

Bovey, Wilfred, Canadien: Hrin-ley, E. J., Away to the Cape; Bur-rell, Martin, Arctic Nights and Days; Canadian problems by various authors; Creighton, Helen, Songs and Ballads from Nova Scotia; Doughty, A. ### BOOK REVIEW

"Adventures in the Air", by Archer Wallace. The Ryerson Press, Toronto.

In this new book for boys Mr. Wallace traces the development of aviation by means of a series of short biographical sketches from the per-sonal tastes of Dr. Isaac, who is a country of "magnificent distances" crossing the Peace Bridge at Buffalo the distinguished visitor was in his his first visit to this country was amazed at the distances that were covered by the train. Even India, with its vast areas, appears dwarfed by distances between cities and by the freshness and grandeur of the coun-try visited.

Visit in U.S.

Prior to his visit to Belleville, Dr. Isaac was a guest of the United States Department of Agriculture and was afforded the opportunity of studying departmental methods in insect control at Washington and the Washington entomologists. On his return to the United States on his way to Porto Rico and Hawaii, where he will study the sugar cane industry, he will be given the opportu-nity of gaining some knowledge of the control of the cotton boll weevil in Louisiana and the Southern United States.

Arriving from his native India on the Georgian, Dr. Isaac was an overnight visitor to New York city. While there on Saturday morning he experienced a slight shock of one of the earthquake which shook that section.

Not Quake Only Shudder

"That was the earthquake. It was just a mild shudder. It couldn't be compared to the real one we had in India," Dr. Isaac said, "but most of the others we have experienced in that country," he smiled.

One of the most favorable condi-tions for the increase of the insect pests in India is caused by the low rental rates which visit certain sec-tions of the country annually in the district of Pusa, where he is stationed.

"You can start out in the morning on a trip and see nothing but clear skies. Inside of twenty-four hours you will have gone through a rain that will deposit from seven to ten inches of water over the section. You have the mosquito plagues and the dread malaria epidemics that happens the government quickly or-ganizes campaigns to drain away the swamps and waterholes with an oil film to discourage the breeding of the flies".

Indian View on Ethiopia

Dr. Isaac declared the natives of India to be strongly against the Italians as the result of the invasion of Ethiopia.

"Most of them look upon Ethiopia as a stronghold of ancient tradition, apparently sacred to the colored man. They feel that Mussolini should keep his army out of there let them carry on as they have been doing and not inject newer meth-ods into the country by force of arms. So far there has been no open revolt of the invasion, how-ever," cautiously replied Dr. Isaac when questioned.

He left at two o'clock in the afternoon for the east and will pro-ceed again to Washington where he will remain briefly.

The first drunk was found at the upper end of Front street lying in a doorway and helplessly drunk. The second was found prostrate in the ditch on Cannifton Road and Frighteningly passersby. Charges were preferred in both cases.

New Entomological Labratory Will be Finest in World

Dr. P. V. Isaac, Expert of Government in India Pays Visit

"Belleville's new entomological laboratory when it is finished will be the most complete and finest in the world," quietly commented Dr. P. V. Isaac, India, expert entomologist of the Government of India, a brief visitor to Belleville yesterday.

Dr. Isaac who is making a study of North American insect pests in the interests of the government he represents spent the day yesterday in company with Mr. A. S. Baird, chief entomologist of the local lab-oratory in a survey of the new build-ings now under construction and a study of local methods as applied to parasites and insect pests of this country.

Insect Pests in India

Canada's insect pests differ great-ly from those encountered in his native India, Dr. Isaac declared. Here the chief enemies are the hav-ing fought by the Canadian govern-ment, the fruit destroyers, the tim-ber insects and the ravaging corn borer are unknown in India, where sugar cane pests ,which include the caterpillar borers, the cotton mag-got, and various species of the ter-midention of the entomologists of India. Among the chief pests there are included the paddy borers, de-structive fire of the rice fields of that country.

Insect Pests in India

Dr. Isaac who will spend only one or two days in Canada made Belleville, one of his first points of inspection owing to the fact that the construction of the new labora-tory addition here has been recently advertised in scientific circles. A full account of the new building and the special construc-tion methods for the latest study of Canadian and European insect pests has appeared in scientific magazines even as far as India. Dr. Isaac was anxious to inspect the progress that had been made.

Speaking in the precise, clipped accents of a university graduate, Dr. Isaac, who was a graduate of the London, (England), University, and has made entomology his chief study since, declared the growth of interest in insect pests to be a consistent and noticeable one during

Situation Differs

"We in India are faced with a different situation than you Canad-ians or Americans, we have a tropical condition of temper-ature which is not the case as it is different. Growth is slower and we have more time in which to con-test the more destructive pests. The British Government of India has been particularly alive to the situa-tion in that country lately.

Canada was cited by Dr. Isaac as

CLOTHING TAKEN

Cobourg, Ont., Nov. 9 (CP)—Smashing a window last night in Port Hope at the rear of T. S. Margles' Store, thieves stole $600 worth of dry goods. It included a large quantity of men's and boys' wear and also women's clothing. A discarded suit case found in police believe the work was done by trans-tious, uncertain flights of the Mont-golfiers in France to the confident achievements of men like Lindbergh and his fellows. Each sketch is built around some outstanding personality, who has made some definite contribution to aviation and marks a distinct stage in the conquest of the air.

Mr. Wallace, the editor of a boy's paper, writes for boys between the ages of ten and sixteen and his brief, pithy style of narration is well suited to selection. Written in youthful reader, but the adult who desires a smattering of the history of aviation over the past hundred and fifty years, can

Other Speakers Advocate Construction of Bathing Beach

Belleville with a broad and glistening avenue of trees and ornamental shrubbery the length of Front Street at the rear of the present business buildings along the west side of the riverfront as one means of beautifying the city was graphically described by Mr. W. B. Deacon, principal guest speaker at the Open Forum meeting of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held in the Chamber rooms this evening.

The meeting, which had as its guests members of the city council and city board of control, the Chamber of Commerce and leading officials of Hastings County was devoted to the consideration and discussion of town planning, past actions of the present and past councils and a forecast of what might be accomplished through united and concerted effort on the part of the civic body of the citizens as represented by the Chamber of Commerce and united bodies.

A cordial welcome was given to the newly elected members of the Chamber by president Ray Symington. Mr. J. R. Bryce.

"We believe we stand to support this organization because it has merited your support," declared President Symington. Mr. Bryce. "We believe that as you become more closely acquainted with Belleville today, that you will realize the benefits it has been and will be to the city. In this Chamber of Commerce we have the opportunity to help the city do some place; you will have the interest of both the city and the Chamber at heart and work hand and the city will both benefit from your association. I extend a hearty Good, to welcome you here this evening."

Through Highway Needed

Introduced by Mr. Jamieson Bone, the question of town planning found ready response by Mr. Stuart Moncrieff. Mr. Moncrieff cited the need for more extensive work on the sewer system, declaring this section to be most in need of attention on the part of the city council. One constructive action on the part of council would be the elimination of the present "jungle" at the west end of the city by the building of a through highway, which would run from the waterfront, preferably along Church Street, if practicable, declared the speaker, along the waterfront to the west end of the city and one of the needed improvements.

"If this promenade were constructed from the Bridge Street corner to the upper section of the city it would relieve Pinnacle Street from the present traffic which chokes it. The whole waterfront could be improved and yearly dump reclaimed so that it wouldn't look like it does now. The mosquito nuisance would be controlled and in time a splendid beach could be built along there at a minimum cost. Along the foot of Bleecker Avenue is one of the best sites for a waterfront in the country for sand and gravel and we would have an excellent beach. Even the old boat wreck that is at present there could be utilized as a diving platform for the swimmers."

"The waterfront used to be looked upon purely as an industrial site. But manufacturing concerns, oil companies and the like no longer prefer a site with a water approach owing to the fact that the water boats are disappearing from the lakes and railways are taking up the space and congestion. That is one of the suggestions, that I would make towards more perfect realization of the city planning."

Transform Waterfront

Mr. J. Arnold Thomson, architect, declared himself thoroughly inclined toward the suggestion that the waterfront section along the south shore line of the bay be transformed.

"Stand at the city tourist camp and see for yourself what a perfect waterfront Yista we have there. With the aid of a dredge or two we would be able to make a perfectly safe beach by forming a lagoon between the shore and the present island. It wouldn't cost much and it would be perfectly safe for even the smaller bathers. I don't believe there is another spot in Belleville that would lend itself so readily to such a transformation."

A strong suggestion, that Belleville in the near future must consider some means of sewage disposal other than the mere dumping of the waste into the waters of the Bay, River was advanced by Mr. Jamieson Bone in a brief address.

"Forward movements in this city, for some reason or other, have always met a certain amount of opposition. It seems to me, that the councils we have had have bothered themselves over many things, that are really headed in the right line. It has been the same way for years, and when Front Street was suggested, it appeared that a certain number of those in council would rather not have the work done, even though houses using the street were often up to their knees in the mud."

Bathing Beach Needed

"Belleville at the present time needs a bathing beach. It is a crime the pollution, that occurs in the Moira River each day through the sewage that is dumped into it and the bathers have to go down to the harbor at the end of park. Let us get some idea of what is needed to help this city.

Let us get a city planning authority and start in on making some improvements. Let us extend our activities to the west end of the city, even where the Canadian Locomotive property is. We need the co-operation of the city council in all these matters; what we need is a plan and then the coordination of the various service clubs and citizens. Right here in the city we have, I believe, about 1,000 cars of parking and during the present summer they have always been in a disreputable condition. It is the duty of the city council to see that the parking facilities are improved. No attempt has been made to keep the streets in front of our stores clean. We can't expect

RUST PROOF WHEAT

In agriculture one of the greatest discoveries of the age has been made, rustless wheat which will be in the hands of the farmers by 1937. Rust has been the bane of Canada's major crop and development of a wheat which will not rust is one of the chief benefits for which the Canadian farmer ought to feel very grateful. And not only the Canadian farmer but every farmer throughout the world may benefit, for wheat in the United States, Argentine, and Australia suffer.

But Canadians will get first to the market with the wheat which goes out to the Canadian farmer and that should mean a great increase in wealth.

As the recovery proceeds the available wheat stocks of the world decline. The past year has seen a drop of a third of a billion bushels in the total of supplies and the decline in reserve wheat will continue to drop.

THAT CANADA OF 179,000,000

Canadians today will find it difficult to visualize a Dominion with a population of 179 millions but that is the picture which Prof. Griffith Taylor, head of the new department of geography at the University of Toronto draws. The time when so many will claim Canada as their native land is far in the future but not so far as some may suppose. This age is an age of vast and rapid development, and the growth of the United States, rapid as it has been was not so rapid as that of Canada will ultimately become. Such a population will mean greater density than in the United States, because the far north of Canada will not be habitable to any large degree and will support but few inhabitants. This will mean that the Canada of that future date will have half as many people again as the United States has at present. By that time of course the United States will have far more than the number estimated for Canada, it would seem.

A Canada of 179,000,000 persons in a habitable area smaller than the United States will mean vast cities—possibly cities of ten millions—something almost inconceivable to us at present. It will mean many great cities and the transformation of our whole country. What Ontario will be in those days it is really nothing to wonder about. What even will Belleville be in that far off day. The present Belleville progressive as it is will probably have been long lost in a great development and change which will leave few traces of this street-shaded city which all love so much.

One could go on trying to imagine what life in the days ahead will be. But it is largely idle fantasy because no one knows the trend of invention and the rapidity with which men's very habits will change somewhat with changing devices, and no one can guess the future.

The present and the immediate future hold a vast future in their hands. What will be done with it depends on the wisest counsel must prevail, for it is counsel which will decide what the Canada of 179,000,000 persons will be like.

THE MOON'S FUTURE

Our moon will soon break into pieces and create a perpetual moonlight on earth, according to the noted Sir James Jeans, British scientist.

The moon has had a hard life. It somewhere back in the past broke loose from the earth to reach the stage which it now occupies cold, solid, atmosphereless, revolving about earth. But it does a great deal of good for it has given life on earth the experience of moonlight, which is reflected sunlight, and which has modified all life. What the earth looks like to the moon is no consequence to it, and no one dwells in the lunar sphere except in flights of imagination.

But this moonlight may pass, according to the head of the Royal Astronomical Society, for he believes the moon is heading for a danger zone near the earth and will break first in two, then four, then eight segments, which eventually will become myriads. These particles will resemble Saturn's rings casting perpetual moonlight on earth.

Such would have terrific consequences to earth, according to a Toronto astronomer who thinks Jeans meant by "soon" a cosmic period of time, a couple of million years. If "soon" meant "soon" as man means it, the disruption of the moon would probably mean the complete disruption of life as we know it. "The centre of gravity around which the moon revolves is about 1000 miles below the surface of the earth and if the moon suddenly disintegrated, that centre would drop a couple of thousand miles," according to the Toronto scientist who thought that would mean earthquakes which would result, which would displace continents and probably cause the end of everything on earth.

But no one believes that is imminent. By the time it does occur if it does take place, it may be that life will have long passed from the earth.

But in the moonlight lovers will continue to choose their seasons, poets will muse, and mankind generally delight for no one expects the moon moon will cease to be what it has been long before man first dwelt upon the earth.

WHEN AN ETHIOPIAN KILLS AN ENEMY he certainly does not kill him just a little, he makes a thorough job of it and amputates certain portions of the torso to prove that he has killed a man—all of which adds to his importance as a fighting man and good citizen. Especially does he find favor in the eyes of the fair colored sex of Ethiopia, whose happiness seems to increase in direct ratio to the number of men killed and carved up to provide gruesome mementoes for her. At least as we are told by explorers who have visited Ethiopia, studied the customs and returned in one piece.

THE REAL TROUBLE

As the motorist turned a corner in a quiet country road, he saw a brother of the wheel just ahead, evidently in trouble, immediately he slowed down.

The other motorist looked gratefully at him as he wiped the perspiration off his brow.

RAW SILK PRICE RISES SHARPLY

Silk Stockings Likely to Increase in Price Shortly

Belleville women will soon be paying more for their silk stockings, it was stated today by one leading merchant of the city who points to the fact that raw silk has advanced in price per pound in this country over 62 per cent. since June.

Although stockings have not advanced materially in price there is no indications point to a rapid rise in the near future, it was stated.

On June 3 last spot silk was selling at $1.35 per pound on the New York market. A month later, the market had started to move up and by August 1 had reached $1.53 a pound. The end of the month saw a new high at $1.85. By the end of the following month the price stood at $2 per pound and the highest mark was reached in October with a price of $2.22 and slightly over. Raw silk experts declare the price will carry further before it has run its full course, and that the winter and spring months will see even higher levels than the present high. The price of silk is controlled by the Japanese industry which supplies most of the world market. Due to disturbing foreign politics at the present time the industry is in a state of uncontrolled fluctuations.

SMOKE PROBLEM WILL BE STUDIED

Excessive Coal Smoke is Blamed For Deposits on Walls

Belleville has a smoke nuisance. Grimy, black clouds pour from downtown chimneys of business houses, hotels and establishments annually plaster the exteriors of local buildings with a heavy deposit of soot and grease.

The city hall recently renovated, scrubbed, cleaned and repainted, has already taken on a dingy tone from the city's smoke. It was decided today by the local aldermen who will bring the matter to the attention of the committee at the next meeting.

Improper combustion and regulation of heating plants has been the reason for the excessive smoke, it was stated today by one prominent expert. Careful handling of fuels and proper regulation would remedy the condition, it was pointed out. Automatic stokers and feeders have done much in late years to cure this evil.

"We have a bylaw which regulates the smoke nuisance and we have had occasion to use it in the past," it was stated today at the office of the city engineer, "but at times we have been forced to call attention to excessive smoke and we are continuing to do this and hope to regulate the evil as far as we are able," it was added.

County buildings on the other hand have little fear for the smoke master. For the past several years, due to the effects of the prevailing chlorox, wood has been the only fuel allowed in the boilers of these buildings. Perfect satisfaction has been given. It was stated by those in charge of heating.

Little Benny's Note Book

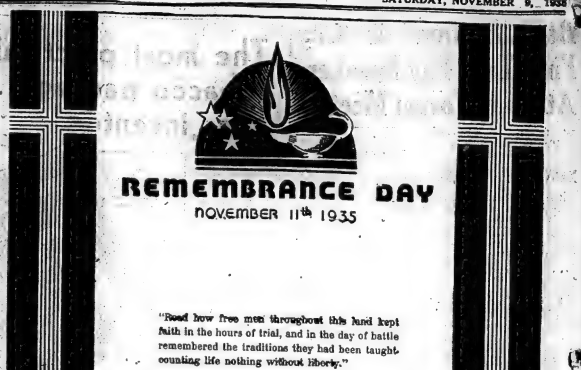
I was getting ready to do my homework, and pop said, What are you gawking up at the ceiling for? The ancient filosopher said that there was wisdom in the stars, but I doubt if the same thing is true of the ceiling, he said.

I was just thinking how time flies, I said, and pop said, That's a very true and serious fact, but if you keep on thinking it unaccompanied by any suitable action, time will out on you by but it will try in vane, in other words it will be wasted and some forever will go out having left any visible or invisible record of its passing as far as you are concerned. I trust I have your attention? he said.



Meaning was I listening, and I said, Yes sir, and he said, That's right, the ability to listen is man's crowning achievement and the groundwork of civilization. Occasionally in the source of time's endless flite there have existed abstract thinkers who have exerted grate influence on more practical minds, but the average man, and even more so the average child, is not sufficently intellectual to think usefully without translating his thawt into constructive action. In other words idle thinking leads nowhere except to more idle thinking. On the other hand every intelligent action has its beginning in a thawt, and I would be the last one to disparage thinking in the young, especially my own young. And anyway what's all this about time flying at any time of life? When I was your age every minute had 24 precious hours and time seemed to be one endless golden childhood. It didn't fly for me, pop said.

Well gosh, pop, it does for me, I said, I was just thinking how time was is only 2 months away already and I haven't had time yet to think what I'm going to ask for, I said, and pop said, Yee gods do your remote. Now get busy and keep busy, he said.

Which I did, feeling against it.

City Clerk Holmes and City Assessor Kerr have about completed the scrutiny of the names on the Local Option Petition which was presented to the city council on Oct. 25th. They are reported to have found that 950 of the names are those of properly qualified voters. Of the 280 names remaining, the majority are those of new residents who will be qualified to vote in January, but who are not voters in the sense required by the petition, which has last years' lists for its basis. The total number of names appearing on the voters' list is 3,753. Of these 314 have been discovered to be duplicates, leaving a balance of 3,439 to be considered in the petition. The petition, therefore to compel action on the part of city council requires a total of 810 names. The petition will be taken up at the next board of the city council and if found satisfactory the local option bylaw will be given its first and second reading.

TwentyThousand Cases Tomatoes Sent to England

A. Lipson, Prince Edward County produce exporter who recently sold twenty thousand cases of tomatoes of this section through an order gained as the result of direct telephone communication to the British Isles has completed the sale of over forty-five thousand cases of tomatoes to English wholesale houses this week.

War in Ethiopia has been one result of the sudden popularity of the Canadian tomatoes, it is stated by the exporter.

In past years Canadian tomatoes have been accepted on the British markets only in the absence of better. British housewives have heretofore preferred the more flavorful and the smaller Italian tomatoes which have lent themselves more readily to pickling. Since the outbreak of hostilities in Abyssinia however, tomatoes from Italy have dribbled to a mere trickle and due to the ensuring methods of Canadian importers, the vegetable from the sunny land again assumed an important place.

Half of the sale of the forty thousand cases sold by Mr. Lipson were bought from independent canneries of Prince Edward County, and the other half was packed by the Lipson canning plant.

Besides the tomatoes, Mr. Lipson has sent samples of peas, corn, and other vegetable to Australia and the world in an attempt to solicit orders. The have found their way to Hong Kong, Jamaica, Singapore, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

It is the intention of Mr. Lipson to visit England early this year to confer with his London agents with regard to future sales.

"INSIDERS" PAY DEAR FOR FAME

100 Friends of Insull Pay in $214,000 As 'Preferred'

Chicago, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The "Insiders" on Samuel Insull's second "preferred list" found he did them an expensive favor.

Nearly 100 of them, let in on a $30,000,000 Stock Syndicate in 1930, have had to pay $214,094.46 to get out. Court authority has been granted for lawsuits against others.

This was disclosed today in several pounds of Court orders and petitions concerning Insull, Son and Company, on file with the referee in bankruptcy. The concern managed the Insull Utility Investments, Inc. Syndicate.

The "preferred list" was an invitation affair. Insull, then ruler of the huge Insull Utility Empire, had held one such financial party earlier, serving out profits of 25 per cent, until as authorized he would serve slices of cake.

The guests in the second syndicate included some of Illinois most prominent politicians. two opera stars and a baker's dozen of Insull's favorite lieutenants.

how many of those who haven't paid up were being sued for their pro rata share of the Syndicate's loss—$6,571,811.

QUINTS OPPOSE FINGERPRINTING

But Experts Have Already Taken Footprints of Babies

Callander, Ont., Nov. 9.—(CP)— The Dionne Quintuplets aren't fussy about having their fingerprints taken—not for the survey. An attempt was made yesterday by Inspector H. W. Cramp of the Ontario Provincial Police to record the tiny finger prints of the famous babies, but it failed.

After making several attempts to make the prints, Inspector Cramp, assisted by Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the babies' physician, abandoned the idea for the time being. "When a Quint doesn't want her fingers spoiled with printers' ink, she means it, the police officer learned.

CHANGED LIVES FOLLOW GOSPEL

Mrs. S. R. Collins Tells of Mission Work For Women

ELOQUENT SPEAKER

Annual Thankoffering Meeting at John Street United Church

What the gospel is doing for the women, girls and children of Africa and what they are doing for the gospel was brought home to the members of missionary societies of this city by Mrs. S. R. Collins, on furlough from Canandonga, who addressed the annual Thankoffering meeting of John Street United Church W.M.S. yesterday afternoon. Representatives of all the Methodist Church Missionary Societies in the city were present to hear this eloquent speaker.

Mrs. Harry Hill, president of the auxiliary, was in the chair and after devotional exercises led by Miss Florence Carr of the C.G.I.T. and a solo by Mrs. Gregory, Mrs. Robert Hall introduced the speaker of the afternoon. Friends of other days, she and Mrs. Collins have kept in close touch with each other through the years and to Mrs. Collins' list in the missions field Mrs. Hall paid earnest tribute.

Mrs. Collins brought greetings from the junior congregation and the Young People's Association of church in Angola. Intimate glimpses of the work of the missionary at this station were revealed by the speaker who also described the activities and extent of the field. As one enters Canandonga the first thing that greets one's eyes is the church, and the church is the centre of all the work of the mission.

A native minister who is a wonderful pastor and a real father of the people, and his wife, and earnest and devoted mother to the congregation are aided by boards of deacons and deaconesses. These workers take their pledges of leadership seriously and go out among the villages as real and enthusiastic leaders. A staff of Sunday School teachers look after the teaching of Bible lessons and the junior congregation of little ones, some of whom walk miles to attend church is one of the most inspiring sights on Sunday morning.

Grouped about the church are the other buildings of mission activities, the schools for boys and girls, the hospital already boasting native graduate nurses, and over the centre of the hill the leper colony, where forty-one lepers comprise a happy group under a sincere Christian leader. Mrs. Collins dwelt on the Kindergarten, of which she has been teacher. There is the first book and below that the "nothing" class. Tots of only a few years can come here and with their educational work learn to know and love Jesus, and to give their hearts to Him. Typical of the eager little ones were Aurora and Melissa who were only one and two when they came to school and kept all through Kindergarten. Now, after a few years' teaching, they are already little truthtellers on the right road.

What the gospel means to the everyday woman was shown in the change that came over their lives as they accepted the Christianity and gave up their pagan practices. Separated from their children in the village and ostracized to a certain degree, they persevered. Their Christianity was not the passive kind. "Their hearts will not stand still" and they become inspired workers for Christ. The touching and impressive World Day of Prayer service at a tiny village was made very real to Mrs. Collins' hearers and showed, more than anything else, what the gospel means to the women of Africa.

Contrasting the Christian and the non-Christian home in the tiny village, Mrs. Collins referred to the peace of the former and the fear-filled life in the other. "The gates of the little homes stand open for the bearer of good tidings," concluded the speaker, "but how can they learn the message, and how can it be sent unless we be sent, and you are the senders!"

The deep appreciation of the audience was conveyed in a vote of thanks moved by Miss Templeton and seconded by Mrs. Buchanan. Helen Douglas and Marion Lash brook of the Mission Band received the Thank-offering and the collection included an in memoriam for Mrs. Russell from her sister, Mrs. Davis. The very inspiring meeting closed with Benediction by Rev. Robert Hall.

The trouble may be colic due to gas, acid stomach or that ailment which affects so many babies—constipation. Be ready for these difficulties.

Give the children's laxative

Give Castoria! It belongs in every nursery just as definitely as the delicate powder, the pure soap that guard a baby's petal-soft skin.

For Castoria is made especially for children. It is gentle and safe. Free from narcotics and harsh purgatives. It acts as an intestinal stimulant—not an irritant. It will not upset a baby's stomach or cause griping pain—a strong adult laxatives may do.

Ask your doctor about Castoria next time your baby has his regular health examination.

For every growing child

And remember . . . Castoria is the ideal laxative for older children too. Give it from babyhood to 11 years—for colic due to gas, diarrhea due to improper diet, sour stomach, flatulence and constipation. And as a first aid when a cold threatens.

Children take Castoria willingly. They like its pleasant taste.

Buy the family-size carton... It's more economical.

Board Room Gossip

As Supplied to Sisgar and Crawford By Financial Service

FALCONBRIDGE MORE POPULAR
The Stock of Falconbridge Nickel has gained much in popularity, not only in Toronto but in Montreal as well. In the past few days it has jumped behind chiefly on account of lack of stock among the speculators and speculators, but the stock is now advancing to a level more in line with its earning power and possibilities. On a straight basis of earnings it is cheap, but still appears undervalued notwithstanding the recent rapid rise from $4.50 to $5.35. Third quarter earnings were at an annual rate of 60 cents a share with 1936 figures above production. The rate of 80 cents a share is not out of line with above production. The outlook for the final quarter is for still higher earnings. There is no doubt that should demand reach a level much above present capacity production the Company would see its way clear to increase output.
The possibilities of the stock are enhanced by the prediction in certain quarters that the present demand for nickel throughout the world next year will reach boom proportions.

FARMERS' MORTGAGE CASE RESERVES SUGGEST POSSIBILITY OF STEP-UP IN MILL CAPACITY AT LAKE SHORE

The announcement that a mill of 500 tons daily will be erected on the Pamour Porcupine Mines and the official estimate of ore reserves of 1,500,000 tons averaging close to $10 a ton, suggest the possibility of the installation of a much larger scale eventually. On the basis of 500 tons daily, ore reserves would be sufficient for mining for a period of eight years. There is no doubt that Pamour will undertake additions to ore reserves would be followed by a step-up in tonnage.
With ore averaging $8.50 a ton, and costs estimated at say $4.50 a ton, there would be a profit of about $5 a ton or approximately $600,000 per annum. With $1,500,000 of authorized capital is to be outstanding, such profits are equal to 18 cents per share. This is equivalent to any write-offs for depreciation and depletion.
With the shares at 84 ½ appears as though the price has over-discounted potentialities and future possibilities. The valuation placed on the mine is nearly twice the gross value of the ore reserves. Specialists are apparently willing to pay for the present the sound and able management, assurance of finances and to that position the mine may eventually turn out to be a very large tonnage producer.

GYPSUM PRODUCTION IN CANADA FOR 1935 IN FIRST EIGHT MONTHS—GYPSUM, LIME AND ALABASTINE PAPERS CANADA

Of interest to security holders of Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine Canada Ltd., are the figures recently released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on the production of gypsum in Canada.
Up to the end of June the production of gypsum had increased very slightly when compared with the corresponding period of 1934, but July and August showed increases of gains, with production up 40% over July 1934 and August production showing a similar rate of gain. The increase in July as a result production for the first eight months of 1935 totalled 344,209 tons as an increase over the 233,399 tons reported for the first eight months of last year.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Nov 9 —(CP)—Toronto stocks finished the week on a fairly quiet session today as a preparation for the week-end down till noon Saturday morning.
Walkers continued added to its gains today at 30 1-4 up 7-8 and Distillers-Seagrams at 33 1-4 for a half point gain. International Nickel held unchanged today at 9 5-8. The preferred issue of Canadian Pacific showed a loss of a small fraction. Imperial Oil and International Petroleum were unchanged on a minor fraction down. Gypsum Lime and Alabastine showed interest which pressed the price up the minimum fraction. Heavy trading in C.P.R. was responsible for a gain of 1-4 to 19 1-8. Ford A. added a small fraction.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto Nov. 9 (CP)—The mining market of Toronto Exchange closed this week today, evidently reflecting disappointment that Friday's report forecasting a cut in the U.S. Federal tax on gold production has been refuted officially. Hollinger at 9.50 is 1% in senior golds with Lake Shore showing the top level of golds at 84 down one point and Dome at 33 was off ½. Hollinger dropped 20 cents to 9.50. Hughes 12 cents to 4.40 and Wright Hargreaves 10 cents to 3.35.
God's Lake Central Patricia, Macassa, Pickle Crow and Siscoe were all slightly lower. Gold Eagle was dropped 5 and Buffalo-Ankerite the same amount.
Hudson Bay ruled strong among the base metals, aided perhaps by the Falconbridge report. Noranda dropped a fraction and Falconbridge, Hollinger and Waite Amulet moved moderately. Sudbury Basin advanced a few cents. Nickel Preferred was strong at 2.37, up 4 while Casilo and Eldorado dropped 2 each.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Further advances occurred on the local potato market yesterday, being the third consecutive rise in prices. Sharp rises to levels 15c above the prices prevailing early in the week. Light receipts and improved export prospects were again factors. New quotations follow: Prince Edward Island potatoes, Mountains, 90 lbs., $1.05 to $1.10; 80 lbs., 80c to $1.00; Cobblers, 90 lbs., $1.00 to $1.05; 80 lbs., 90c to 95c; New Brunswick potatoes, Mountains, 90 lbs., 80c to $1.00; Quebec potatoes, Mountains, 90 lbs., 85c to 90c; Cobblers, 90 lbs., 90c to 95c.
Butter and cheese markets were little easier sentimental firm, while poultry was unchanged.
The butter market was generally 34½c to 34¾c per lb. for No. 1 in cartons or 1c1. lots. Receipts, 350 cases.
The cheese market was 19½c to 19¾c for No. 1 Ontarios and 19c to 19½c for No. 1 Quebecs. Receipts, 1,500 boxes.
On the egg-market graded shipments in cartons or 1c1. lots were 42-43c for extras, 41-42c for A-medium, 36-37c for A-pullets, 33-34c for B and 30c for C. Receipts, 2,182 cases.

GOLD FLOWS DOWN SAWDUST TRAIL

(By John W. Lear)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
Chicago, Nov. 9. —(AP) — The price the world paid "thrift" today for a lifetime spent in "saving" it "from the devil" was a secret he took to the grave today.
Hundreds of thousands of dollars went down the sawdust trail for the altar in the pan the famed Evangelist Billy Sunday placed in his heyday but even "Ma" Sunday said she had "no idea" of the total.
The size of his estate—which includes a home in Winona Lake, Ind., and his resort headquarters at Lake Winona, Ind., was declined to divulge "even if I knew".
In New York City in 1917 he took in $130,485 and gave it all to the Red Cross, the war nurses and the Young Men's Christian Association.
In Chicago, also in the war period he collected $65,000 and turned it over to the Pacific Garden Mission which led him from the baseball field to the pulpit years before.
In Philadelphia, he claimed 41,794 converts in eleven years and collected $83,139.
Typical of smaller cities was the 1913 campaign in South Bend, Ind., where $24,727.56 was taken in in seven weeks.

B. C. I. TEAM IS UNDEFEATED

Complete Schedule Downing The O.S.D. Team 15-0

By defeating the O.S.D. senior squad 15 to 0 in the final game of the league schedule section of the O.C.S.S.A. Belleville Collegiate completed their schedule without a single loss. The game was played yesterday afternoon at the O.S.D. grounds.

Johnston proved the spark plug of the victory attack; he obtained all three touch-downs, none of which were converted.

O.S.D. opened up strong when, on the first play after the kick off, Bonnard broke right through centre for a 68-yard run. An attempted forward was blocked however.

Johnston scored his first try early in the second quarter and before the half ended broke through for another. With the half nearly up Alexander of the O.S.D. ran the ball from midfield to B.C.I. 5-yard line. There was time for only one play and the O.S.D. team failed to get it across.

In the second half B.C.I. added 3 more, Johnston again doing the ball carrying. The B.C.I. line was a working wall and it deserves much o the credit for their back-fielders' sensational gains. Their interference along the line of scrimmage stopped many incoming tacklers time after time.

The last quarter showed some wide open ruggy. Both teams threw forward passes at random, many of which were intercepted. Neither side was no further scoring.

For the visitors Johnston stood out and Muir at quarter handled his team well. For the O.S.D. Bonnard and Alexander looked best.

The line-ups—

B.C.I.—Muir, flyingwing; Cooper, Derry, Johnston, half; Muir, quarter; Bruce, Saunders, Reynolds, rush, inside; Baker, Bradford, middle; Rennot, Kilne, outside; Hancock, Foley, Cooper, end; Reynolds, Evans, Laughlin, Ketcheson, subs.

O.S.D.—Nash, flyingwing; McIlocha, Alexander, Lavalle, half; Bonnard, quarter; Lillie, snap; Hawthorne, Graham, inside; Hoag, Malyuk, middle; White, Kosti, outside; Fisher, Ryan, Wilson, end; Hampbill, Steering, Love, McAnulty, subs.

Referee—Art. Cole.

'PEGS' FAVORITE TO WIN TITLE

Hook up With Calgary Brooks For Western Championship

Winnipeg, Nov. 9.—(CP)—For the first time in their entry into Eastern-provincial football competition, Winnipeg Rod Riders themselves favored in some quarters to bring to the west the first Dominion rugby title to be won by a team march through international and interprovincial opposition this season. Calgary Bronks have been established favorites to eliminate Regina Roughriders and Western Canada final here today.

Bronks have come through the opening phase of the championship as the Hugo Rosa trophy is better commonly known. The Thunder Bird lost the services of their husky centre, Lou Adelman when he was injured in a game against Regina Roughriders.

Greg Mikkal, slippery flying wing and Ross Rebuffo, backfield star whose injured knee caused concern, would be dressed for the game, Coach Bob Friis said. It was believed they would play slightly.

Carl Cronin who groomed Winnipegs for title-bruising two years ago was a little "bearish" in his pre-game comment.

"You must have a great club here," he observed as the Tobans went through their limberin-up exercises. "I am not looking for any surprises."

United States Military Team Wins Jump-Off

New York, Nov. 9.—(CP)—Victory in as thrilling a bit of competitive drama as has been written into the annals of the National Horse Show, a team of United States army opponents today held the international jumping trophy pot up by President Arturo Alessandri of Chile.

The American riders came from behind in the third and final chapter of the trophy competition among the nations last night to erase a three point lead the Chilean team had taken through the first two nights of soaring over difficult fences. The little Chilean horses—about the size of pinto ponies—were guilty of seven faults, while the United States timber-leapers committed but four.

A jump off was called as 12,000 fashionably dressed spectators literally held on to their seats. Each team showed three horses, jumped in close, single file. The Chileans were scored with four "hocking" faults. Following them, the Americans completed the course without an error and the trophy went to their tackroom.

The Canadian officers made their best showing of the competition. Colonel R. S. Timmis, up on Lady Jane, and Captain Churchill Man, astride Peggy McNeil, gave perfect performances but Captain Seward Sale's mount, Knockoe, clipped the top of the brick wall for four faults.

The performance was enough to lift the Canadians out of last place. Behind the Chileans came Cuba with 19 faults, then the Irish Free State with 20, Canada with 21 1-3 and Holland with 40 1-2.

The fourth team of the Canadian team, Captain H. A. Phillips, won the Olympic Equestrian Team Championship Sweepstakes Jacqueline. The seven-year-old grey mare gave two perfect performances over the obstacles.

ALBERT COLLEGE TRIMS O. S. D.

Defeat St. Mikes in Open Game by Score of 29 to 6

Scoring a touchdown in the first minute of play the Albert College gridders rolled up a 29 to 6 victory over the St. Michaels squad in the second game of a trio of Ontario senior interscholastic football hop at the Fair Grounds yesterday. The victorious team used short end runs scoss weight to down the Irish and Blue, around ends to the grind for gain.

The lighter St. Mikes squad held their own well for the first half, but could not stem the tide of powerplays used by the Albert College crew in the final stanzas. The Irish defence had the ball behind it nine times to even the count, after Fox plunged for a major score in the opening minute of play. Albert Whalen opened the second quarter by smashing off tackle for a touchdown, that O'Neill promptly converted, knotting the count. Albert Whalen added to his Albert College goal line and record through to cross the ball carrier himself to put Albert one up again. Minutes later Jones pounced through center for a touch, not converted. The ball time score stood Albert 12 St. Mikes 6.

Used Weight

Albert used their weight to successfully buck for substantial gains as the second half got under way and Jones again bundled the Irish line to score a touchdown, not converted. St. Michaels kicked off and Fox gave a splendid display of open field running to race 75 yards for a touchdown from behind the line and the last quarter opened with Albert leading 22 to 6. On a forward pass Fox moved the ball to St. Mikes' five yard line and Weir carried the ball over for a major, which Brogan promptly converted with a placement kick and the final score stood 29 to 6 for Albert.

Lead by Jones, their stellar quarterback, the Albert squad looked the better on the day's play, Fox and Rogers teamed well in the backfield as Chant, Glover, Weir and Miller all played good ball for the winners. For the vanquished St. Mikes Whalen, Peets, Griffin and Doyle all turned in good accounts of their efforts, but seemingly the Irish could not master into the spirit of the game, nothing being at stake in victory or defeat. A few minor injuries were sustained throughout the tussle, however.

The line-ups—Albert College—flying wing- Burton, halves-Fox, Burgess, McCris, quarter- Jones, snap-Clouse, insides-Weir, middles-Miller, McDonald, outsides-Glover, Chant, subs McIntosh, C. Clouse and Allen.

St. Michaels— flying wing-J. Peets, halves-J. Doyle, R. Doyle, O'Neill, quarter-nano, snap Sherlock, insides-Whalen, Doran, middles Lye, Butler outsides-Totsin, T. Peets subs- Mehoffy, Haslip, Griffin and McQuaid.

Officials—Hilton and Andrews.

HARVEY JACKSON IS AN ABSENTEE

Will Not Appear When The Leafs Open N. H. L. Season

By A. E. FULFORD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Without two players, who may have been regarded as important cogs in the mighty Smythe-Irvin machine, Toronto Maple Leafs tonight open their National Hockey League season against New York Americans in the House-that-Conn-Smythe built—the mammoth Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

For their first game of the 1935-36 schedule Leafs will lack Harvey Jackson, their star left wing, and Harold Cotton, one-time invaluable backchecker on the team Dick Irvin coaches.

Jackson won't be on the ice because of salary troubles with Conny Smyth. Cotton, bald kid of Toronto, is going to be playing but in the uniform of Americans to whom he was sold during the off-season.

Despite their loss and the fact Jack Shill, rounded on sub for Jackson, probably will be kept out with a wrist injury, Smythe has promised faithful fans a win.

Ordinarily American's don't draw a great crowd in Toronto but tonight may be an exception. There is something about the way Red Dutton has gone about rebuilding America that has convinced the fans he has something.

Mews Rallied up in Line

Irvin is expected to send Bill Hollett from the defence to Jackson's position if Shill can't play and the have Andy Blair, who has been promoted to defence, take Hollett's place beside Happy Day. Dutton will shoot the same line that suffered a 5-1 defeat in the first game of the season Thursday in Montreal.

The other game tonight is New York Rangers at Boston Bruins.

Lester Patrick had his Rangers out to practice in Toronto early today shortly after they arrived from their Winnipeg training camp. His club will without Chelbert, who shares holdout prominence with Jackson and Cook defence man Normie Smith acting like a veteran in goal, appeared set to open against degree-year the weakened New Yorkers.

FOOTBALL

New York, Nov. 9 (AP)—Thoroughly fitted six set today as Union College football options studied again.

Dominating the interest was Fordham's Rams and their unbeaten and last period conquerors of the "unbeatable" team of Notre Dame. Notre Dame faced Northwestern with victory possible for the fighting Irish.

The "if" in this case was because Fordham's 7 to 6 win over Holy Cross was conducted and plenty of good football dished up for the fans. In another year the newer squads, such as O.S.D. and Albert will naturally be stronger due to the experience gained in the past.

Miss Mary Thompson
Greenville's Queen

Down in Deep River, Conn., the football faithful were priding themselves on having the only woman grid player in the game. Miss Mary Thompson, 19-year-old daughter of Coach Ralph Thompson of Deep River high school, is the first girl ever to play football in the Connecticut valley. Miss Thompson is a regular member of the team and has been playing for two years. She is a halfback and is considered a good ball carrier.

Miss Esther Burnham, D cup River's Football Pride

Memphis took a position as football coach at the Greenville, Miss., university. Miss Ann Smith-Tax, NE., they also boast a girl football player, but Deep River's Esther Burnham still takes the cake. The 14-year-old, 119-pound lady stepped on the grid with her team, at Middlefield Air Cadets, were tied with Deep River Indians, an engineered the play which scored a touchdown and won the game. But when flashlight cameras glared, the plucky and efficient little centre burst into modest blushes at the publicity. Here is Esther surrounded by her Deep River teammates.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Yesterday saw the curtain rung down on another successful season in the Bay of Quinte senior interscholastic football circuit. For the first time in history the entire loop was composed of local intermediate teams, B.C.I., O.S.D., St. Michaels and Albert College, entering the play and completing the schedule yesterday, when the Collegiate defeated O.S.D. 15 to 0 and Albert romped home to a 29 to 6 win over their lighter St. Mikes opponents. Each squad played six games, Lester Fisher Trophy, emblematic of supremacy in the scholastic ranks, and each going through the schedule without scratching a loss. Albert dropped only two games, both to the Collegiate, while O.S.D. and St. Michaels only managed to get in the win column on one occasion, when they split their series with each other. In winning all of their games the Collegiate set-up a record that is a credit, but on the other hand it must be remembered that there are many more pupils to pick from at the B.C.I. than at the other schools. All in all a good season was conducted and plenty of good football dished up for the fans. In another year the newer squads, such as O.S.D. and Albert will naturally be stronger due to the experience gained in the past.

Coach Fole Beach of the Albert College, has instituted a brotherly new coaches in the interscholastic group are to pick an all-star team from the four teams in the senior group. Coach Frank Cunningham of O. S. D., Eddie Schreiber of St. Michael's and Dinkie of B.C.I. are asked to pick their all-star team. The team is in connection with Mr. Beach. So that no coach may get too many of his players on this mythical squad, only six players from any one team can be selected. Nominations are taken from the other three squads. Following the voting the public allotted will be totalled and the names of the all-star squad published. Incidentally there is a movement afoot to have this mythical team actually appear as one team against some worthy opposition. A splendid idea, as it gives the players something to look forward to, as a matter of fact this should be an annual affair. Incidentally Coach Eddie Schreiber is taking his 94. Mikes jaunty up to the O.S.D. for an exhibition game today.

At the request of the Lindsay intermediates O.R.F.U. executive, today's Belleville at Lindsay game has been postponed until Monday, Lindsay being due to Do-Do-Annie community and observing Armistice Day as a holiday. When the Lindsay executive asked for this switch, the locals gladly concurred in order to assist the Scraping River team in playing a swelling Monday afternoon game with a holiday attraction. Coach Dr. Kennedy is holding a workout practice this afternoon, however, the evening being rather short for work on account of daylight saving time. Lake Shore group schedule for today is Cobourg at Peterboro.

If you've heard this one, well don't read any further, but we still think it's worth repeating—Once a year the newsboys of a certain district of Montreal are taken for an outing up the Thames by a generous citizen of the neighborhood, and they can bathe to their hearts' content.

As one little boy was getting into the water a friend observed: "I say, Bill ain't you dirty!"

"Yes," replied Bill, "I missed the train last year."

Our Fulsterism consequency becomes an accident at the dance of taking us for the proverbial one-way ride recently, that he got his brand new Chevrolet badly dented. . . The result referred to lead Clancy as the Peter "vessels." Now in his high baseball language a "vessels" is a pitcher. Which goes to show that fans enjoyed the straight forward shooting match in place of the usual rough and tumble system, so often employed by the Chief.

CHAPTER 2.

A MAN AND A MAID

Janie Madden had not even suspected the situation Gregory Stewart said her. That was just before he kissed her in the shadow of a lifeboat on the Santa Nina's deck.

Immediately afterward she found herself incapable of any sensation at all, save a violent hatred of young Mr. Stewart and a fleeting desire to ask Mildred at once and bring her to a realization of the things the other passengers were saying about them both.

There had been a moon after dinner that night when Janie and young Mr. Gregory Stewart had come up on deck. A fat disc of a moon—made of lemon sherbet—slipping softly along on the lifting arm of a black and silver sea. She had been million of bright, unwinking stars tattooed on a black velvet sky. There had been starlight in Janie's eyes, laughter in her heart, and, in her blood, the faint, delicate singing she had known ever since the Santa Nina sailed from San Francisco bay into the Golden Gate.

With her hand tucked into the crook of Gregory Stewart's arm, Janie had walked rapidly around the deck. On the second lap around she had ventured a little "Good evening" to a bevy of rugs in a deck-chair by the rail. The heap of rugs contained a lady she had, during the past week, sat opposite Janie at meals in the ship's dining-salon. A wide lady, with a double chin and cascading chins gave her the effect of a cone-shaped figure. Her name, Janie knew, was Mrs. Charles Newton Cramer. She was traveling for her health. The lady's reaction to her joyous salutation had been a frosty silence. Janie, feeling a small pang of pity for anyone who could be unhealthy on such a night as this, had continued her brisk walk with young Mr. Stewart.

"So—you have no bad habits at all, eh?" Gregory Stewart said, replacing in the pocket of his smart linen coat the silver-mesh case from which he had just extracted a cigarette. He had led the girl to a chair in the shadow of a lifeboat, and now, sitting on one end of it, was regarding her through the dark.

"No bad habits," Janie answered primly. "Librarians can't afford them."

"Oh—so that's what you are when you're at home, is it—a librarian?" the man rejoined with a curious intonation in his voice. His pale, hard, handsome face seemed touched with a faint amusement.

"That's what I was when I was at home," Janie repeated, pleasantly. "Just at the moment, however, I'm a beautiful young woman, setting forth to see the world through the Panama Canal—and scared to death for fear she'll wake up any moment to find it's all a dream!"

Gregory Stewart's pale eyes swept past Gregory to the lines of whispering foam that laced the star-bound surface of the sea. To the gay, warm lights of the Santa Nina's lounge, farther down the deck. To the big pearl-encrusted moon.... She drew a deep, unsteady breath and her blue eyes deepened and glowed.

"You don't know how fantastic—how almost unbelievable it is to me," she said softly. "I keep pinching myself.... Less than a week ago I was back there in San Francisco, handing out musty library books to dirty little Slovak children and listening to Ada Pratt tell about her mother's operation—"

"Ada, I take it, also being a librarian?" her companion prompted.

"Ada being my assistant in the library. In between times she writes ads for the local press. I've been with exchange freizes cooler for Permanente Wave or what-have-you!' It's an exciting life."

Stewart laughed. His bold, intent eyes on the girl's face, sitting in the chair. She was a small-boned, compact little girl, looking, the man mused, scarcely old enough for the demurely, sophisticated dress of pale blue lace that clung to her slender form. She had a delicately oval face and a mouth the color of pink coral—full and sweet and like a child's. Her black hair curled close to her small head like the satin-smooth petals of a hyacinth. The little fronds of curls on her brow it ruffled tantalizingly now in the breeze.

"You're having an awfully good time on this cruise, aren't you?" he asked gently. "Ever been through the Panama Canal before?"

"I've never been anywhere before," Janie said matter-of-factly. "Except in the Potrero District of San Francisco. And when I think how near I came to turning down Mark after all this—"

"Mark?"

"My brother. I thought I'd told you." She hesitated, then with a little rush of confidence: "You see, Mark's the one person in the world I'm crazy about. He's—he's grand. He raised me after my mother died—and he stood by me after our mother died—" Her voice was almost a whisper. "I was a funny kid ...." She paused. "And then he married Mildred. You see, it was Mildred—my sister-in-law—who really wanted to take this trip through the Canal. She had her heart set on it...." The little wind fell softly against Janie's dark hair, lifting it from her cheek. "Mark just didn't want her to" Janie shook her head a little. "It was his idea that I come along—with Mildred to chaperon me!"

"To chaperone you!" Stewart's tone was incredulous, mocking.

Janie giggled. "I thought it rather a quaint idea myself at the time," she said demurely. "In the parlance circles I'm supposed to be a marriageable young woman. At any rate, it was my chance of a lifetime to see trackless oceans and yellow moons and strange ports, so here I am. We really ought to have a motto, Mark's given Mildred letters to people in New York—and there's one to some man in Havana—"

"I see." The man's tone held a faintly hard note. "Mildred is something," he said slowly. "This sister-in-law of yours—she's the incredibly beautiful lady with the lovely yellow hair and the sapphires, isn't she? The one who sits at the Captain's right at table? I've noticed her, of course."

"Certainly you've noticed her," Janie said teasingly. She smiled confidently up into his face, unconscious of the expression in his eyes. "People always look at Mildred—that's just the trouble. She's so good—awful lovely." Janie broke off, sitting erect in her deck-chair with a abrupt movement. "Speaking of scarks," she said, in delighted surprise, "take a look up the deck, Mr. Stewart! Isn't that Mildred now!" She got to her feet and the man stood up beside her.

Directly ahead of them, near the rail of the deck above, the slim, erect figure of a woman stood outlined against the moon. Allure was in every line of her. In the gold of her hair, in the pallored bronze of her great brown eyes, in the soft curve of her mouth. In the veritable aura of mystery, helplessness and feminine appeal which, mingling like an essence about her. The silver sheath of her gown caught the light and her smile was both bright and sweet. Close by her side stood the tall, dark figure of a man. As they watched, he bent above her, speaking rapidly in a liquid, caressing travel, his head moving in the fluid gestures of the Latin.

"Joy rules the day and Love the night!" Gregory Stewart said with his low whistle. His glance, meeting Janie's, held the hint of a knowledgeable smile. "By Jove! She is a beauty—you're right," he said. "But what she can see in that greaser who travels around with a more than anybody on this ship can understand—"

"Anybody—but, I don't think I understand!" Janie's blue eyes sought his face in a wide, bewildered stare. Then they blazed at him suddenly. "I don't think it quite like that, Mr. Stewart," she said. "Mr. Ferreras is a Cuban—but he's a gentleman. Mildred only met him since we came on board. They play cards together—"

"Exactly." The flash of Gregory Stewart's tooth-set teeth showed in a frankly unashamed smile. "Oh, come now, Miss Madden," he raised his cigarette with insolent coolness to his eyes no longer meeting her own), "did the pill as you will, my dear, you must admit to the fact that your lovely—ah—chaperone has managed to get herself most thoroughly talked about on this boat. Why, she's the scandal of the voyage. Has been, ever since we sailed. O, come now, 'pon up—we understand each other. It isn't possible that you didn't know it, you know!"

Janie turned slowly away from him—walked slowly to the rail. For a moment the man hesitated, then followed and stood by her side. Something fluttered in the girl's throat like a cry. Her voice, very small and quiet, unreal, seemed to come from a long way off....

"I'm sorry," she said softly, "but you must explain to me. I didn't know it at all...."

CHAPTER 3.

AND A KISS

She had not, Janie decided dully, wanted to take this trip through the Canal. Most particularly, she had not wanted to take it with Mildred. Mildred, she had argued with her husband, would need to be chaperoned; practiced, flattered, cajoled. Mildred would want to be amused. "And I," Janie had told Mark, "will want to be trotting off to art exhibits and Navajo rug-hobbling with a smelly Panamanian beggar; and I'll bore you with slides. You know how she is about things like that—"

Mark had laughed and given Janie his grave, awkward smile. "But you will go along with her, won't you kid? And keep an eye on her for me? Mildred's not been anywhere since we've been married. I want her to have this trip.... You know how it is, Janie, she's such a child. Likely to get into any sort of a jam, take up with any sort of person on board ship. You're such a sane little feller, a person can sort of depend on you to—er—sort of keep your feet on the floor."

Janie had indeed known how it was. In the end, however, she had consented to go. And oddly enough, Mildred had not needed to be amused at all.

Almost from the first she had displayed an amazing tendency to amuse herself—something she had never troubled to do at home. During the first days at sea there had been the Furzer, a sardonically smiling young man (with a veiled, secretive glance. Then there had been, in turn, two Princeton undergraduates—absurd, flattering, rich. And, in the interval following there had been the ship's Captain; two young medical students and an oldish Professor from a eastern University. All eager and willing to pay flattering homage to young Mrs. Mark Madden's rather amazing beauty. People, Janie had told herself happily during those first days at sea, were always aware of Mildred's capriciously striking clothes. The clever lines of her deck frocks, the subtle lines of her evening gowns. Even the way she wore her milky pearls knotted about her white throat. It wasn't going to be so bad, after all....

Without question they had been placed at the Captain's table in the dining-salon; Mildred at the Captain's right, Janie farther down the table beside this tall, deep-chested young man. She had resented, somehow, that life in a public library had not equipped her for fair dealing with anything so diverting, so exciting, so absolutely self-sufficient as young Mr. Gregory Stewart. She had liked him a lot. His friendly bonhommie, his conscious good looks. The thin line of mustache on his upper lip, the flash of his disarming smile. Gregory Stewart had liked her too....

"There's always one girl on every voyage," he had told her with deliberate intent, "who makes the others wish they had stayed home to knit."

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Tarzan had no intention of harming the sentry. His quarrel was not with the innocent black dupes of the white men, but if he could undermine the morale of the blacks, the schemes of their masters would be as effectually thwarted as though he had destroyed them.

For an hour he marched his victim ahead of him in silence, which he knew would have its effect upon the nerves of the black man. Finally, he halted him, stripped his remaining clothing from him and bound his wrists and ankles together loosely.

Then appropriating his cartridge belt, and other belongings, Tarzan left him, knowing that he would soon free himself from his bonds; yet be convinced, for the rest of his life, that he was even so fortunate to have had narrowly avoided a terrible fate.

Satisfied with his night's work, Tarzan returned to the tree to sleep until morning, when he again took up the search for La, seeking trace of her up the valley beyond the barrier cliff of Opar; though in reality she had gone in precisely the opposite direction, down the valley.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Jimmie Hodges and His Dancing Girls Heard This Week—Music and Fun

Last night a tremendous crowd packed the Capitol Theatre to witness the first showing of Jimmie Hodges and his Dancing Girls. The show itself is a fast-moving unit from start to finish, with plenty of laughs, dances, jokes and girls. Jimmie provides you with a laugh a second and his antics on the stage provoke mirth from the most taciturn. The chorus moves in ever-changing dance routine along with the many other acts presented. Unanimous verdict of patrons was that Jimmie has brought to Belleville one of the entertainment sensations here for some time.

Feature Picture

What is heralded as another doubling newspaper picture is spread with romance and considerable comedy, the First National production, "The Payoff," has been hooked as the feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre beginning next Monday.

The story of George Bricker, for many years a newspaper writer, centres around Joe Morley, an hotel sports reporter, whom the gambling fraternity cast a spell over to their intimidate.

The sports writer is madly in love with his wife, a beautiful chorine, in which he believes implicitly. He is not only blind to her faults but also to the love of one of his fellow newspaper women.

While Joe is on a trip he is double-crossed by his wife, who plays into the hands of the "big shot" gambler, giving him so many I.O.U.'s that the sports writer is forced to let down his column to protect her. He is fired and is practically down and out, when a hockey he had befriended, tips him off to a race scandal.

He tells his former editor, and on the day of the big race, he scoops the town.

James Dunn plays the part of the sports writer, with Claire Dodd in the role of his wife and Patricia Ellis, the other woman.

Others include Alan Dinehart as the King of Gamblers, Joseph Crehan as the managing editor of Jimmy Dunn's paper, and Frankie Darro as the jockey.

This picture is filled with stirring events, including "shots" of practically every form of the major sports, including a prize ring fight, horse racing, football, baseball, etc.

"Millionaire" Murphy and "Mushy" Callahan, two famous professional ring fighters, take part in the fight scenes in the picture.

Robert Florey directed the production from the screen play by George Bricker and Joel Sayre.

AT THE BELLE

"The Big Broadcast of 1936" The Brightest Stars of the Screen, Stage and Radio are Featured

Lavishly mounted, madcap comedy studded with the outstanding stars recruited from every division of the amusement world, "The Big Broadcast of 1936" which opens at the Belle today, can be classed as entertainment of the highest order in the comedy and musical fields.

Not a dull moment is to be found in this sparkling, breezy, gala production which fairly exudes the brightest talent from radio, stage and screen.

For pure fun and light comedy no better trio of comedians could be teamed together than Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen and Lyda Roberti. Oakie's infectious enthusiasm in his role alone is enough to guarantee the uproarious hilarity. Coupled with the high flinks of Roberti and Burns and Allen, the perfect combination is achieved.

Add to these funmakers such sterling performers as Ray Noble and his band, and you have an unbeatable assortment of entertainers.

"Big Broadcast" depicts the uproarious experiences of two radio entertainers who have the good fortune to meet a wealthy young countess when their radio station is facing bankruptcy. Oakie is his customary wise-cracking capering self in a role cut to his measure. He and his partner, Burns Wadsworth decide to enter an international radio contest to save their broadcasting studio from financial failure. They consider using the Radio Eye, a television mechanism invented by George Burns and Gracie Allen. At this point Lyda Roberti as a sentimental, wealthy countess and her secretary, Wendy Barrie, enter their lives and while them off on her yacht to her estate in Cuba, and holds them there as her guest prisoners until she makes up her mind which one of the two boys she wants for a husband.

In a desperate break for freedom Oakie, in broadcasting act, and intentionally competes in the radio contest which ensues as for a whirlwind hilarious finish.

Miss Roberti provide many of the laughs, aby assisted by Burns and Allen. The specialty numbers, a highlight in the film, are spaced throughout the production forming an important background to the story.

Varied Sheet Treats

"Did you Know That" a clever screen oddity, Walt Disney's latest Silly Symphony in color "Water Babies" and the Belle Latest World News, including intimate scenes of the "quake" in the capital city of Montana, Helena, Canada Hails New Governor General and other events. "The Big Broadcast" starts daily at 3.00; 7.40; and 9.40. Performances start daily at 2.30; 7.18 and 9.18.

ELEVEN O'CLOCK FINDS WORLD BOWED, SILENT

Heart of Empire Silent in Memory of Million Dead

RIOTS IN PARIS

Lord Tweedsmuir Attends Service at Cenotaph in Ottawa

By the Canadian Press

In silent recollection, the nations today observed the 17th anniversary of the Great War's 11th-hour ending.

The Canadian cabinet, meeting in camera to discuss a reported agreement between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt on Canadian-American trade, adjourned before 11 o'clock to take part in the Armistice Day ceremonies before the main parliament buildings.

In London, the heart of the empire fell silent on the booming of a gun from the Horse Guards parade. The King observed the silence in Buckingham Palace for the weather was unsettled. Throughout Britain and the Empire similar ceremonies honored the memory of more than 1,000,000 dead.

At Washington

At Washington President Roosevelt spoke of friendly relations with American nations and laid a wreath on the tomb of the United States Unknown Soldier.

Riots marked the French anniversary as the Croix de Feu Veterans organization clashed with Left-wing groups near the tomb of the Unknown Soldier under the Arc de Triomphe. President Albert Lebrun had previously laid a wreath for armed forces of the republic.

While Paris' legions paraded deep into Ethiopia, Premier Mussolini delivered a message to Italians throughout the world. Germany observed Armistice Day Nov. 4th, anniversary of peace with Austria.

Keynote Heard Honored

The Italian Consul at Alexandria took part with other foreign representatives in honouring Egyptian war dead at the British Memorial Cemetery. Detachments from the British Mediterranean fleet formed a guard of honour.

Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's new Governor-General, attended the service at the temporary cenotaph at the steps leading up to the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa.

Premier Macdonald war veteran Premier of Nova Scotia, delegated to present world affairs on contrast to ideals for which men fought and died in the Great War when talking to an Armistice Day Service Club luncheon in Saint John, N.B.

A cold, gray sky hung over Toronto and a steadily rising wind, it reminded many o. the veterans who attended the cenotaph service in front of Toronto city's hall of many a down cry Flanders trenches.

Spartan Mother Does Heavy Day's Work Previous to Birth of Her 16th Child

Prepared Breakfast For 26 People And Spent Day in Store

Woodriver, Ill., Nov. 11 — Proudly, Mrs. Cleveland Pate tells how she went through her usual routine of work from 3.30 a.m. to 7.00 p.m. before giving birth to her 16th child Friday morning.

The spartan mother related she arose before the dawn and served breakfast for her husband, a steamfitter's helper, and 25 boarders. Then she prepared and boxed 190 lunches and delivered them to a high school and a dozen factory near her home.

In the afternoon she helped a son at his soft drink parlor, returned home and with a daughter prepared dinner for her husband and the boarders.

She retired at 7.00 p.m. and 5½ hours later gave birth to a 10½ pound boy.

The birth revived a friendly rivalry with nearby neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Swearingen, who became the parents of a 10½ pound several months ago.

When the Pates' 15th was born almost two years ago, they named him "Pixie", intending the child to be their last. Of their children, 7 are still living. Mrs. Pate is 41 years old, her husband 43.

55 Below Zero Outside Gondola Exists at Great Height

Rapid City, S. D., Nov. 11 (AP)—After reaching an unofficial world altitude conquered by the greatest aerial ship ever built, slightly over 74 miles, the stratosphere fliers of the balloon "Explorer II" were forced at 1.56 p.m. (C.S.T.) today, to "We're starting down now."

Rapid City, S.D., Nov. 11—(CP)—Capt. Albert W. Stevens reported the stratosphere balloon "Explorer II" reached 72,395 feet, setting a new unofficial world altitude record surpassing the mark set in 1862 by three Russian fliers.

Falling pressure on the balloon's mantes indicated to the ground crew that "Explorer II" was still climbing.

The Russians, killed in descent, were credited with climbing to 72,178 feet. The dizzy height reported by Capt. Stevens was 12,294 feet beyond the previous United States expedition, also aloft, which reached 62,000 feet. Also above the 72,395 feet mark recorded in 1933 by Lieut. Commander T. G. W. Settle and Major Chester Fordney.

To attain 74,000 feet was the announced goal of Capt. Stevens and Capt. Orvil Anderson, when they gave the command "up ship" which sent their big balloon into the sky at 8a.m. c.s.t. today.

Ten Degrees Below Zero

"Explorer II" was somewhere near Martin, South Dakota, and had travelled about 180 miles southeast from the natural bowl here which was its base.

It was 55 degrees below zero (centigrade) outside the sealed metal gondola, Capt. Stevens reported by wireless, and the thin-air chill penetrated the light shell. Inside the temperature was "minus 7 centigrade."

Below the fliers the sky was an expanse of white grading into bright blue and Stevens and Anderson could see a jet black mysterious sea of darkness.

One of the planes followed "Explorer II"—trailing the big balloon with the parachute-borne crew, where the air could be breathed—and Capt. Hawthorne Gray, son of Toronto's Gray, son of Toronto's Gray, son of Toronto's Butterflies, evidently lulled into the belief that spring is returning owing to the sustained period of warm weather, are seen more evident in the district. A large Monarch specimen was sighted on Cannifton Road Sunday by a local motorist, while a second, barred moth was observed on a residential street in the north section.

ARMISTICE SERVICE AT HOLLOWAY STREET

At Holloway Street United Church yesterday special music and services for Remembrance were held. After the two minutes silence at eleven o'clock, Mr. Jack Green, cornetist, sounded the Last Post and later played Handel's Largo. Mr. Clare Patterson sang "In Flanders Fields" and the choir sang "Give Peace, O Lord".

Rev. R. E. Newman spoke on the topic "Remembrance" and in his talk referred to the most interesting feature of the Sunday service the laid of meeting a number of little Serbian refugees, who were encamped under the protection of the Private forces. Although none of them spoke English and he did not know the Serbian language they conversed in the universal language of childhood and brotherhood. One little fellow could count up to ten in nine different languages and from his performance learned the figures in English.

MRS. J. V. ROSS IS GIVEN HONOR

Her Son, One of First of Belleville Boys to be Killed in Action

Mrs. J. V. Ross, 32 Geddes St., who has a son in the Great War, was given the honor of placing the Ontario Government wreath on the cenotaph at the ceremony at Memorial Park this morning. Leo Ross, who was well known in this city, was one of the first to pay the supreme sacrifice, he having been killed in Battle of Ypres on April 26th, 1915.

The late Leo Ross enlisted on the first day of war, fell in love with and wounded in Canada, joining up with the 38th Battery, moving to Kingcartier for training. His battery was broken up in England and he went to France with the First Battery, Second Brigade. After his death he was buried in Poperinghe cemetery in Belgium. At the time of his death he was but 19 years of age. The young man attended Queen Michael's Academy and Belleville High School and after his enlistment was employed with the Canadian Railway as a ticket man. Mr. James V. Ross, his father, also enlisted in the 38th Battalion and went to France with the R.C.H.A. and was wounded at the battle of Ypres in 1916 and later returned home in 1918. The father, while in France, obtained leave and visited his son's grave, but had to go on at once as the German bombardment was within 1,000 yards of the grave.

POLICE COURT

In observance of Armistice Day, no session of police court was held in Belleville today, the regular weekly court being held on Saturday morning at which time court will be held on the second Monday police court rooms before Magistrate J. C. Ellis, K.C.

On Saturday afternoon, however, a short session of police court was held when Geoffrey Bateman, Albert Edward County, faced a charge of incommodating people on the pavement. Denike was not asked to plead, his case being charged until tomorrow. The accused man is held in jail today.

Two Interlakes, who were apprehended on Friday night, also appeared before the police court on Saturday and were found guilty of intoxication. The conventional fine and costs were imposed. Neither men having the necessary amount to meet the fine, a ten day sentence was imposed in default. A Bancroft motorist also appeared in court under the H.T.A., his case being remanded until Tuesday also.

ATTORNEY GEN'T ORDERS ALL SLOT MACHINES CLOSED

O.P.P. Instructed to Act in District Without Municipal Police

Although the local police department has not been officially notified as yet, instructions have been issued from the Attorney General's Department of the Ontario Government to close out all slot machines now in operation in this province. Special orders were received along these lines by Inspector G. Gardiner, of District No. 8 Ontario Provincial Police, today, to the effect that all slot machines being operated within the jurisdiction of his district are to be closed out immediately.

In municipalities where there are recognized police organizations, however, the Provincial Police are not to assist and offer any co-operation necessary, as it is not customary for the O.P.P. to interfere with the administration of justice where these is an organization of recognized police department. The orders to close out "the slot machine racket" were received by Chief of Police General Williams, Chief Commissioner of the Provincial Police, who in turn received his instructions from Attorney General Roebuck over the week end. The orders call for closing out the slot machines operating in the municipalities that do not force the government for some time, it was learned today.

When questioned relative to this measure at noon, however, Chief Mick Hammond of the local police department he had not been informed of any such action as yet, but had heard outside rumors to that effect some time ago. In the outlying districts where there are no municipal police departments the Provincial Police of District No. 8 will immediately put into effect the orders issued from headquarters and it comes under their jurisdiction, Inspector Gardiner announced this afternoon. In the centres where recognized police departments are operating, the O.P.P. and these municipal authorities will co-operate on the order, it is believed.

KINGSFORD-SMITH IS STILL MISSING

May Have Glided to Uninhabited Island in Bengal Sea

Singapore, Straits Settlements, Nov. 11 (AP) — Another flight of Royal Air Force bombers roared into the air today to join search for the newest vigor the search for Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, missing 10 days on a projected England-Australia flight.

The pilots carried instructions to skim low over every island and the whole coast line of Malaya, from the Malay Peninsula as well as a wide stretch of the Bay of Bengal between Rangoon, South Burma and Victoria Point.

C. James Melrose, who last saw the famous Australian Sir Kingsford-Smith and his co-pilot, Tom Pethybridge, were flying over the Bay of Bengal when they left Rangoon to see the spot where he saw the pilots making a landing necessary.

Melrose expressed belief that Kingsford-Smith might have glided to an uninhabited island and made a landing in moonlight.

Planes circled slowly overhead, while paddling poppies about the cenotaph.

Government and civic officials, police officers, soldiers and sailors were out nurses and former members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps participated in the parade to the Ontario County War Memorial at Whitby.

At Galt thousands gathered at the Remembrance Day ceremony to honour the war dead. In front of the cenotaph were the wreaths while crosses and poppies fluttered in the cold wind. Rev. Smart delivered his address urging youth to unite that there would be no more wars.

Ashes Collected

Wreaths were laid on the Altar of Remembrance by representatives of many organizations and individuals at the service in Brantford. Ashes of the "Last Post and of Remembrance" were burned and sounded to accompany the Brantford veterans who make the pilgrimage to Vimy next year.

Despite heavy rain, thousands of citizens gathered at Immemorial Square at Galt, to place wreaths on the cenotaph.

Seldom in all the seventeen years since the guns of Flanders were silenced has London, Ontario, turned out in such numbers in solemn remembrance. At the cenotaph in Victoria Park close to 6,000 persons stood with bowed heads as the final signal gun boomed out the 11 o'clock silence.

More veterans than had ever before assembled for Remembrance Day services 1,000 of the line paraded in colored bevels that marked the divisions in which they had served overseas, were on parade.

Tribute to memory of those killed or paid at Kingston when the Royal Military College cadets and the brigade of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery paraded to T.O.D.E. Cross of Sacrifice in the cemetery where service was held.

Service was held by the R.C.H.A. at their Memorial in the City Park. The cadets of the Royal Military College held service at Memorial Arch at the College.

THREE TUGS WORK TO RESCUE STEAMSHIP

Amherstburg, Ont., Nov. 11 (CP)—Three tugs were pressed into service today in an effort to release the City of Cleveland, 472-foot Canadian passenger steamship, aground in the mind of the Livingstone Channel coffer dam, opposite the Village of Gordon, on the Detroit River. With the lifting of the fog today the tugs went to the assistance of the Bailey side-wheeler, but for the first few hours made little progress in refloating her. Two lines were attached to the bow of the vessel with the hope of getting her nose into the current.

SOLEMN REQUIEM CHANTED FOR DEAD

Right Reverend J. F. Nicholson, M.C., former Military Chaplain to the 8th Brigade C.E.F., assisted by Rev. C. E. Baker as Deacon and Rev. J. J. Macmillan as sub-deacon. The Gregorian Mass of Requiem was ably rendered by the massed choir of St. Church under the direction of Mrs. Jas. Grant, while a lovely solo, "Ave Maria" rendered on the Pipe Organ. The beautiful hymn "Old Jesu" (Abide With Me) Jesus Give Them Rest), was effectively sung at the Offertory by a trio composed of Mrs. Trudeau, Mrs. James Grant and Miss Dorothy Grant.

Sermon By Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson

An eloquent sermon was preached by the pastor, Monsignor Nicholson who stated that the world awarded to the dead the honor they had been obliged in his service. "The world honors the dead for the selection of the recipients of its favors. Today we paid honor to heroes, unselfish, devoted to high noblest ideals of patriotism and worthy of their Christian heritage. Of the Christian. The desire to honour them is the spring in the fabric of our being, implanted there by the hand of the Creator. We thrill to the magic of the word, heritage, cherish as a precious heritage the memory of those who gave their all that ideal even into the jaws of death. God has breathed into man the consciousness of immortality. We are unquenchable that shall live forever. Because it is true of Canada, may gain again his life by losing it."

The speaker stated that the roll of the drums and the notes of the bugle inspired a response to the greatness, memory of comradeship intensified under the shadow of death. Like a Rosary strung on the chains of time. Armistice celebrations formed one link, another the years but fewer grew the hands that held the beads. The Dominion of Canada, I bid you welcome to the Sacred Precincts of God dedicated to the warrior Saint, the Christian pilot of the Heavenly Host, St. Michael the Archangel," he said. They had assisted at the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass—the perpetual memorial of the Supreme sacrifice of Calvary. Antithesis Requiem had accumulated many a wreath of the past into eternity, its supplant the Rosary of Remembrance and Richard the Lion Hearted. Its digs the Canadian Rose in the Flanders Lace. Its pleading cry poured forth over many a champion of Christendom, England, Scotland, the Flower. This morning it was offered for the souls of those who have enlisted forever in the service of their country.

Silent Heroes

"This moment we look back through the arches of the years and sigh for the touch of a vanished hand and sigh for a voice that is still. Time cannot dim the glory of the silent hivouac of the dead who keep awaiting the eternal Reveille.

On the Feast of All Souls, the peasants of France place a lighted candle on the cottage window or a mute token to their departed that they still pray for them. That light burns today in hearts across the broad countryside of this Dominion.

Despite heavy rain, thousands of citizens gathered at Immemorial Square at Galt, to place wreaths on the cenotaph.

Seldom in all the seventeen years since the guns of Flanders were silenced has London, Ontario, turned out in such numbers in solemn remembrance. At the cenotaph in Victoria Park close to 6,000 persons stood with bowed heads as the final signal gun boomed out the 11 o'clock silence.

More veterans than had ever before assembled for Remembrance Day services 1,000 of the line paraded in colored bevels that marked the divisions in which they had served overseas, were on parade.

Tribute to memory of those killed or paid at Kingston when the Royal Military College cadets and the brigade of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery paraded to T.O.D.E. Cross of Sacrifice in the cemetery where service was held.

Rome, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini reviewed his armed Fascist Legions today in honour of the 66th birthday anniversary of King Victor Emmanuel and proclaimed the readiness of those forces to defend Italy's rights "anywhere".

In response to the cheers, he bowed which appeared before his balcony in Venice Palace and, mounting a horse, reviewed the massed ranks of the Fascist Militia.

Air and sea forces marched along Victor Emmanuel Avenue in columns of many bands, Il Duce appeared and addressed them.

"In only one month we have settled two accounts (apparently referring to Italy's Italian victories in Abyssinia and Nakalo on the Northern Kenya frontier). The remainder we will settle later."

Upon the silent assemblage the benediction delivered by the Rev. M. J. Walker reached a new and fuller meaning as the words were intoned: "Rest those who have gone before and let us strive ever to keep their memories green," he urged.

CAR SKIDS INTO ROAD GUARD RAIL

Eight Posts Broken And Car Comes to Rest on Top Strand

Three motorists narrowly escaped injury when their automobile in which they were riding skidded into the guard-rail on the Trenton side of the bridge road, and after breaking off eight of the supporting posts, came to rest suspended in mid-air and resting on the top strand of the rail, early Saturday afternoon. The occupants of the car, John McEachren, driver; Miss Jean MacFarlane and Phyllis Mc-Eachren, all of Belleville, escaped unhurt.

According to Mr. MacFarlane's statement to the police, he was proceeding southward at a moderate rate of speed when, upon attaining another motor car, sounded his horn and slightly accelerated his speed to pass the vehicle in front. As he pulled out to pass the motor car in front, the latter car swerved slightly and then passed into the guard rail, breaking off eight posts before the front wheels of the automobile mounted the fence and came to rest on the top strand. Wet slippery pavements are believed to have caused the accident, as eye witnesses assured Constables Arnold and Hamm, who investigated, that excessive speed in no way was responsible for the accident. No charges were deemed necessary.

Later the damaged vehicle, which was a 1935 Chrysler, was taken to the garage of Mr. Ross Hamilton where the damage to his car, which included the fenders, frame, damaged radiator and bent axle, Mr. MacFarlane immediately deemed it advisable to trade the damaged motor car for a new Chrysler. The deal was made and Mr. MacFarlane and his party proceeded to Toronto to pick out a new model at the Provincial Motor Show, now in progress. Incidentally the Hallerman party are all well known mining prospectors, who are holidaying in Southern Ontario.

QUINTS TO STAR IN FEATURE FILM WITH DR. DAFOE

"The Country Doctor" Will Be The Name of Film

TERMS WITHHELD

Glaring Klieg Lights Will Not be Used in Production

Toronto, Nov. 11 (CP)—The Dionne quintuplets were called today to become featured movie stars in a full-length film at the tender age of 17 months.

Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Labor-Welfare and special guardian to the five sisters, announced last night that he had approved a contract between Twentieth Century-Fox and the guardians of the quintuplets for their participation in a photoplay to be titled, "The Country Doctor."

The film, it was announced, will be based to some extent on the life of Dr. A. D. Dafoe, the little grey-haired doctor who attended the quintuplets at birth and saw them safely through their most critical months. But whether Dr. Dafoe would act in the picture was not known, although unofficial information was that his association with the production would be confined to supervision of any scenes in which he himself appeared.

Terms Not Disclosed

Mr. Croll did not disclose the terms of the contract, nor would he indicate the extent to which quintuplets would receive in their first full-length picture. They already have appeared in two "short subjects."

He said, however, that the terms of the contract were "as attractive that, in the interests of the children, the guardians felt they could not pass up any substantial addition to the quintuplets' fund."

Chicago, Ont., Nov. 11 (CP) — Glaring Klieg lights which inflame the eyes and affect the skin, although regularly used in film production, will not be employed when the Dionne quintuplets are acting in their first full-length feature picture, Dr. A. D. Dafoe, their physician, stated here today.

Soft floodlights which have no harmful effect on the sight or complexion, will provide the necessary artificial light.

"I've had those things on me," Dr. Dafoe declared, referring to the Klieg lights. "They even burn the back of your neck. No, there'll be none of those around. They'll have only floodlights like they had for the short pictures."

When babies are required in pictures at regular film studios they are allowed to be photographed under Klieg lights for only about 30 seconds daily. But the quintuplets won't even be exposed to their glare that long.

A FEMININE VOICE CRIES "HEAR YE!"

"Hear ye, hear ye!" Dressed in the garb of her profession, Mrs. Mary A. Blaker rings loud with her bell to announce to the people of Chertsey, England, that Ella McLarty the King has dissolved parliament and that the general election is approaching. She is England's only town crier, and her job is to read and tells furnish an unusual sight in these days of Chlaparelli and Lelong.

Dr. Dafoe Happy

Dr. Dafoe, apparently quite happy about the new adventure for his little wards, said he had not yet seen either the scenario of the photoplay which his life inspired, nor has he seen the contract which signs up the sisters.

"I don't know anything about the financial side of it," said Dr. Dafoe. "I haven't been advised," he replied when asked if he was appearing in the picture.

Word was received that all the accoutrements of a movie lot soon would be moved up to Callander. Darryl Zanuck, Vice-President in charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox is expected here within two weeks at the head of a group of technicians and workmen who will photograph Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne.

Henry King will direct the picture, the work of Sonya Levien and Charles Blaker.

Star's Tw Weeks

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 11 (AP)—Darryl Zanuck, vice-president charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox confirmed last night the signing of a contract by Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, for the motion picture debut of the Dionne quintuplets.

Zanuck said the quintuplets will play important parts in a picture to be titled, "The Country Doctor," the work of Sonya Levien and Charles Blake. Henry King will direct the film.

Zanuck said he personally would head a group of technicians and cameramen named to leave for Callander within two weeks to photograph the famous sisters.

Virtually every studio in Hollywood had extended bids for the screen services of the quintuplets. Rivalry for the baby stars was so keen, he that exhibited when Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink was "discovered".

Zanuck said money earned by the contract would be added to the quintuplets' Trust Fund, but stated he preferred Mr. Croll to disclose the salary the sisters would receive, if any announcement is made.

DROPPED DEAD ON STREET

He was in his 45th year and is survived by a widow and two children and three sisters, Mrs. Edward Hunter and Mrs. Fred Weddell, Langford, and Mrs. W. W. Harvey, Toronto.

The secretary's report, a resume of the work of the branch, and the financial statement, were read by Miss Anna Hurley, showing a most successful year.

Activities Reported

A report of the Belleville Red Cross Department was submitted by Mrs. Stuart Lasier. The activities show a very appreciable increase over those of the previous year. The same is true of the outstanding sewing circles composed of the various organizations in the city and again last year. The Red Cross groups, the Argyll Chapter of the I.O.D.E., the Women of the Moose, The Women's Liberal Association, the Conservative Executive Clubs, the Lasiere School of John Street United Church and the Bridge Club all had their share in the making of garments and knitted goods for the needy. Special mention should be made of the Lasiere Group and the Association of the Young Ladies' Guild of John Street Church to help those willing to help themselves.

The distribution of these articles some 3,000 in number have been made through the following charitable institutions, the Civic Relief Commissioner, the V.O.N., the Belleville General Hospital, clergy and responsible individuals. Considerable worn clothing and bedding as well as some new have been given away by the Red Cross Society to the needy families. The public will be interested to know, that 28 complete layettes have been delivered by the Society and Nursing Association cases.

The convener of the work department took this opportunity of thanking all who have supported the work of the Society and especially her fellow officers, who have shown a splendid spirit of co-operation in the society.

Ninety Juniors Enrolled

In the report of the Junior Red Cross by Miss Hardinge, school nurse, the Senior Society was warmly thanked for the help and encouragement given the Juniors. Ninety Juniors were enrolled in the Home Hygiene Classes. The work of the Junior Red Cross Society, health, service in the community and international friendship have been fostered by the local groups, and their exchange of cards with juniors in other countries has especially emphasized the last point. Throughout the year activities planned by some groups in the planting of bulbs in the fall of 1934 and early folks they know, making a scrapbook for a sick child, copying paragraphs of history stories for a child, who is not able to attend school but who wishes to continue her studies.

Twenty-six registered for the Red Cross Nutrition Classes conducted by Mrs. Donald Ketcheson and Miss Louise Phillips. The first class was in charge of Miss McCready of the Red Cross and eight other lessons were given by the local Instructors.

Under the leadership of Mr. A. D. Archibald, the Home Nursing classes were conducted very successfully last winter. Five afternoon and four evening classes with an enrollment of 69 were held for an average of two hours for each lesson. Instruction in the classes was given by five local women all graduate nurses. Examinations were given by local doctors and one by a dietician.

Mr. Hefkey thanked the officers and all those whose loyal support had made the year one of achievement for the Red Cross Society.

WRENCH IS FOUND IN RAKING RAVINE

Enough Evidence to Hold Preliminary Says Police

Toronto, Nov. 11.—(CP)— A mechanic's wrench, found by police raking the ravine where Ruth Taylor was killed and criminally assaulted, was under examination by fingerprint experts today as a possible clue in the case. The wrench had been lying under some leaves.

Detective heads refused to discuss the find, although it was believed at headquarters, that enough material had been gathered by officers since the discovery of Miss Taylor's battered body last Tuesday to warrant prosecuting with a preliminary hearing of the charge of murder against Harry O'Donnell, 26-year-old service station attendant.

Attacking the case with all the available knowledge of modern science, police on Saturday had Professor S. Boyd Thomson, Botanical Director of the University of Toronto, taking samples of loam and earth taken from the ravine and also from a vacant lot adjacent to the gas station, where O'Donnell was employed. It was understood the burrs and earth were being compared with burrs and earth, which had adhered to clothing the police had confiscated as evidence in their case.

Experts Confer

Professor Thomson later conferred with other scientists and medico-legal experts engaged in trying to solve the case from different angles.

Frank Regan, counsel for the accused man, barred statements, that two other women had been molested on the same night and in about the same place, where Ruth Taylor must have been accosted and dragged into the ravine, Mr. Regan said he had voluntary signed statements from both women, neither known to the other, and that both described a man "wholly unlike O'Donnell", as the man who molested them. Regan declared the real killer of Ruth Taylor still is at large.

A third woman, Mr. Regan claims witnessed the attack, on one of the women who escaped from the criminal, and she said she "would remember until her dying days the maniacal glare in his eyes" as he passed her.

ON THIS DAY

Thoughts were deep and feelings subdued as men and women gathered about the cenotaph to pay once more the tribute of memory, to the gallant dead—the benefactors of humanity, those who made the vicarious sacrifice of supreme precious elements in our civilization which make life worth living. There was solemn music as the Last Post was sounded and there came the prayers of the great Realm the people sang hymns of peculiar appeal to this day, and there were solemn words of the preacher, and underneath was the deep rhythmic undertone of humanity meditating in the presence of the thoughts of the departed ones, those who died young and who will forever remain young in the world's memory, though all others grow old.

Words cannot completely express the feelings of the veterans on Remembrance Day for language at its best is an incomplete expression of the depths of the soul. Through the souls of fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers, and sons and daughters of the fallen runs the sad memory of which through sorrow has enriched their lives, probably changed the whole course of their careers and has built them a shrine of memory in the inner depths of being. The young who knew not war can sympathetically realise the potent feelings which dominate the hearts of those who knew the Great War intimately as combatants or relatives of those who served.

The world is not war-free yet, though millions died in the cause which was thought to end war. It is this which has deepened the tragic tone of the day into sombre shadows lest the horizon burst forth with red glare of war once again. It is the past, the present and the future of the people think of in this hour. Only unending memory of Remembrance Day can end war's fearful control of the world.

"RIGHT TO DIE"

"The right to die" proclaimed by a number of persons is something so serious as to cause humanity to stop sharply and wonder. It is said that an unidentified British doctor has taken the lives of five incurables with their consent and that he has no regrets but doctors naturally are not by any means ready to approve of his example. Though realizing the strength of the impulse to prevent pain where pain reaps no reward but ultimate death, doctors hesitate in the presence of the mystery of life, for to doctors as to every human life is a mystery. Science has not made life any less a mystery for its origin is as deeply imbedded as it was on Creation's morning. Only the Creator knows.

So they hesitate to end life for life once taken is never to be recaptured. So doctors battle against the inevitable to save life if possible, at least to alleviate pain, but to take life, they hesitate. Life, the greatest thing in the world, is too precious to be ended at will, even to the incurable.

BRIDGING THE BOSPORUS

It may be inferred that Turkey is wishing to bring herself still more closely into association with the West and its ways by bridging the Bosporus—though another interpretation is possible. In any event, it was inevitable that hurrying humanity in the contracting planet would be insisting upon swifter passage between the continents that here are separated by only half the distance that Leander swam in his love for Hero. The Bosporus is described as a maritime inlet which has "no equal in the world for the depth of its bed, the limpidity of its waters and the beauty of its shores." A bridge may be so built, no doubt as not to take away even the last of these, though it would seem to impede the memories that have been traveling up and down these waters since the days of Jason and his fellow-argonauts.

The Balkan Peninsula has itself been called a "bridge for peoples and empires" moving sometimes in one and sometimes in another direction. The Persians tried to force their way over it a little down into the West and from it Alexander penetrated to the East. Over its narrow waters into which it thrusts its bridgehead, Arabs and Turks passed westward and the Romans and Crusaders eastward. Canals have cut in two continents joined from the foundations of the earth, and highways and railroads have tied distant oceans together. But the ancient land route over the Balkan Peninsula into Asia, especially via the straits of Asia Minor, "still holds a foremost place" and must to all appearance continue to "play its parts through all the years to come."

It is sentiment only that regrets the bridging of the strait above the Golden Horn, as it regrets the bar across our Golden Gate. One wonders what will happen to the "Lost Souls" the birds that fly unceasingly skimming the water at top speed back and forth up and down the Bosporus between the Sea of Marmora and the Black Sea, apparently never stopping anywhere. One of the local legends is that they are the souls of dead galley slaves who now suffer eternally an "unstay of motion where they had so often passed before in labor and pain. But if their flights are stopped, their places will be taken by the cars that fly to and fro across the narrow strait on whose shores the caravan began or ended their toilsome journeys. There can be but practical praise for this new planetary enterprise.—New York TIMES.

A MODERN DIRGE
Repeated by Request

Cold and stiff they found him with a peaceful look, though dead;
A case of Super Taxit, the Coroner's Jury said.
His estate and county tax had worried him full sore—
His personal and income tax then fretted him some more;
His auto tax and dog tax disturbed his mental ease—
Amusement tax, employment tax and sur-tax pullman fees
His gasoline and cigarette deposit box, tax on cheques he wrote—
Borrowed cash, and then they taxed his promissory note—
A road tax and a school tax made him sad and blue—
He had to take a stimulant and he found it was taxed too!
A clothing tax near stripped him, he paid on shells and bait—
Plus taxes on cigars and beer, and everything he ate;
But now at last, all overtaxed his soul has flown its lair—
Be it up or down, he's satisfied for he'll find no taxes there.

SCHOOLTEACHERS WE HAVE KNOWN WHO DID NOT SPARE THE ROD and ran no risk of spoiling the child from quite a collection in memory's picture gallery. Some were pretty and lovable, some were severe and rather frightful to the juvenile mind, but we vividly remember some of the lickings we received, good value for mischief well and truly done to the delight of our ability, by female teacher or male principal. Our memories recall the fact that male teachers did not put the fear in us as much as some female teachers are contacted in our journey from the ABC class to the Principal's room. All of which is by way of introduction to a cover page of a recent issue of Sat. Ev. Post showing a lady school teacher of the Sad Seventies or Eighties, or thereabouts, receiving a new boy pupil from the hands of a fon' young mother. The teacher is armed with a sizeable switch and looks as if she could use it with good effect. The picture was a work of art, a cartoon cleverly done, but it aroused the ire of an ex-school teacher, William Andrew McAndrew, who edits the "Educational Review" in a magazine called School and Society. Wrote William Andrew McAndrew with the red blush of anger mantling his manly cheek: "Norman Rockwell, erstwhile giver of delight, by his depiction of lovable and quaint rugged individualists, took the Evening Post's money to do this ulcerous thing" and so on far into the night, advising his readers to write to the Post about it. Seems to us that William Andrew McAndrew caught eagerly at the picture as a means of accumulative copy in his role of editor to schoolteacher readers. The same William Andrew McAndrew is a picturesque and interesting individual, with a mind of his own and a character and courage which refuses to quail even against heavy odds. It was William Andrew McAndrew who defied the loud-voiced Mayor of Chicago Big Bill Thompson in his campaign to revise the school histories of Chicago into a hymn of hate for Great Britain and especially King George. Big Bill's regime used up all the public money and the school teachers stopped eating at times—Big Bill went a step farther with William Andrew McAndrew, Superintendent of Chicago Schools, and put him on trial for insubordination. William Andrew McAndrew withstood the fire from Chicago and settled down in East Setauket, New York, "where the wicket cease from troubling and the weary are at rest"—sometimes.

Trenton Veterans Parade To Church for Service

Citizens' Band Accompanies Parade to And From The Church

Trenton, Nov. 11 (Special)—The annual Armistice Day services were held in the King Street Methodist Church yesterday and the Rev. A. E. Kinsley delivered a most appropriate address to the members of the Canadian Legion and the citizens and rank of the Royal Canadian Air Force, who attended in a body.

At ten-thirty in the forenoon the veterans wearing berets and medals met at the market square and the parade was formed by R.C.A.F. also formed to march to the King Street United Church, headed by the Trenton Citizens' Band.

Rev. A. E. Kinsley of the King Street United Church, in welcoming the veterans and representatives of the R.C.A.F. stated, that there were two central meetings in the Armistice Day celebration." There is our duty and desire to bring our united tribute to the heroism of those men, living or dead, who fought the nation's battle. Then there is the statement of our gratitude for the peace they won and our pledge to follow it. Inasmuch tomorrow is the eleventh month and the eleventh hour of eleven, we are to hold our service of remembrance, it is the fitting thing, this hour, to think of peace and the promise of it. The text is taken from the 6th chapter of Micah and speaks of the prophet's inspired vision of the plan of God for man. The minister selected four striking phrases from the prophet's vision. First, "The Mountain of the House of the Lord shall be exalted above the hills." That is to say, the key to peace and all that goes with it will be found through a spiritual interpretation of life and the meaning of life. Back, that the materialistic philosophy of our day can not only fix competition, rivalry and war.

Made For Something Better

The speaker stated his belief, that man had been made for something even better than the dream of the prophet and referred to a statement of an officer in conference forces of Canada who said: "The atmosphere of the church is so remote from the day of fear, unrest, that I have given up my associations with it."

It may be true, that the efforts of the church have done but little to bring about the day of God but it is neither wise nor fair to single out the church alone for having done that sort. The military power of the nations of the world have fought many battles in the wars to end war and make a world safe for democracy. Commerce, with all the advantage of organization and accumulated wealth, have done but little to bring security and the end of distress. If the church has failed it has been because it has failed to see that man is Spirit and the Spirit is God.

Second: "Many nations will come and say, let us go together to the mountain of the Lord." The fellowship of Faith and High Endeavour binds mind and men in a lasting brotherhood. For true brotherhood is the spiritual solution of problems cannot be bought, or brought about by the arce of arms, or found in the shallow pacts of pleasure, but when we can rise together into a true fellowship with the Christ of God there shall be a brotherhood that is real: there shall be one fold and one shepard."

Built Mighty Force

Third: "They shall beat their swords into ploughshares." The Rev. Edinson spoke of the organization even to the little hamlet, for the winning of the war. We built as mighty a force for good and when the job was done we threw the machinery into the factories and turned herole men out on the idle streets. He referred to a group of veterans in a recent parade bearing this sign: "We were heroes then and now we are bums" which, he said, was not a nice symbol, but surely symbolic of the let down to which we had sunken. We took a long holiday from those high motives which made us live, and pray for the victory of right. The prophet's third message to day was we shall work for the preservation of peace as constantly and as sacrifically as our soldiers worked for winning of it."

Premier King may shall sit under his vine and fig tree and none shall make them afraid."

This was interpreted as a promise of social justice and security when each man would be free to enjoy his little corner of God's great world and is to peace like this the prophet tells us—to set God at the heart of our lives and our world—to hit him reign in righteousness—then shall Peace be ours."

After the service the veterans and the air force members paraded again in the market square, where they were dismissed.

Tweed and District

Tweed — The annual United Church Young People's Rally of the North and Centre Hastings Presbytery was held in Tweed on the large number of young people from the centres in Tweed, Madoc, Stirling, Marmora, Actonvale, Eldorado, Hazard's and Springbrook. Services were held during the entire day, with a splendid attendance in the evening by hear Rev. Ralph Collins, returned missionary from Angola, West Africa.

The morning session opened with a worship service conducted by Miss Frances Harris of Hazard's Y.P.S., president of the district organization. Greetings to the visiting delegates were brought by Mr. Ernest Rowland, president of White Lake Y.P.S. The address at this session was delivered by Mr. Clarence Parmenter, B.A. of Northport who gave his "The Highlights of the Y. P.'s National Council of 1935" held at Whitby this year. The aims and objects of this movement are to grow into vital relationship with Jesus Christ, "Let to build a new world". "To build this new world", said the speaker, "the Christian youth must first of all build a new person, from the which, beginning will come a new home, a new church, a new community, a new nation, and ultimately, a new world".

A splendid address was given by Miss Bessie Gordon, B. A., president of Tweed Y.P.S., who spoke of the benefits derived from attendance at Oak Lake Leadership Training Camp held at Oak Lake during August.

The afternoon session began at two o'clock with a worship service conducted by the president of Eldorado Y.P.S. during which Miss A. Harvey rendered a solo "Building Day by Day." During the afternoon group discussions were conducted:

Christian Fellowship — Rev. S. Osborne, B.A. B.D.

Christian Missions — Mrs. V. Mack.

Christian Citizenship — Rev. C. Ferguson, B.A.

Christian Culture — Mrs. M. Burnside.

Supper was served by the ladies of White Lake.

The worship service for the evening session was conducted by Rev. Osborne who urged the Young People to "Fulfil as Your Opportunity".

Put on a Helmet of Peace, and Take the Spirit as Your Sword".

The nominating committee recommended the following officers for 1936:

Tweed—Miss F. Harris, Hazzard's, Pres'y; Treas.—Miss Mabel Latta, White Lake; Pianist—Miss Ruby Horne, Cor. Sec.—Mrs. [illegible]

Following the installation of officers Miss Gordon spoke about "A Winter Corner" in a pleasing manner.

"Our Church", said Rev. Ralph Collins in his address, "has a share in the great task to bring to Africa the knowledge of Jesus Christ as the Lord of life as found in Him. In many ways Africa is very old, but there is nothing more impressive about Africa than its youth.

"As one thinks in terms of modern civilization", continued the speaker, "of the rise of culture, no mean of recording their progress. There is a history for the people, of Africa", provided Mr. Collins, "but what happens there in after years depends on the measure in which Africa is taken care of by the Christian, which is the only sufficient guide for the future.

Several interesting and appealing stories were told of experiences among the native people of Africa.

In concluding Rev. Collins ended a poem by W.H.J. Myers entitled St. Paul:

"Christ! I am Christ! and let the name suffice you;
Ay, for me too He greatly hath sacrificed,
But, with no winking words. I would also give you;
Feel her no honour and no friend but Christ."

The invitation from Tweed Y.P.S. to hold the next rally in Tweed was unanimously accepted.

The November meeting of the W.M.S. of Tweed United Church held on Thursday afternoon was in charge of the study on missions, the events and characters having memorial in forming the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church in 1881 in the city of Hamilton. A special feature of the programme was a solo, "Sweeter as the Years Go Round" sung by Mrs. Ida Dafoe, one of the oldest members of the Society. (Several years ago Mr. and Mrs. Craig celebrated their Golden Wedding.) Mrs. Craig was for many years a member of Inglewood Church choir. Mrs. Geo. Graham acted as accompanist.

PEPPER AND SALT' RACKET IS SEEN

Four Women And Man Held After Man Found Dead

Montreal, Nov. 11 (CP)—Spurred by a suspicion Reginald Cornish, prominent insurance official and amateur sleuth found on a cross-ing house Wednesday, was the victim of knockout drops, Montreal police learned here to-day.

Four young women and a man were in gaol in court today on charges of theft from the person after the unnamed complainant told authorities he had been robbed of $60 and a valuable tie pin. The complainant said he had been suddenly overcome by drowsiness in a house in a side-street near the centre of the city and had awakened to find the money and tie pin gone.

Those charged are Blanche Forbin, 39, Cecile Dugal, 21, Jeanne Arpand, 18, Regina Arnaud, 22, and Joseph Kaspier, 22.

The unofficial version of racket is that hold and pretty girls are planted in middle-class night spots ready to pick up casual acquaintance with any man looking for feminine companionship. The men are induced to accompany the girls to a near-by rooming house in the neighborhood. Waking up next morning with their money gone, the men in most cases write it off to "experience."

In sentencing the men Judge Fitzpatrick condemned their cruelty and feathering the victim down to the cemetery and pray over the grave of your relatives and friends."

MAKING FRIENDS

I have been living here about three years and find it very hard to meet people and make friends. My husband travels and I cannot always make trips with him, and when he is out of town I am so lonesome and blue, that I feel as though I will have to go back to my home town. I wouldn't want to leave my husband, I also hate to let him know it — I set so lonesome and blue. I can see I am just being interest in my home, as I have no friends to come to see me.

I have a lovely apartment and I do want so much to be happy in this city, as I will have to make it my home. This is my husband's home town. Can you suggest some way of meeting people?

Reader.

I wonder if you take advantage of casual meetings with people that might develop into friendships. Since this is your husband's home town, you must have met the fatal line of some of his friends. Have you invited them to your lovely home, either for such a simple occasion as tea, or for luncheon or bridge? Once you play bridge expertly, you can't miss being invited to play. Or why not send for catalogs of courses offered in the metropolitan colleges (extension courses for which you may or may not need a degree), and meet people, in the courses, of the same interests as yours; and how about church affiliations. Churches in this Big City are teeming with meetings and clubs of many interests to strangers-in-the-city as you are.

Please let me urge you not to stay by yourself so much — this, in your case, is unhealthy inertia. Do some definite thinking about what interests you would like to develop, and then see how you can do it. Be a persistent hostess (or a wife even if you don't know the guests you invite). Attend a church and give generously of your time and service in the church activities. One social contact in a large city so quickly leads to others — if we will it that way. Your happiness and your husband's happiness and your happiness together depend on your being more with people. This city has a grand and hospitable heart — I know that, dear friend — so search out that heart by finding the artery-paths that lead to it. "There's gold in thar hills", if you are willing to go hunting for it. And the best of luck to you.

WEDDING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I am going to a wedding very soon and I would " ) to know a few things.

1. My boy friend's pal is to be married. Is it proper for me to buy a gift or is it up to my boy friend? (I also am invited).

2. The couple reside in a different state, and I am unable to meet them until that evening. To whom should I give the gift, and what should I say.

G.

1. Your boy-friend's gift should be sent separately from yours. Since you are invited to the wedding, you will probably wish to send a gift, and it should be sent "on your own".

2. Send your gift as soon as possible before the wedding, two weeks or ten days before. If you wish you may have it sent from the shop to which you buy it. Enclose your visiting-card or a plain white with your name and best-wishes message written on it, and send your gift to the bride-to-be at her home.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Etiquette

TO KEEP YOUNG AND FIT FOR LOVE—HAVE A HOBBY

Senator McAdoo's recent marriage is an answer to men and women who write in this column and ask if ten years difference in the ages of an engaged couple is too much.

The 75-year old Senator is marrying a girl of 26 declared that age is a state of mind, not one of years. Flying was his honeymoon with the former Doris Cross, he gave a few rules for keeping young:

You must have an ambition; something in which you are constantly interested.

You must get enough exercise.

Don't overload yourself with food.

dancing — I believe it was in the Ritz.

"Keep your mind young; old age is all in the mind."

Not long ago I saw the Senator dancing with I believe it was the Countess Balleroni — and he certainly danced with all the verve and vigor of a man of 40, and he proclaims he feels no older than that.

The secret of Senator McAdoo's youth prescription is to Live an object or ambition in which he is constantly interested.

All the creaming, steaming and massaging that the beauty parlor is capable of giving will not keep you young — if you have a vacant mind — a mind that is not a receiving place for distressing emotions.

Oklahoma Girls 'Kidnap' Dean, Take Him to Woods, Force Holiday

Chickasha, Okla., Nov. 11.—Dr. Howard Taylor, dean of the Oklahoma College for Women, was "kidnapped" before dawn today by four students clamoring for a holiday, and capitulated with a smile after being bound and gagged in the country.

"In view of the fact that I was presented with a big red apple with a green ribbon around it and was restored to my office with dignity, no disciplinary action is being considered," Dr. Taylor said.

"As a matter of fact, enjoyed the ride very much."

What the students wanted, and got, was a day's relief from books to observe the annual interclass contests between the freshmen and sophomores.

The four feminine "kidnappers", named by Dean Taylor as Maxine Hunter of Okarche, Margaret Nance of Tulsa, Kathryn Knisely of Isabel and Mary Gaylor Booth of Oklahoma City, hired the college official away from home on the pretext of attending a special freshman meeting.

Under pressure of the gag in a wooded spot near here, Dean Taylor refused to promise the holiday. He was returned to the campus, where about 400 students, most of whom had missed their 8:00-hour classes demonstrated for the holiday.

Smiling, the dean counted his experience just so much fun and can, called the day's classes.

"Once he was on the verge of escape," Miss Hunter said. "But he declared he didn't have the authority, and that he would have to have President Nash's O.K."

Miss Knisely took up the story: She we drove him back through the woods to the campus, where he was seized by the co-eds, climbed all over it, yelling, 'We want a holiday, but he still refused to sign, so we drove him off again, took him over to the president's house and talked to him.

Back at the oval a second time, the dean addressed the crowd of girls, in mock seriousness: "Friends, comrades, hoodlums, you are resorting to mob rule. I should say, 'Disperse, ye rebels!' But I won't."

Nevertheless they did disperse and went about their holiday.

AT THE BELLE

"Here Comes the Band"

Chases Your Blues Away, "The Informer" Rules Four Stars

Mirth and melody blend as Ted Lewis weaves magic melodies in his "Here Comes the Band", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical romance with the high-hatted master of syncopation, coming to the Belle this morrow and Wednesday matinee daily.

A dramatic story dealing with the reunions of an army band, a young composer, a stolen song and a musical lawsuit that restores it to him, the new picture is packed with lilting music and rollicking comedy. Through it runs the love story with Harry Stockwell, singing star of "As Thousands Cheer", and beautiful Virginia Bruce in the romantic leads.

Introduces Own Hits

"Headin' Home" is the principal song hit of the new picture, and figures in a lavish musical number, "You're My Thrill' is the big production number with Ted Lewis and his Spanky MacFarland, "Our Gang" comedian, working with bevies of beautiful dancing girls, introduces and does his own hits such as "Me and My Shadow", "When My Baby Smiles", "Wear a Hat With a Silver Lining" and "Tonight".

Virginia Bruce is gloriously beautiful and talented. Stockwell is heard in "Roll Along Prairie Moon" and "Headin' Home".

Lewis' famous directed the new picture, in which are many spectacular highlights and an hilarious "Amateur Night" in a broadcast station. Nat Pendleton and Ted Healy provide comedy, and Donald Cook, Addison Richards, Robert Glecker, May Beatty, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Robert McWade, Henry Kolker, Charles Lane and others of note are in the cast.

"The Informer" Thrilling

In "The Informer" from which the RKO-Radio's screen play was adapted Liam O'Flaherty, the novelist, created a truly amazing character. That character is Gypo Nolan, the primitive, Irish giant, who is portrayed by Victor McLaglen and whose titanic downfall is the theme.

Liam O'Flaherty has created out of Ireland's bloody revolution a quasi-fictional being who, stirred by primitive passions, has been removed exalted by illusions of grandeur, and haunted by retribution, provides for Victor McLaglen what that actor regards as the greatest role of his career.

The characterization has the virility of the greatest in "Hell Harbor Patrol," yet it is much broader in its scope. John Ford, because of the love element vivid, contributed in it, "The Informer" the second feature picture he has made from a book directed by John Ford, and the beautiful supporting cast are Margot Grahame, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Wallace Ford and Una O'Connor.

The Belle Latest News of the World will be exhibited on the same program.

Big Broadcast of 1936

Lavishly mounted, madcap comedy, studded with the outstanding stars recruited from every division of the amusement world, "The Big Broadcast of 1936" which opens a highly successful engagement at the Belle Tonight, can be classed as entertainment of the highest order in the comedy and amusement fields. A Disney Silly Symphony, Belle Latest News Flashes and an oddity complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Payoff"

A Stirring Newspaper Drama With Excellent Cast

What is heralded as another smashing newspaper drama, spiced with romance and considerable comedy, the First National production "The Payoff", has been booked as the feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre beginning Monday.

The story of George Bricker, for many years a newspaper writer, centres around Joe McCoy, an honest sports reporter, whom the gambling fraternity can neither bribe nor intimidate.

The sports writer is madly in love with his wife, a beautiful children, in whom he believes implicitly. He is not only blind to her faults but also to the love of one of his fellow newspaper women.

While Joe is on a trip he is double-crossed by his wife, who plots into the hands of the "big shot" gambler, giving him so many I.O.U.'s that the sports writer is forced to turn his column to protect her. He is fired and is practically down and out, when a jockey he had befriended tips him off to a race scandal.

He tells his former editor, and on the day of the big race, he scoops the town.

James Dunn plays the part of the sports writer, with Claire Dodd in the role of his wife and Patricia Ellis the other woman.

James Dunn, Claire Dodd and Patricia Ellis in a scene from the "Pay Off," fascinating newspaper story starting today at the Capitol Theatre.

Others include Alan Dinehart as the King of Gamblers, Joseph Greenan as the managing editor of Jimmy Dunn's paper, and Frankie Darro as the jockey.

The picture is filled with stirring scenes, including "shots" of practically every form of the major sports, including a prize ring fight, horse racing, football, and tennis.

"Millionaire" Murphy and "Monty" Callahan, two famous professional golfers, take part in the fistic encounters in the picture.

Robert Florey, directed the production from the screen play by George Bricker and Joel Sayre.

STEAMER IS RELEASED

Amherstburg, Ont., Nov. 11 — City of Cleveland, lit aground on the rocks of Lime Kiln Crossing Reef in the Detroit River for more than three weeks, was floated by tugs under her own steam today.

The huge side-wheeler with its cargo of automobiles and package freight, went aground in the fog last night after dropping passengers at the month of the Livingstone Channel which had been closed to navigation by the United States Coast Guard. The anchor failed to hold as the rapid current and strong current dragged the steamship downstream for a mile before it was aground opposite the village of Gordon.

IN MEMORIAM

McGUIRE—In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Bernard L. McGuire, who passed away on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1932.
Bernard I sit and think of you.
When I am all alone;
Memory is the only friend,
That can call you back to me.
The flowers I place upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But my love for you always beneath
Will never fade away.
—Sadly missed by Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers.

DARING AERONAUTS CLIMB 15 MILES

(one shed using pressure)

Before the announcement of the new record, Capt. Stevens asked to be put in communication with Dr. Orvil A. Sverdrup, director of the Research Laboratory of Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, to make sure some of the cosmic ray instruments, Capt. Stevens informed Dr. Swann, at New York, he had started the cosmic ray recorders at 11.58 a.m. C.S.T.

Capt. Stevens reported there were a number of cosmic ray bursts recorded. Frequency of the cosmic rays, he said, was 120 times greater than on the earth. Dr. Swann explained the bursts were transmutations of matter through the disintegration of atoms.

Capt. Stevens reported the conductivity of the air was increasing considerably as the balloon went up.

Take Off at 4.58 a.m.

Rapid City, S.D., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Explorer Twain, the world's largest balloon, took off at 8 a.m. (Mountain Standard Time), today on its long awaited journey into the stratosphere for scientific exploration.

Columbian Carbon Co. will fair perfect weather, the giant craft was successfully from the earth's level natural bowl, 11 miles south-west or here, about two hours behind the scheduled departure.

Rising approximately 600 feet a minute, the balloon, at the height of 500-foot rock wall of the flight base and then soared over the hills a mile south and east.

Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, pilot, thumped around in the gondola, when it appeared the balloon might not clear the rock wall at the rim of the bowl but the bag successfully topped the crest.

Capt. Anderson, accompanied by Captain Albert W. Stevens, commander of the expedition, expected to land about 3.45 p.m. C.S.T.

Quiet Air

The calm shape of the flight under they expected would hold to follow an almost straight eastward course with a landing possible in the vicinity of Sioux Falls, about 400 miles from here.

The big bag rose in almost quiet air after all night preparations. A light breeze which sprang up in the night caused some delay in inflation, but this was quickly corrected by a triple patch without loss of gas.

It was a perfect launch.

Captain Stevens said the fliers planned to rise to about 13,000 feet and remain there for 12 hours.

Scientific observations were the main purpose of the flight which was sponsored jointly by the National Geographic Society and the U.S. Army Air Corps. The fliers also hoped to reach a record altitude.

The big bag with 3,700,000 cubic feet capacity was inflated with slightly its seven ton burden about 78,000 feet or slightly more than 14 miles. Lieutenant Harry Chase directed the inflation.

PACT WILL NOT BE IN CONFLICT WITH TREATIES

eral election, be resumed at once.

Conference has already taken place in connection since that date, Mr. King said, with the result, that he was able to make this announcement on Armistice Day, "I think it is an agreement," he said, "that will honor those who have given their lives that a better world might result."

Deliberations Started Wednesday

Mr. King left Ottawa last Wednesday, Arriving in the United States capital Thursday noon he at once went into conference with his own trade Ministers and the staff of the Canadian Legation headed in the absence of a Canadian Minister, by Hume Wrong, Charge D'Affairs.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull hurried back from a holiday in North Carolina and met the Prime Minister Friday morning. That same afternoon Mr. King went to the White House and spent the night having long conversations during the evening and next morning.

The two chief executives conferred with their own trade Ministers Saturday afternoon and evening with the result late Saturday night Secretary Hull and Mr. King acted their initials to the draft agreement.

It was even earlier on the side of their little metal ball which faced the sun than on the "shady" side, Stevens took his ground crew via wireless.

The Russian sky-climbers, whose mark Stevens and Anderson reported they had equalled made their initial flight last year.

Washington, Nov. 11 (AP) — President Roosevelt revealed today his and Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada "have reached a definite agreement which will eliminate embargoes and increase enable (trade) restrictions, and thus work to the advantage" of both countries.

Commonwealth Armistice Day address their two neighbors Saturday he pledged that the United States "will avoid the ways of peace" but "must and will protect herself."

He cited trade barriers as causes of international unrest, and cited discussions with the Canadian Prime Minister as one result of them.

Self-Protection Only

"Under no circumstances," the President said of American policy, "will this policy of self-protection go beyond the bounds of self-protection.

"Aggression on the part of the United States is an impossibility insofar as the present administration and the people are concerned. Defence against aggression by others—adequate defence on land, on sea and in the air—is necessary for us, and the measure of that defence is also determined by the amount necessary to safeguard us from the aggression of others.

The more greatly they decrease their armaments, the more quickly can we and our neighbors decrease ours."

Eve Seek Ways of Peace

"The eyes of the whole world unite in the prayer that America will continue to seek the ways of peace, and by her example at home and abroad speed the return of good will among men.

The primary purpose of this nation is to maintain itself in a strife torn world, as I have said before, by example and not by force. We seek by no means to impose our will or our system of government upon other unwilling nations or peoples.

We are solely concerned with the preservation of our own democracy."

Before speaking, he and Mrs. Roosevelt laid wreaths on the tomb of the unknown soldiers there. There was a flourish of drums and bugles sounding "Taps."

GIANT SHRINKING JOHN AASEN

Science is mystified as to the cause of John Aasen, who is a circus giant, John Aasen, above, who is shrinking to normal size on a specially-built bed in a Los Angeles hospital. Rangers Play Smart Hockey With Kerr The Star

Sweeney Schriner, the young Calgarian who was last year's outstanding rookie, has started a drive for star rating that seems likely to spot him in the top flight even among the veterans this season.

The blond left winger turned in the outstanding goal-getting exhibition of the young National Hockey League season Saturday night, when he scored four times against Toronto Leafs to bring New York Americans a 5-5 tie with the Smythe men.

The overtime deadlock was the first of two over the week-end, New York Rangers and Red Wings playing the Detroit season with a 1-1 tie last night. In the three games played so far Chicago Black Hawks have won the only decision, a 3-1 victory over Americans Thursday night.

Talk of Schriner as a bidder for Charlie Conacher's shoes, a glittering honors is premature at this stage but Saturday he outscored the big Toronto right winger, who used to have such a lead evening himself with four markers.

The Primeau-Jackson-Conacher line was disorganized by Coach Conacher was in rare form. He picked his scoring combination together and gave Roy Worters no chance at all, when he drew his sights on the Amerk goal.

After breaking through a shaky Toronto defence in the 1st of the 3rd period and again in the second, Schriner made it even-money in the opening minutes, when they scored three goals following the first. Marty Barry, playing his 500th game, set up Gottselig's first goal with a pass from behind the Toronto net.

In the days that followed Janie had seen a good deal of Gregory, and she had had an increasingly good time. Mass—particularly handsome young men—had seldom tinkled her when Mildred was about. He said audacious, flattering things to her with a simple directness impossible either to acknowledge or resent; and he had an air of seeing to it wisely her sometimes with approving, regretful eyes. Gregory Stewart—handsome, confident, assured—was part of a world she had never known; as was the group of young people to whom he instantly introduced her the first morning on sight: Teddie Crail—eight, blonde, fantastic; but with a gift for playing the piano in moon-haunted fashion that was not without its charm. Little Miss Twin, a brown, nosey girl, whose odd long eyes peered pixie-like through a tangle of sun-colored hair. Arnold, affectionately newlywed, exuberant, noisy, scrapping two young married couples, shrewishly commonplace and awed by their surroundings. And Linda Sisters, a pretty, handsome girl with a vivid red mouth and beautiful smoke-grey eyes, scored of Gregory Stewart, who was so obviously aware of it and totally unconcerned. For the most part they were a gay and colorful little clique, laughing and shooting over their deck-sports by day, dancing in the salon at night. The young men immaculate in white linen, the girls lovely and alluring in their delicate sweaters. They spent a good deal of time mildly scanning and summing up the more conservative passengers—that indignant row of blankly-faced figures that lined the ship's rail.... Old forever fixed the ship's rail.... Old Mrs. Minnick, rheumatic and indignant. Mrs. Dresser, in an ill-fitting bustad satin blouse. Miss Fitch and Miss Somers, school-marms from Detroit. Mr. Fitch of the wheezing cough and low, protesting whine.

And, skinny Mrs. Kent, darting palely across her husband's head as he bent forever over a book, and Colonel Cramer, given to loud boasts of his exploits in foreign lands the while he beat a path from the ship's gymnasium and back again in pursuit of the figure of his youth. "Fighting the battle of Anno Domino, now!" Gregory Stewart had said. And Janie had laughed with the rest.

Not one of the group of young people had ever seen one another before embarking on this trip; yet, with the strange alchemy that pervades a ship at sea, they had formulated instant and intimate friendships. Their chatter was a jargon completely alien to Janie, who had been fascinated Janie....Places they had been, things they knew—such as the Chaubiru Club in London and the little cafes in Montparnasse..... "Hor d'oeuvers, my dear, and Veuve Cliquot.... Buttermilk pie and Medford rum sours....Cuties Inn and Planter's punch..... "This last from Teddie Crail, who was somewhat of a connoisseur in affairs of the palate..... All of it made a pleasant cacophony of sound, forever removed from the background the girl had always known: musty the girl had always known: musty rooms in a dingy room.... rain beating an interminable tattoo on the library window-pane, Ada Fritz' droning voice, her parchment-like hands, tirelessly stamping out cards....

The deck of the Santa Nina tilted gently up and down on a black and silver sea. Through the haze that shook and numbed had spread about her for the moment, Janie brought her senses back to a realization of her surroundings. Her hands, which had been clinched tightly about the satin-smooth surface of the ship's rail, relaxed slowly, slid downward. And suddenly aware that Gregory Stewart was still stood by her side, that his voice, the voice that had just told her this unbelievable thing, was still ringing in her ears, it all seemed part of an unreal, hateful dream.... An intimate, half-mocking challenging eyes, his confident, mocking smile ..

"I say, now." He was regarding her curiously with dim light, "you are a cool little thing, aren't you, Janie? You never let yourself get—shaken, do you?"

"What way?" Janie said, almost inaudibly. The bright light reflected from the boat-deck above cast an almost transparent glow over her small face.

Gregory Stewart blew a negligent ring of smoke, his eyes narrowing. "You're so sad, really," he said. "I admit it suits your type. But it also makes you a dull life—don't you know that?"

"I—" With a gesture childishly weary, the girl put up a hand, brushing the dark hair from her eyes. She had been seeing Mark's worried, kind face, hearing his anxious voice as he had said that this man beside her had just said, that Mildred had gotten herself into some foolish, serious difficulty. "I couldn't" Janis told herself fever-ishly. "Mildred wouldn't want me to be aware that people are talking! She knows how Mark would take anything like that—I'll simply have to make her understand!"

From the steerage deck just below her came the throbbing chords of an old guitar. Flayed by unseen hands—faint and hushed by pulsations of ocean and ship, violet and rose, pearl-powdered and silver, the sea shrieked away on all sides. The lights of the far-off Mexican coast, shone like glow worms through the haze. For a fearful, forgetful moment Janie leaned to the night—her troubled senses swimming dizzily with the arc of sky and sea. And in that moment young Gregory Stewart, his armed bent over her face, leaned persuasively downward .... laughing softly, confidently, as one laughs at a dark-skinned nearby, busily shaking dice with a small boy, beautifully sawy .....

"Cunning thing" Janie came slowly back to a realization that the man by her side had taken possession of her hands; that his arms had closed abruptly about her ... his face, eager face was close to her own .... Then, suddenly, he had kissed her—and something deep within the girl awoke to startled, furious life.

With a frantic, desperate movement she gave a quick lunge backward and the man swerved sideways against the rail. How dared he—oh, how dared he think she was like that—

Half sick with disgust, and not a little frightened, she turned and fled toward the companion way. Reaching the narrowed doorway leading to her cabin, she glanced instinctively back.

Young Mr. Stewart had disappeared from view but, with a quick flutter of her heart Janie was aware of two avid eyes regarding her from the shadow of the deck-house by the rail. Mrs. Frederick Overton Cramer, alone in her deck-chair under the stars, had awakened from her nap. She had been hunting blindly toward the long red-carpeted corridor that led to Room D, reaching with a sick lunge of despair that nothing but dumbness or death could prevent Mrs. Cramer from spreading this interesting bit of drama to an already enlightened ship.

When she reached her own stateroom and threw open the white-panelled door she was shaking all over and trying to blow the hair from her face.

Chapter 3

MILDRED

"But Mildred, honey, can't you see how it is?" Janie's blue eyes, regarding her sister-in-law, were filled with distress and concern. "You can't—you simply cannot stay a whole day to go on talking about you like this—saying those hideous, unkind things about me both—"

Mildred leaned negligently back on the couch; one white hand patting a cooling fan, and fighting, obviously, sleep. In the relentless bright light streaming from the ceiling her small head her blonde beauty was flawless. A long gray cotton negligee affected from her lap to the floor. With an hysterical movement she swung slowly erect, and rose languidly to her feet.

"Darling—" she said in her high, sweet voice. "I'm made awfully sorry to say it—but I'm just too sleepy to sit!"

She seated herself before the dressing-table, rumpling the pale gold of her hair with a gesture pleased forward motion; leaning anxiously forward to regard the shadowy reflection in the glass. "Honestly, dead!" she said; and frowned delicately again. "Simply paralyzed with sleep. How I'm ever going to scrapple into that gown over there and drag myself down to the lounge ..."

Her satisfied glances touched the fragile glory of evening gown that swung gently to and fro on a hanger by the door. Clinging and be chiffon, with a jaunty cocktail jacket of shimmering opalescent lace, it was the most seeming gold in her hair. Opalescent for the hosiery that she wore. The silver cross she had worn on the earlier in the evening hung limply over the back of a chair. "It's a bridge tournament; They're beginning at nine. I'm a fool, and darn it, I promised Mrs. Whitcomb she wouldn't have to look.

Janie felt her heart beginning to thump in her breast. Her pulses roared loudly in her ears. Mildred's voice was different—enough at times. Reason with her, and she refused to hear! Was a locked in claws. But Mildred in this mood was impossible, as Janie knew. "I've got to get it across to her!" the girl told herself feverishly. "It isn't this Mrs. Whiting she's dressing for, at all; it's that Cuban-the Don Felipe—that Mildred shall I do?"

Watching Janie looked unhappily about the luxurious cabin. Cream and gold, with touches of turquoise in the port-holes. Cream and coral chintz curtains repeating the soft rose of the rug. Blue lovers' knot blue lustre vase, vying with the blue of the Persian lamb throw the day slipped up and down beyond the port-holes. Twin single beds, delicately draped in flowered silk. Twin dressing tables, demure for flowered, showing identical oval mirrors, identical crystal vases and boxes. A small writing table, desk-like, on which Janie's own things, the vaguely conciliatory air of a child determined to distract from punishment. That's exactly what she's like," Janie thought. "A bad child. She knows perfectly well what I mean." Aloud she said: "Listen, Mildred, won't you do something for me? Come with me to that dance tonight; I'm really dying to go and you know how I hate going alone—"

"Darling!" Faintly regretful, Mildred's answering smile. "I've told you there's a bridge tournament in the Lounge. I'm playing the Carmichaels and the Deanes—"

"And that Don Felipe Ferrerel" Janie blurted it out bitterly. And watched the child-like expression of her sister-in-law's face retreat behind a locked mask of dislike. "I'm sorry, Mil," she said hastily. "But that's exactly what I've been talking about. That Don Felipe—that Cuban—I detest him. He's slinky and furtive and you don't know one single thing about him except that he's rich—"

"Except—" Mildred interrupted evenly, "that he also happens to be one of the most influential men in Cuba. You don't know what you're talking about, my dear. I find Don Felipe entirely delightful. He's interesting, he's cultured, he's been everywhere, he knows everyone. I'm simply flattered to death" she concluded with reproachfully wide-dread eyes, "that he notices me at all. Listen, Janie!" She crossed the room excitedly, to stand before the small figure slumped on the edge of the bed. "When we get to Havana Don Felipe's promised to give a party for me. At his club! More crabs and those delicious Daquaries—you know, the sort Mark talked about!"

Mildred slipped out of the folds of her dressing-gown, reaching for the amber chiffon frock. "And if that doesn't make all the cats on this ship furious, I don't know what will. Being properly introduced means a lot in a place like Havana, Janie."

"But, Mildred" Janie straightened up on the bed. "We are being properly introduced in Havana! Have you forgotten—Mark gave you a letter to that friend of his—what was his name, anyway? Someone who owns a big sugar plantation. You put the letter in your white kid bag."

"Did I indeed?" Mildred's glance and shrug were equally expressive. "Well, I really should have put it in the sea, if you ask me. If you think" she continued benefit, "that I have the remotest intention of presenting any such letter to any friend of Mark's you're wrong! Can you just imagine the sort of person it might be! Some pasty stuffy old man in a dirty white suit and a vile smelling cigar, who'd insist on our going on a tour of his stupid sugar plantation! Ugh. What I think of plantations and business men and sightseeing!" She broke off, her eyes dreamily smiling. "I wonder why it is," she asked irrelevantly, "that American business men just can't learn how to talk to women? It takes the Latin, if you ask me. They make you feel like a bit of fragile porcelain—not like something to park on a shelf until called for," she concluded viciously.

Pyromaniac Inmate is Believed to Have Caused Fire Which Burned Five

Victorian Etude Guards Rushing Back to Their Cells

DAMAGE IS $100,000

Acts Put on by Inmates Ludicrous Had it Not Been Pitiful

Montreal, Nov. 17 —(CP)—Faced with the almost hopeless task of discovering the cause of the fire which razed through a wing of the St. Jean de Dieu Mental Hospital, just east of here Saturday night, causing death of five inmates and property damage estimated at $100,000, firemen poked through the smouldering ruins of the building today.

Cause of the conflagration will probably never be discovered, officials of the hospital, which housed nearly 4,000 patients, doctors, nurses and guards said was the largest of its kind in Canada, stated. It was believed by firemen, however, a pyromaniac inmate had started the fire.

Four violently insane inmates were burned to death, when they sloshed their guards and crept back to their cells in the blazing building, not knowing it would be their last act. Another inmate died of heart failure brought on by shock.

The shrill shouts and gibbering of an insane patient, frightened by the unusual sight of smoke and flames creeping along the ceiling of his cell, probably prevented one of the greatest fire disasters in Canadian history.

Patients Removed

Dashing to the cell to quiet the patient, guards were confronted by a wall of thick smoke. Close to 180 patients in the hospital wing were threatened with death.

The patients were quickly removed from the burning building, some of them struggling against their guards and attempting to dash back to their cells. Twenty-four were taken to the criminal insane wing of the Montreal jail in a large prison van. All became so violent they had to be handcuffed. Twenty-one more were removed to another nearby institution and the remainder were placed in vacant cells in other wings of the St. Jean De Dieu Hospital.

The dead are:—

Adelard Theriault, 36, Armand Bienvenue, 32, Napoleon Demers, 46 and Wilfrid Martin, 76, all of Montreal; and Joseph Joby, 42, of St. Augustin De Sorel, Que. Their bodies were taken to the morgue for inquest Tuesday.

Five Firemen Hurt

Fear for the safety of three other inmates, believed to have dashed back to their cells with their companions, were dissipated, when the men were located wandering in the vicinity and put into other cells. Officials of the hospital announced today there were none missing.

Five firemen suffered slight cuts and bruises and a few attendants were treated for superficial injuries received handling violent patients. None were seriously injured.

Fire broke out at 9 p.m., with most of the patients asleep, and was not under control until five hours later.

One panicky old man in a section not touched by fire started to give a fair imitation of a soft shoe dance to entertain spectators. He clapped an old French jig, clicking his heels together in the air as he bowed. The show ended, when a newspaperman shouted, "Bravo", however. The man dodged his window down, insulted.

A youth was brought struggling from the burning building in the arms of five husky firemen. The boy, who looked like a mummy in any one of the firefighters, put up a terrific battle in the illusion he was being carried away from the only home he knew.

Inmates stood at their cell windows, gibbering and laughing crazily. One man sat like an Egyptian mummy on a chair he apparently thought was his throne. Another his face twisted in Satanic glee, attempted a tap dance that would have been ludicrous had it not been pitiful.

CABINET MEETING TO HEAR DECISION OF TRADE TALKS

Premier King Hurries to Ottawa to Discuss Pact

BASIS IS REACHED

Mr. King Will Resume His Holiday Probably Wednesday

Ottawa, Nov. 11 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King gathered his Cabinet colleagues about the Council table this morning for what was generally thought to be a discussion of the basic details of a proposed reciprocal Trade Treaty with United States.

Returning unexpectedly last night from Bermuda where he had gone in the course of a vacation trip he planned to spend on the Atlantic Coast of one of the Southern States, Mr. King and his conversations with President Roosevelt had prompted him to break his holiday and return to Ottawa before Armistice Day, "substance of those conversations."

Mr. King's intention today was to summon the Cabinet Council so that his colleagues might take part in the Armistice Day ceremonies on Parliament Hill, after which the session will be resumed. Tomorrow or Wednesday he proposes to leave again to take the rest he had promised himself in the warmer latitudes of the United States. He will probably not pass through Washington, but will proceed further South, he may call there again before his holiday is over.

Secrecy Maintained

Complete secrecy has been maintained with regard to the details of negotiations which have been going forward in Washington for the past week between Canadian and United States officials, though it is possible Mr. King will make some disclosure when he has consulted with his colleagues.

In view of the hopeful and optimistic utterances of Trade and State officials in Washington, and the joint statement of President Roosevelt and Mr. King in Washington Saturday, Mr. King's decision to interrupt his holiday for a quick return to Ottawa has given rise to the belief negotiations have reached the stage where actual drafting of the Treaty may be started.

Dr. O. D. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, who went to Washington with the Prime Minister, remained there for over days longer. Hume Wrong, Charge D'Affaires at the Canadian Legation, has been called upon to bear the brunt of duties attached to the office of Canadian Minister to United States since the resignation of Major W. D. Herridge.

Had Long Talks

Two of the Canadian Trade experts, now in Washington, Dr. H. B. McKinnon and L. D. Wigle, returned with Mr. King. They will return to Washington tomorrow or Wednesday.

In addition to spending a night as guest of President Roosevelt in the White House, Mr. King slept in the famous Lincoln bedchamber—the room in which Lincoln signed the proclamation ending slavery—Mr. King had long discussions with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who is sponsor of the United States' program to have the Trade Treaties signed and 31 wounded.

These casualties included one Italian officer killed and four wounded. Native troops suffered killed and six wounded and 33 Eritrean askari killed and 75 wounded, although it said they were unable to estimate the Ethiopian losses.

The first serious Ethiopian opposition now seemed likely to be encountered at Amba Alagi, 80 miles south of Makale.

MISSES DEATH BY INCHES IN ROCKIE S

Only very skilful piloting and a modicum of good luck saved the lives of four passengers and three airmen when a Trans-Canada Airlines tri-motored Lockheed Electra had to make a forced landing in the dark near Nelson, B. C. On its way from Billings, Montana, to Spokane on scheduled service, the aeroplane ran into a severe snowstorm and was blown off its course when the radio beacon failed. Pilot Frank C. Judd, finding himself running short of gas in the darkness, turned on his searchlight and came down on a narrow rock-bordered field and skilfully landed the aeroplane with the wheels retracted so that it would not turn over or run too far after touching the ground.

ANTELOPES AGAIN ROAM ALBERT A FOOTHILLS

The Pronged Horn Antelope

Almost vanished 30 years ago, pronged-horned antelopes are now roaming the Alberta foothills in such numbers as to cause alarm concerning food supply of cattle and sheep. Antelopes have been protected against hunters since 1918, when, in addition, the animals can be shot only on occupied fenced lands with the consent of the owner. Fines of $50 are imposed for the good eating which accounted for their extensive measures taken. Indians were killing them wholesale.

FIFTY MAROONED ON JAGGED ROCKS

Fleet of Rescue Vessels Brave Perils of Storm

Manila, P.I., Nov. 11—(AP)—A small fleet of rescue vessels braved the perils of notoriously dangerous San Bernardino Straits today in an attempt to rescue passengers and crew of the shipwrecked British freighter Silverland, who were marooned on a rock.

Fifty or more persons were reported aboard the freighter when it broke in two on San Bernardino Island, off the southern tip of Luzon Island.

The Governor Taft, an inter-island steamer, reported 30 persons were on the rock. Others were reported aboard the forward part of the ship.

The rock to which the survivors escaped was turned into a prison by the powerful current, which rages through the strait, rip tides, heavy swells and high winds.

Tides Turn Back

The tides repeatedly turned back small boats from at least three steamers, when they attempted to reach the marooned party.

"Winds and seas increasing," Capt. Ian Brad, of the United States Steamship Company's freighter New York, wirelessed last night rail. "Doubtful if rescue can take place until daylight will try if weather permits.

"Crew on board and appears safe. Understand Tug Travator coming. Any life boat with motor would help a great deal."

The Governor Taft and the Japanese freighter Chikugo Maru, whose boats also failed in attempts to reach the rock, asked that motorized life boats be sent out.

The Steamer Tana was also standing by and the navy sent the Destroyer Ferry from Manila. The Ferry was due at the scene Tuesday.

Most Surplus Cattle Are Now Going to U. S. Marshall Says

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—(CP)—Hon. Duncan Marshall, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said today Acting Premier Hanson would head the Province's delegation to the Dominion-Provincial Conference called by Prime Minister King for December ninth.

Mr. Marshall said other members of the delegation would be Attorney General Roebuck, Welfare Minister Croll and himself.

The Agriculture Minister, here for the opening today of Ontario Cattlemen Winter Fair, said anything Mr. King has been able to do in Reciprocal Trade Treaty negotiations "in reducing duty on Ontario and Canadian farm products going into the United States will be all to the good.

"Particularly," he added, "will that apply to cattle because now Ontario is supplying most of her surplus cattle in the United States and any reduction in duties against it will just add that much to the price per pound of Ontario cattle".

B. HAUPTMANN ENTERS APPEAL

Asks The Supreme Court Through Solicitor For New Trial

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann appealed to the United States Supreme Court today to save him from the electric chair for the murder and kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

A 22-page petition filed by Rehearl Somerville, Hauptmann's counsel, asked a new trial on the grounds that a German carpenter had been convicted after a trial which resembled a "circus."

Somerville's petition contended that Hauptmann's constitutional rights have been violated in the atmosphere packed trial at Flemington, New Jersey.

Supreme Court attaches said the high Justice Stone would announce December 23 whether they would review his conviction. That would give Hauptmann another day of tidings or mournful news for a condemned man.

If a review were granted, attorneys said, arguments probably would be heard in February or March and a final decision could be expected a few months thereafter.

Some times, however, criminal cases are decided in months, not a decision. Rosecrans said today he would not oppose that action.

Representative Coffee of Nebraska Asks For Limitations

U. S. CATTLE INDUSTRY

Nebraskan's Reaction to Canadian Reciprocal Trade Pact Voiced

Coffee said the White House Coffee said he was afraid the treaty which the President and Prime Minister Mackenzie King agreed upon last week would provide a reduction in the cattle tariff but with quota limitations it would not be unsatisfactory to the United States cattle industry.

Volume of Cattle Trade

"The quotas," Coffee said, "would operate to prevent cattle coming in in such numbers as to disrupt our market and in the same time the general benefits of the reciprocal agreement with Canada should provide an increased market for our cattle in our own country and should thus be of great work out all right".

Details of the agreement may be announced before the end of this week, possibly in connection with the signing ceremony.

Secretary Hull is expected to sign the treaty for the United States.

It will be operative as far as the United States is concerned as soon as Mr. Roosevelt approves it.

Asked at his press conference today to comment on reports that some Florida pineapple growers were apprehensive over the possible severity of the 1935 Reciprocal Trade Act with Canada, Secretary Hull said the State Department was not looking any shoot the fact a constitutionality. It gives the President power to put Reciprocal treaties without the necessity of obtaining Senate ratification, which is required for all other treaties of a non-commercial nature.

Sky Dark Blue Tinged With Purple Pilot of Stratosphere Balloon States

(By Captain Orvil A. Anderson, Pilot of the Stratosphere Balloon, Explorer II)

(Written for the Associated Press)

(Copyright, 1935, by the Assn. Press)

Detroit, Nov. 12 (AP)—Our successful third stratosphere balloon flight sponsored by the United States army and the National Geographic Society, as far as Captain W. Stevens and I were concerned, was a joy ride in every way.

The Explorer II was fine but the waiting for satisfactory weather was tiresome.

We went up to 72,000 feet and could have gone 5,000 feet higher for safety. We experienced no discomfort although temperatures outside the gondola fell to 60 degrees below zero.

Slowed Rate of Ascent

We were not able to get off until about 7 a.m. Monday cutting two hours off our flight. That made it mandatory that we eliminate the intermediate stop at 53,000 feet and that we go instead straight to the top, which we did.

Clearing the rim of the bowl which we filled up about 10 feet was the toughest part of our flight. After reaching an altitude of about 15,000 feet, I found that our rate of climb was that Capt. Stevens could ring the instruments.

We found that what instruments were not already in operation, including our radio, Capt. Stevens kept an eye on all the instruments while I watched navigation, trying to maintain an ascent of 400 feet a minute.

Reached 72,000 Feet

We reached 72,000 feet four hours after our take-off. As this was the approximate height desired I stopped the ballast and maintained that altitude for an hour and 40 minutes, starting down at 12:20 p.m.

I attempted to pick out stars in the heavens, but was unable to see any. The moon was not out yet. The sky was dark blue tinged with purple.

Beneath us, nearly 14 miles away the earth lost much of its detail and the horizon was an indistinct line. Railroads and highways were scarcely visible. Only rivers, towns and small checker board design of farms could be seen.

The instruments were all working perfectly. The balloon functioned properly and everything was under control.

Instructors and ground and model training planes will be furnished by the Ministry of Air which will also bear the expenses of the new air force.

Rome, Nov. 12 (CP)—The comparatively friendly attitude toward Great Britain displayed in the Italian press since the last interview between Premier Mussolini and Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador at Rome, a week ago, reached a new height of warmth today.

Woman to Enjoy Birthday Deeded To Her by Robert Louis Stevenson

New York, Nov. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Bourke Cochran will put on her best bib and tucker and dine at the dinner tomorrow in celebration of her birthday—the birthday Robert Louis Stevenson deeded to her.

Forty-four years ago Mrs. Cockran then a little girl living in Samoa, complained to neighbor Stevenson that she never had a birthday like other children because she had been born on Christmas Day.

The author drew up a deed which declared that whereas little Miss Isle had been "born, out of all reasons," on Christmas Day" and whereas she had "no further use for a birthday," he transferred to her his "rights and privileges in the twenty-fifth day of December, formerly my Birthday."

The birthday would go "to the President of the United States, he said, should she fail to "enjoy the same in her customary manner, by the sporting of fine raiment, the eating of rich meats and receipt of gifts, compliments and copies of verse, according to the manner of our ancestors."

Although lost for over one day and part of a night in the rugged hill country of the Long Lake district north of Tweed this week when he became separated from his two hunting companions, James W. Nelson, of St. Thomas, managed to get his deer and, following his companions, find his way back to camp and then returned for the animal next day. The deer which was shot over three miles from camp was badly scrubbed after being dragged for that distance by hand.

The animal was exhibited in the city last evening during the brief stay of the party here en route to their home.

Separated during the morning, Mr. Nelson wandered throughout the day. About a late evening he was also hampered by dark clouds which blotted out the sun. He finally reached the camp at dusk, however, and was reported through the hunters being in one of the best districts for small deer in the country and guided by the occasional shots of the search party below hunters.

POLICE COURT IN NEW DRESS

Appearance of Rooms Greatly Improved By Fresh Paint and New Floor

It's almost a privilege to appear in the newly decorated Belleville Police Court rooms nowadays. Greatly decorated in three tone colors the city court rooms were in use today for the first time in three weeks. During the period of renovations, which were completed late, the walls and ceilings washed and calcimined white while the radiators were painted a dark mason color with the baseboards being brown, as are the railings and the magistrate's desk. Also the lighting and redecorating of the police court rooms was done under the direction of Alderman Ward Marshall, chairman of market and city property. The result spells a bright cheery atmosphere, much more inviting than the old dingy, dismal police court rooms prior to their renovating. Magistrate Ballard, Crown Attorney, R. D. Hennessy, K.C. Chief Kidd and attending constables all commended the improvement during the progress of the renovations.

"These rooms are a credit to the city and to the council," he said. In order to protect the newly painted walls, there will be no standing around the walls will have to be kept clear, it was intimated by Magistrate Butler prior to the opening of court today.

Both the press table in the court room received attention, much to the satisfaction of the members of the fourth estate. During today's proceedings there was no apparent need of more chairs or benches for spectators, although the fact that seven in the rooms enables all present to observe more clearly the proceedings.

POLICE COURT

Two local residents charged with intoxication figured quite well in the newly decorated Belleville Police Court rooms this morning when Crown Attorney H. Dennison, K.C., offered no evidence against them and they were discharged from custody by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C.

William Wilson, 19-year-old Warkworth youth, pleaded guilty to the theft of a pair of harness from Edgar Lane, Sidney. Wilson's father appeared in his behalf and after hearing the father's story, His Worship suspended sentence for a period of one year, providing, however, the youth refrains from driving a motor car for the same period.

Geoffrey Denlie, Prince Edward County, was arrested locally on a charge of molesting peaceful motorists and his case adjourned for a week, bail being accepted.

Grant Potter, 28-year-old Stirling man pleaded guilty to driving a motor car while intoxicated. The circumstances of the case, he was in jail, payment of the costs and also restitution in the matter of damages done to a car, the complaint of which was preferred by the court. Potter, according to Constable Eggleton of Stirling who arrested him, was driving his automobile through Stirling yesterday and collided with a horse-drawn vehicle while intoxicated. The horse, the property of the wagon were fortunately uninjured but the vehicle struck by Potter damaged, thus necessitating the restitution clause in the imposed sentence.

Walter Maracle and Raymond Maracle, Indian residents of the Tyendinaga Reserve, appeared on charges of assault laid by each other. Walter charged that Raymond attacked him while Raymond laid a counter charge. Both charges laid against the boys' father, Joseph Maracle, were dismissed on his pleading that the parent, while the brothers were both found guilty of fighting, they were bound over to keep the peace for a period of one year. Damages to the clothing thus consumed was made by all three witnesses to appear.

A juvenile case followed the regular court and resulted in a fourteen-year-old youth being handed into the custody of the Children's Aid Society. The boy was charged with the theft of a gold watch. The domestic cases terminated the court. His Worship endeavouring to amicably reconcile the parties concerned.

Ceremonies Include Solemn Observance of 2 Minute Silence

LARGE ATTENDANCE

The grimmer overtones of war and memories of hardship and suffering during the last great conflict were sobered last evening for returned war veterans of the 39th Battalion at their annual Armistice Night At Home and entertainment held in Memorial Hall. As the day, Monday, was marked by the largest turnout of citizens and returned men on record to do homage to the memories of the departed dead, so also was last evening's special evening one of the largest attendance.

Vanderwater stressed the need for continued unity among veterans comprising the United War Veterans Association under whose auspices the evening was held.

Hospitalization for the disabled men, who had served their country overseas was only one of the benefits which would accrue through united and more solid co-operation of all.

Observe Two Minutes' Silence

Solemn and most impressive was the observance of the two minutes' silence for the honored dead following the brief address of the chairman.

As the lights of the building slowly flickered on, the hall was in repute while, surrounded by the flag and appropriate decorations, filled the decorations, outlined in silhouette and bearing the significant lettering "R.I.P.," was dimly lighted by one or light from a concealed spot light. At the termination of the two minutes' silence, the massed voices of the audience, under the direction, led joined in the age-old hymn "Nearer My God to Thee". Last Post was sounded by Bugler Sergt. Finden ended the observance of the remembrance rites.

Individual entertainers, including Sergt. Major Wilmott of the R.C.A.F. Camp, Trenton; Petty Officer, Jack Richens, Clare Patterson, Alderman Thomas, K.C., contributed excellent entertainment which had as its object effort the evening musicians, dialogues, given by Bill Hastings and Jack Hall of Toronto, professional entertainers have filled the season.

HYDRO WIPES OFF DEBENTURE DEBT

Belleville System Finds It-self in Enviable Position

Belleville Hydro Electric System is entirely free of its debenture debt the Commission having voted to pay off the outstanding debentures amounting to some $4,000. The wiping out of the debt will mean a large saving in interest.

The local distributing system was established in 1922 from the Ontario Hydro Commission and taken over by the first city commissioners at the beginning of the year 1930. The debentures issued for the purchase price totalled $178,000. Not only have these been retired within the past five years but there has been large additions in rates and replacements and improvements of the system.

PLEA MADE FOR RETURNED SOLDIER BY MAJOR BELFORD

Speaks at Rotary Club on Remembrance Day

NEED SYMPATHY

Remembrance Day was fittingly observed by the Belleville Rotary Club, the great speaker being Major Belford of Toronto, who served in the Great War with two of his sons, one of whom was killed in action. Major Belford, who was introduced to the club by Rotarian Fred Douglas, also a veteran of the Great War, while Rotary appreciation was expressed by Rotarian Archie Cameron.

Major Belford, a returned soldier, weakened and disillusioned by the war, an invalid until the peaceful business by his training during the war, was made by his speaker. Four years of training to fit into the machinery of war, training to lose some limbs and blindness and become merely a cog of the great war machine, unfitted for civil industry upon returning home, while the lad who had remained at home had used the time to prepare himself for lucrative business man. Hence the returned soldier with no position to compete with the stay-at-home and in consequence a social misfit as of no account, a man who in seventeen years had failed to find himself. Major Belford, who is unique, being a men who had not been wounded, but who had suffered shell shock, was injured in the war, came home twenty years ago and then went through the strain and hardship of war had prematurely aged them.

Should Have Sympathy.

Returned men, even after seventeen years of peace should receive every sympathy and assistance, said the speaker.

College professors and even ministers of the gospel were teaching that Christianity should be discarded peace, which was a classed peace, which was harmful, declared Major Belford. Pressure was on colleges, as a consequence of teaching such example by professors, to discard the Bible and confining themselves not to participate in war. Such men were unpatriotic. While against war and believing that Christianity and all foreign entanglements the speaker said that the Empire was in danger or the home was in danger, that the British people the spirit of 1914 would rise to the call to the Public and High Schools in Trenton and worked his way through the various grades until he became a classed conductor, later graduating to the position of yard master and finally, When the C.N.R. took over this railway, Mr. Vandervoort continued in the service and also was retained, when the Canadian National Railway amalgamation was effected.
